NO SENTIMENT FOR JOHNSON

The Cleveland Mayor Won't Get Much Comfort Down in Montgomery.

THE FRIENDS OF ZIMMERMAN

Fear That an Attempt Will Be Made to Steal the Convention.

DEMOCRATS MUCH WORRIED

Columbus, Aug. 15.—(Special)—Former Representative Chapman, of Montgomery county, and who is now the candidate of the party for state senator in the Montgomery-Preble district, was in the city last evening. In speaking of the situation in his county, he said:

"We are having no exciting times in Montgomery county politics now that we did in former days, when the Dowling and anti-Dowlingites engaged in their annual contest for supremacy in that county. Dowling won year after year in those contests, and it was not until after Tom Johnson began to show his hand in the politics of the state that a decision was given against Dowling, which, temporarily, at least, has put him out of the business.

"So far as I have been able to discover, there is no sentiment among the Democrats down our way for Johnson for governor. Geographically their sympathies ought to be with Zimmerman, and, I believe are, but, of course, no one can tell what a Democratic convention will do. The unexpected happens oftener than the expected."

Much interest centers in the outcome of the Montgomery county convention in so far as it concerns Johnson and Zimmerman, as to which will secure the assurance of its support in the state convention.

Zimmerman's friends are suspicious that Johnson's tactics of putting up contesting delegations in counties of sufficient importance, where he is unable to control the situation, means that he will attempt to "steal" the convention outright when it meets it this city a week from next Wednesday.

ZIMMERMAN'S FRIENDS ARE VERY ANXIOUS

The Springfield Man Credited With a Scheme to Put Johnson In the Hole.

Columbus, Aug. 15.—The announcement that Tom L. Johnson is boosting the candidacy of John W. Bookwalter for the United States senate, and that all the power of his machine in Ohio will be exerted to that end, has caused the friends of John L. Zimmerman to look for some plan to block the Johnson game.

The one scheme that is receiving the most attention is for the backers of Zimmerman to assist in the endorsement of John J. Lentz for the senate. On first blush this would seem to be an impossible thing, but when it is understood that the Zimmerman people in Franklin county at least have consented that Lentz shall head the delegation to the state convention, the arrangement is not so improbable.

Such an arrangement, if agreed to, would put Mr. Johnson in the hole. He could not go back on Lentz who has been one of his closest political friends.

AT WORK ON VINE STREET

The Contractors for C. A. Smith Start Work on Northside Line.

C. A. Smith, who has franchises for street railway lines both to the East End and the northside, intends to push both lines to completion simultaneously.

Yesterday a force of men was started excavating and laying track on Vine street for the northside branch of the line, which will furnish rapid transit facilities for a portion of the city badly in need of such a convenience.

CHEAPER NATURAL GAS FOR THE OHIO VALLEY

A Virginia Company Proposes to Compete With Companies Now Supplying Fuel.

Wheeling, August 15.—The announcement that the Virginia Oil & Gas company, with backing to the extent of a million or more, will apply to the Ohio county commissioners and city councils for franchises to give Wheeling and surrounding towns on each side of the river competitive natural gas and at rates lower than those charged by the Wheeling and West Virginia companies has been received with great pleasure, both by domestic and manufacturing consumers.

The company has developed a great natural gas territory almost at the doors of the city in Marshall county and across the line in Pennsylvania, and should by all means be given the franchises which it is asking. Competition in gas would bring immeasurable results to the people, especially to manufacturers. In some quarters it is declared that the natural gas company of West Virginia has an exclusive franchise in the domestic field, but the Virginia people declare the conditions of the grant have been repeatedly broken, and that it will not hold water for a minute if tested in the courts. If they get the franchise they are willing and anxious to make the legal test.

INFIRMARY INMATE WHO HAS PROPERTY

Directors Will Seek to Get the Income to Pay For His Support.

Lisbon, Agust 15.—(Special)—John Duncan, of Wellsville, an insane inmate of the county infirmary, has been represented to be the owner of property in Wellsville and the infirmary directors are now investigating with the intention of applying to his support any income that may arise from the property.

Duncan was received at the infirmary last spring from the Massillon asylum. About 10 years ago he was sent to an asylum at Columbus, whence he was transferred to Massillon.

SALINEVILLE BOYS ARE HEAVYWEIGHTS

The Mining Town Ball Team Expected to Put Up a Good Game Today.

The Salineville base ball team arrived on the noon train and every member looked in tip top shape for the game to be payed at West End park this afternoon. The average weight of the visitors is nearly 165 pounds and if they are half so heavy in fielding and with the stick the locals will have one of the hardest tussels of the season.

Manager Reark announces that his team is possibly in the best condition it has been in for weeks and he feels confident that it will add one more scalp to the big belt.

GOOD FOR 100 BARRELS

A Knoxville Field Oil Well is Most Promising—Harrison Rinehart in Luck.

The oil well drilled in Thursday on Harrison Rinehart's farm in the Knoxville field, is thought to be good for 100 barrels a day and is one of the biggest producers found in that field in the recent past. The well was shot with nitro-glycerine with the best of results. Oil spouted up through the derrick to a heighth of 100 feet and the drillers experienced some difficulty in controlling the flow.

Mr. Rinehart, the owner of the property, leased to Marks & Co., of Pittsburg. The success of their first well will decide them to attempt several more in the same locality.

Fatal Collision of Freights.

Philadelphia, August 15.—(Special)—Two trainmen were killed and three were badly injured by the collision of two freight trains near this city. The collision was due to heavy fog, the engineers being unable to penetrate it.

THE RETURNS COMING IN

ALL IN BY NEXT MONDAY

The Different Propositions On Points Affecting Potters' Wage Scale.

FINAL MEETINGS OF LOCALS

The result of the referendum vote of the National Brotherhood upon the proposed settlement of the wage scale will be known at headquarters either Monday night or Tuesday. Already returns from a large majority of the locals are in the hands of President Duffy and Secretary Menge. The locals in this city have been meeting during the week and only the printers and the kiln drawers have not voted. These locals will meet tonight for that purpose. Last night the kilnmen and the packers held meetings and meeting of the kilnmen lasttemfwypp the result of the balloting was handed in at headquarters this morning. The meeting of the kilnmen lasted until a late hour and was largely attended.

Nearly every mail brings to headquarters an official document containing the vote of out-of-town locals. It is expected that all of them will be heard from by Monday night.

The propositions upon which the locals have been voting were submitted as a result of the conferences between the Brotherhood and manufacturers' committees and are as follows:

1. Pressers working day wage shall receive $3 per day.

2. Nine (9) hours shall constitute a day for all day wage earners excepting engineers, engineers' helpers, kiln firemen, watchmen, odd men and such others as from necessity must put in longer hours.

3. Lunch time shall be abolished for all day workers.

4. No apprentice printer shall be put on the press as long as a competent journeyman can be secured.

5. Ware dressers, ware brushers, drawing girls and dipping girls shall receive 10 per cent increase in wages when such increase does not bring the total wage above one ($1.00) dollar and no extra is to be paid on account of location of factory.

6. Kilndrawers shall receive twenty-five (25c) cents per hour, with a maximum of seven (7) hours for any kiln (which does not change present conditions materially); boss drawer to receive twenty-five (25c) cents extra per kiln.

7. All plain edge plates to be increased one-quarter cent per dozen.

8. All plain edge saucers, fruits and ice creams to be increased one-eighth cent per dozen.

9. All plain edge hotel plates, roll edge, double thick and half thick, shall be increased one-half cent per dozen.

10. That 205 feet shall constitute a day's work on bisque kiln, 200 feet having been asked for.

These reductions have been asked for by the manufacturers to offset the above concessions: Oat meals to be reduced one-half cent per dozen; coupe soups, to be reduced one-half cent per dozen; 5, 6, 7 and 8 inch nappies (outside), one cent per dozen; combinets making only, 5 cents per dozen; C. C roll edge basins, 5 cents per dozen.

The present conditions under the uniform price list are as follows: Day wage of pressers, per day, $2.75; day wage workers' day, 10 hours per day; lunch time for day wage workers, from 9:30 to 9:45 a. m.; apprentice printers ratio in each shop.

Ware dressers, $1.00 per day; ware brushers, drawing girls and dipping girls, 87½ cents per day.

Kilndrawers, $1.50 per kiln; boss drawer, $1.75 per kiln; takes five to seven hours to draw kiln; plain edge plates, 3 inch, 3 cents; 4 inch, 3 cents; 5 inch, 3½ cents; 6 inch, 4 cents; 7 inch, 4½ cents; and 8 inch, 5¼ cents per dozen. Plain edge saucers, fruits and ice creams, 2¾ cents per dozen. 212 cubic feet constitute one day in bisque kiln.

Following are the prices of goods on which reduction was offered: Oat meals, 5 cents per dozen; coupe soups, 6 cents per dozen; 5, 6, 7 and 8 inch (outside) nappies, 10 cents per dozen; combinets, 50 cents per dozen; figured cups, turned, 3½ cents per dozen; basins, 35 cents per dozen.

Should the propositions be rejected it is likely that the two committees will get together again and prepare a new basis of settlement.

President Duffy will leave the city tomorrow for Trenton to participate in the sanitary conference, which is to begin Monday. The members of these committees are given elsewhere in this issue. President Duffy will be one of the conferees.

BOY EXCURSIONIST CAME TO GRIEF

Both Arms and Leg Broken, Besides Other Injuries

An unfortunate accident that may cost the life of a young boy occurred at Rock Springs park at a late hour this afternoon. Willie Hunter, one of the excursionists at the park today from the delegation of Pittsburg bridge workers, fell from a car on the roller coaster and sustained the facture of both arms and the right leg, and it is feared, is internally injured. At the hour of going to press the physicians had not determined the exact extent of his hurts. They are, however, of a very dangerous character.

Young Hunter fell from the car while it was at one of the very highest points. It is stated that he very imprudently tried to make the trip standing and was thrown out as the car swept around a curve. The awful accident was witnessed by a large number of horror-stricken spectators.

GIRL MISSING FROM HERE A WEEK

Well Known Young Lady Thought to Have Gone With the Carnival Company.

The aid of the police was invoked today in an effort to ascertain the whereabouts of a 17-year-old girl who, it is thought, eloped with an attache of the carnival company which recently exhibited in this city. The circumstances surrounding the girl's strange disappearance are so mysterious that her own relatives have been completely baffled in their efforts to locate the missing girl.

Mabel Geomo, whose parents reside in Hancock county, about seven miles south of Chester, came to this city nearly a year ago, and securing employment in one of the potteries, learned the decorating trade. She was a good worker, and was known among her associates as a well behaved and very sensible young lady, and intelligent beyond her years. The father, John Geomo, is a well-to-do farmer and though the father of seven children of whom Mabel is the oldest, he was amply able to care for them all. The daughter, however, was of an independent turn and determined to make her own way.

She secured board with Mrs. Rowena Cunningham, at 255 Third street, and at the time of her disappearance was employed at the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles pottery.

When the carnival visited the city a few weeks ago, the girl became fascinated with the life of a wandering showman, and was soon upon intimate

New Jersey's Governor and Factory Inspector Will Apply Law Rigidly.

A TECHNICALITY IS FOUND

By Which the Glass Manufacturers Expect to Escape Its Provisions.

TRENTON POTTERY TOPICS

From a Staff Correspondent.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 15.—Governor Murphy has marked with the stamp of disapproval the efforts of the South Jersey manufacturers to disregard the child labor law which becomes operative September 1. He has assured the factory inspecting department that he will provide every means for protection and has instructed Attorney General McCarter to proceed against any of the violators of the new law. Governor Murphy in conversation with a News Review reporter yesterday said:

"I shall insist upon its rigid enforcement and if the case is taken into the courts I will direct the attorney general to defend it. The complaint of the glass men that they cannot make their business pay without child labor seems incredible, but if it is true, it will not change the enforcement of this necessary law. The wrong of such employment is too grievous to be palliated upon any consideration."

The glass interests of South Jersey have banded together and this week sent out circulars to the manufacturers throughout the state asking for their assistance in defeating the law. Copies of the circular were received by the manufacturing potters of this city and the matter has been the subject for much discussion at the meetings of the locals of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters. The manufacturers are prepared to defeat the enforcement of the law upon a technicality. They claim that the law does not state the September of what year it shall become operative and propose to bring the matter to the attention of the supreme court. Chief Factory Inspector John T. Ward has instructed all his employes as follows:

"You are to see positively that there are no violations of the child labor laws of New Jersey, no equivocations on terms of speech. You will be held strictly to account for any failure to detect anything at variance with this law which is reported to this department."

The new law makes the willful employment of children in workshops below the age of fourteen a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $200 or the imprisonment of the offending manufacturer for one year in state prison.

In accordance with the instructions sent out last week from the headquarters of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters at East Liverpool, the Trenton locals this week voted on the propositions submitted by the Western Manufacturers' Association for the government of the general ware trade.

C. Sidney Smith who is widely known here in potting circles, left this week for Sebring, O., where he has accepted a position as foreman in the decorating department of the plant of the Sebring Pottery company. Mr. Smith was connected with the decorating department of the Trenton Potteries company for seven years and previous to his employment there he was with the Maddock Pottery company. He was superintendent of the Walnut avenue Presbyterian Sunday school and was actively engaged in Y. M. C. A. work. Abraham Hays and W. F. Ellison have gone out with the Cook Pottery company's line of dinners, toilets and specialties. Hays is penetrating the New England market and Ellison is expounding the merits of the goods in the west. Both have several new lines this season. There is an unusualy large variety of jardineres in which department of production the local concern has been pressing forward with astounding rapidity in recent years.

PROMINENT MILL MAN COMMITTED SUICIDE

William Everson, Who Had Relatives in Wellsville, Took His Life in Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, August 15.—William Everson, prominent for many years in the iron and steel industry in Pittsburg and at various times superintendent of several of the largest plants in the city, committed suicide yesterday afternoon at Thirty-fifth street and the Allegheny Valley railroad. He left no word as to the cause of his action, but it is supposed he took his life in a fit of despondency over his inability to obtain a position at Clarke's mill, within a stone's throw of the place where he drank the contents of a bottle of carbolic acid.

He was 59 years old and has been identified with the steel and iron works of the city for most of his life. He was formerly superintendent of the Ft. Pitt works and afterward manager of the Keystone mill.

Mr. Everson is survived by two brothers and two sisters: Richard Everson, of Wellsville, O., formerly manager of the Wellsville Iron and Steel company, and Walter Everson; Miss Lillian Everson and Mrs. A. S. Livengood, of Everson, Pa. He left two sons and two daughters, Ralph Everson, employed at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company works; Reese Everson, a clerk; Mrs. Mildred Maxwell and Mrs. Stella Westerfield, of Kelly street, East End.

PROCEEDINGS STAYED IN THE FIGHT CASE

Chris McTaggart Now in the Hospital Being Treated for His Injuries.

No new features have developed as the outcome of the attack made by William Bridge on Chris McTaggart a few days ago. The men were brought into court after the fight, but McTaggart was in such a pitiable condition that the proceedings were stayed pending his recovery. He was placed in Dr. Taylor's hospital, where he is now undergoing treatment for his injuries. It is likely McTaggart will make some sort of a charge against Bridge as soon as he is able to be about, as he denies the accusation made by the latter, and says he was treated in a most brutal manner.

The way the men explained the occurrence at the mayor's office the evening of the fight, the impression was given out that the trouble occurred at the saloon of John Robinson, on Second street. This was an error, and Mr. Bridge states he has not been in Robinson's place in 14 years.

NO SETTLEMENT REACHED

Matter of the Engineers' Scale Will Be Referred to Next Meeting of Trades Council.

No adjustment has been made of the new wage scale of local union No. 169, International Union of Steam Engineers, and the officials of the local having exhausted every effort toward its adoption, will submit the matter to trades council at the next regular meeting Wednesday night. It is hoped in this way to effect a settlement without further delay.

Just what steps will be taken by the council is to be determined at the meeting. Several plans have been proposed but it is likely that a committee will be appointed to confer with the Western Manufacturers' association, which has been holding out against granting the advance provided for in the scale submitted.

TAKEN ILL ON THE STEEET

Thomas Cooke, a Hookstown Farmer Seized With Heart Disease In This City.

Thomas Cooke, a prosperous and well-known farmer, residing near Hookstown, was last evening overtaken with a serious attack of neuralgia of heart, while in the vicinity of the power house.

Cooke was seen staggering along the railroad tracks and was about ready to fall when reached by assistance and was taken into the brick works nearby where for two hours he could not be moved owing to his precarious condition. Dr. G. P. Ikirt was summoned, and after relieving the sufferer, had him removed in the ambulance to the home of friends in Chester where today he is much improved.

THE SIDEWALKS IN BAD SHAPE

Public Service Board Determines to Have Them Inspected and Improved.

JETHRO BRIDGE REPAIRS

The condition of some of East Liverpool's pavements has been the subject of a great deal of unfavorable comment within the past two years. The city council has been criticised and censured for neglecting so important a matter, and the men in charge of the street department have been condemned in no uncertain terms. When the service board took charge of the public works it was one of the first questions taken up by that body. For several weeks past plans have been discussed to be followed in the execution of the work, and at the meeting of the board held last night the first move was made. It was determined to take up the work at once, and it will be pushed to completion just as fast as the city's facilities will permit.

Engineer Kelly and City Commissioner Frank Dickey will begin at once a systematic inspection and upon their report will depend the extent of the work. The task will be a difficult one, since there is scarcely a street in the city upon which repairs of some kind are not needed. The men have been instructed to have the report ready by Monday evening at which time the board of public service will hold another meeting.

The action of the board will be commended by a large number of property owners, and was the result of continued effort on the part of Commissioner Dickey. This official reported to the board last night that the condition of some of the streets was very bad, and unless they were given attention soon the city would surely become involved in damage suits. The pavements on Fourth street were reported as being particularly bad. It will be the purpose of the commissioner and engineer to make their inspection in a thorough manner, and when they have finished none of the sidewalks needing attention will have been overlooked. It is hoped the work of repairing can be completed before the rough weather sets in.

The condition of the Jethro bridge was reported on by Mr. Dickey. He said that several planks were loose and the danger to people who daily use the structure was great. The matter was discussed at some length and it was finally decided to refer the matter to the county commissioners who were thought to be responsible. The bridge was built by the East Liverpool railway corporation and the county commissioners, each contributing a certain amount to the expense of constructing the trestle. The board was not certain that the city would be exempt from damage in case an accident resulted from the bad condition of the structure, and concluded, in order to make sure, that it would be the proper course to refer the matter to the county commissioners. It may be that the railway company is responsible for the repairs, and if it is, the commissioners, with whom the deal for its construction was originally made, are thought to be the proper parties to call it to the attention of the management. Clerk J. W. Gipner will notify the commissioners at once that the bridge is in a dangerous condition and in need of immediate attention. The Jethro bridge was built several years after the East Liverpool railway line was constructed, and was only substituted for the old wooden structure after the latter was considered dangerous. An arrangement was made whereby the county commissioners were to share the expense of construction, and though the bridge was well built and the very best materials were used, but little attention has been given to its care since that time. All of the farmers from the northwestern part of the county come into the city from the campground road and use this bridge, and in addition to that the heavy traffic from Wellsville by road is all done from thatdirection. It is considered no wonder that the bridge is in need of repairs at this time, and it will be the

THE SANITARY CONFERENCE.

Arrangements are being made for the holding of the Sanitary conference in the east, says this week's Potters' Herald. The manufacturers held a meeting on the fourth inst. and it is decided to leave the arrangements of the date of meeting to the two committees. This leaves no doubt but what an early date will be set for the considering of the propositions asked by the operatives.

The committees will be composed as follows: That of the manufacturers will be John A. Campbell, general manager of the Trenton Potteries company, and John Maddock, of the Maddock company, John Moore, and the selection of one of the following three: A. Maddock, Fred Conradt or D. K. Willet.

The National Brotherhood of Operative Potters will be represented by First Vice President F. H. Hutchins, Sixth Vice President Joseph T. Cotton, Eighth Vice President George Dix, William Wooten, Thomas Walklett, David Moore, William Harney and Edward Taylor. There is also a possible chance of National President Duffy also being present, as no doubt but what the western conference will have been closed by the time of the Sanitary meeting.

The questions that will come before the two committees are of a very reasonable nature and will in all probability be granted without any serious difficulty. Among them are the following:

The establishing of a regualtion governing the rights of the presser to pay the carrier-out. This arose over some of the firms, instead of allowing the men to pay the carrier-out, deducting it from their pay and paying the carrier, thereby making it so the men would not have any control over him, and it is to abolish this and permit the men to pay and control their own carriers-out, that the adopting of the above regulation is asked for.

Another thing that will be of great benefit to the operatives, both in being just and a help in the day's wages, is the abolishing of the charging of the workman to pay for ware broken by kilnhands, or in the green room. Also the neglect of anyone who may handle the ware. Heretofore the workmen have been responsible for ware broken in this way, a feature that will appeal to all as being a great hindrance to the workman making the average day.

A uniform list for the making of sanitary saggers will also be up for action. Heretofore there has been no uniform list in general use for the making of saggers for sanitary use. Also a uniform list for sanitary jiggering; uniform list for placing sanitary kilns. There will also be a strenuous effort put forth to adopt a rule which will govern the working of an apprentice kilnman in the sanitary trade, the same to be similar to the rule governing ... class in the placing of the general ware kilns. The establishing of a uniform list to govern the wages of a sanitary presser when working day wage. Also the establishing of a price for local seat, hub, and trap vents, and a uniform price to be paid for the packing of sanitary ware.

The meeting of the two committees is to be expected within the course of a few days, when the exact date of the conference will be known.

EAGLES' FLIGHT WELL BEGUN

New Aerie Starts With a Charter Roll of 100 Members.

INITIATION CEREMONIES

Impressively Conducted and the Officers Installed by the State President—An Elaborate Banquet Follows the Ceremonies.

East Liverpool is a great secret order town. If this fact had not impressed itself upon the average citizen before they will be convinced after last night's demonstration upon the occasion of the institution of the new arie of the fraternal order of Eagles. The charter list is made up of over 100 young men, and the new lodge starts off under the most favorable circumstances.

Col. C. H. Voute, state president of the organization, had charge of the ceremonies, and he was assisted in the ritualistic work by the Steubenville degree team. The latter arrived in the city on the evening train, two extra coaches having been added to the regular train. They were met at the passenger station by a large delegation of the prospective brothers, and headed by Manley's band, marched to Turner hall, where the aerie was to be instituted.

The charter list was a large one, and the officers went to work at once with a determination to finish the task by midnight. After the balloting had been finished the entire membership received the obligation, and then the men in charge were ready for the enjoyable portion of the program. The Steubenville brethren had made all arrangements to exemplify the secret work and though a young aerie itself went through the work in a manner which indicated careful study and a perfect conception of the ritual. The following officers were elected:

Worthy President—Henry Bullock.
Worthy Vice President—John C. Walsh.
Worthy Chaplain—Criss McConnell.
Worthy Secretary—D. A. Devine.
Worthy Treasurer—Thomas O'Brien.
Worthy Conductor—George Parry.
Worthy Inside Guard—Samuel Whittenberger.
Worthy Outside Guard—Pat I. Quinn.
Trustes—Alex Stevenson, Dick Bell, Clifford Dawson.
Physician—O. P. Andrews.
Worthy Past President—T. O. Carman; appointed by Col. C. H. Voute.

Upon the completion of the initiatory ceremonies the assemblage adjourned to the banquet hall, where a sumptuous repast had been prepared. This was one of the most enjoyable features of the entire evening. Toasts were responded to by a large number of out-of-town brothers, and speeches were made by members of the East Liverpool aerie. The banquet was enjoyed by nearly 200 people, and all voted it the most successful ever attended.

The East Liverpool aerie begins its career with flattering prospects, and will begin at once on the formation of a degree team. There are a large number of persons whose names are on the charter list who were not present for initiation last night, and it will be the duty of the members to initiate them. The ritualistic work is fine, and the initiation most impressive. It will be the aim of the new lodge to perfect the work promptly and in a thorough manner.

Bank Failure.

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 15.—The alleged embezzlement of $45,000 of the funds of the Commercial Banking company, for which E. E. Johnson, the trusted clerk of the bank, is under arrest, has brought about the failure of the Merchants' bank of Duluth. President Smith said that the failure was due to a run on the bank, resulting from the closing of the Commercial Banking company's institution. He said that he could not anticipate the extent of the withdrawals and closed to protect all depositors as much as possible. This is the fourth bank suspending business as a result of the alleged embezzlement.

The "United Tailors."

New York, Aug. 15.—The latest thing in trade combinations is to be known as the "United Tailors." Charles M. Schwab's millions are said to be behind the scheme, which, it is understood, will be launched in this city in one week. Five branch stores have already been leased in various parts of Manhattan and the projectors say that within 30 days their stores will be in operation in large cities all over the country.

Heroic Measures.

"I'm after a servant girl," said Haus keep; "one with a good, big appetite preferred."

"That's rather an unusual request," began the employment agent.

"Well, I've got to put a stop to this business of having things warmed over the next day."—Philadelphia Press.

The Lamp of a Man's Life.

Dr. Holmes said the lamp of a man's life has three wicks—brain, blood and breath—and to turn down any one of them makes the other two go out. The wounds a man will survive and even disregard so long as his head, heart and lungs are unhurt have long been one of the wonders of war history.

The Russian Bride.

A Russian bride has a very much more trying time on her wedding day than has her American sister, for she must fast until after the ceremony is over and that after enduring the trials of a "farewell party" the day before. As the wedding, to be fashionable, must not take place till the evening, it is easy to imagine in what an exhausted state the bride often enters on her new life. Besides bridesmaids there are also bridesmen, who have to provide the bridesmaids with sweetmeats. The number of bridesmaids is unlimited, and they are not dressed alike. Following the bridal procession is carried a picture in gold and silver of Christ, which is stationed against the altar. The bride's old nurse is intrusted with the removal of the bride's dowry from her father's house to that of her future husband.

A Million For Advice.

Sometimes repressing a client pays a lawyer well. There is a persistent story, which probably will never be printed as to names and details, that a famous trust magnate paid a lawyer a million dollars in cash for simply saying to him: "Don't fight. If you insist on fighting I will take your case. But if you fight remember all your books will be opened and all your methods disclosed." The bewildering munificence of that instant fee of a million was a record for wise philanthropy which showed the genius of the philanthropist. Never was a fee better earned if the tale is true.—Everybody's Magazine.

FREEDRICKTOWN WON

The East End Grays Defeated By Just One Run in Yesterday's Game.

The East End Grays went up against the real thing yesterday afternoon at Columbian park when they tackled the Fredericktown boys. The game of ball was played in excellent manner throughout and had Bolton and Herbert, the Grays' battery, been given better assistance, they would have won the game. It resulted Fredericktown 13, Grays 12.

The Grays are scheduled to play a game on the same grounds with the Eclipse today.

A REMARKABLE WELL

It Produces Both Water and Gas and Both Are Utilized.

The flow of gas which U. E. Price struck some time ago in his back yard on Pennsylvania avenue still keeps up and Mr. Price has just finished piping the gas through his house for light and fuel. The gas keeps up its early test of 4½ pounds pressure, which is more than enough to supply the building Mr. Price lives in. The well, which had been drilled for water, now supplies both water and gas, the gas having been cased off so as not to affect the taste or smell of the water.

Neville Institute Repairs.

Those in charge of the Neville Institute have determined to make extensive and much needed repairs at the school building within the next few weeks. Contractors have been over the work, and figures are now in the hands of the trustees. It is the intention to begin the work next week.

Lost

Could Not Eat, Sleep or Walk.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure Cured Entirely.

"If it hadn't been for Dr. Miles' Remedies I would not be here to write this letter. Two years ago last June I lost the use of my left arm, could not use it and could only move it with the help of my right hand. My heart was so weak I could not sleep nights for smothering spells. I was out of sorts all over and could eat nothing. I grew so weak that I could not walk without staggering like a drunken man and my home doctor said he could do nothing for me. I was in so much pain I was almost wild. I could not take morphine nor opium as they made me worse. So I got to thinking about Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine and the more I thought about it the more I wanted to try them. I wrote to the Dr. Miles Medical Co. for advice which I followed to the letter. I can say today that I am glad I did as I am a well woman now; can work and can walk two or three miles and not mind it. I can also use my arm again as well as ever. You do not know how thankful I am for those grand medicines Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and Nervine. I think Dr. Miles' Remedies are the best in the world, and if I should get sick again I should take the same course. The remedies also helped my daughter Vida so wonderfully that I should have written you before to thank you, but I wanted to be sure that the cure was permanent, which I now know to be the case."—Mrs. Frank Loomis, Allen, Mich.

Charged With Rioting.

Wheeling, Aug. 15.—William Butler and John Stalds, two burly negroes, were arrested at Moundsville charged with rioting and terrorizing the passengers of a Baltimore and Ohio train and held to the grand jury in the sum of $600. The men boarded the train at Fairmont in an intoxicated condition and almost threw the passengers in a panic by flourishing knives and revolvers. The train crew attempted to quiet the rowdies, but were driven out of the coach at the point of pistols.

Reported Lynching Denied.

Albany, Ga., Aug. 15.—Officials here deny the reported lynching of King Wightman, a negro, and a white man named Thompson at Hartsfield for assaulting Mrs. Mathis, a white woman. The two men, who were recognized by Mrs. Mathis as her assailants, have been placed safely in jail at Moultrie, Ga., by officers, after eluding a mob which had been in pursuit of the negro. The report of the lynching was received through apparently reliable sources.

A COAL COMBINE WITH $10,000,000

Mammoth Concern Formed in Cleveland to Control Eastern Ohio Cities.

Cleveland, Aug. 15.—Calvary Morris of this city, is at the head of a new $10,000,000 combine, formed for the purpose of acquiring the title to mineral lands in Ohio.

A telegram from Wheeling says the men interested in the venture have perfected plans and that articles of incorporation will be filed shortly.

At the office of Morris it was said that he was in the east and that until his return next Monday it would be impossible to give details of the combine. It was said by other coal men that he was there for the purpose of financing the corporation.

Options have already been secured on the coal fields of Harrison, Jefferson and Belmont counties and agents are reaching out for more territory. The purchase a few days ago of the property of the Postill Coal Co., at Hoosac, O., for $500,000 by the Morris syndicate was the first step in the big deal. Until that time the matter had not been given publicity. It is said that there is great wealth behind the combine and that it will develop in to the biggest concern of the kind in Ohio.

C. L. Poston, who recently sold his Hocking Valley coal lands to J. P. Morgan's syndicate for $3,000,000, is interested with Morris in the promotion of the new corporation.

DISGUISED CATARRH

A Stealthy, Insidious, Weakening Enemy to Women---Many Thousand Women Suffer Needlessly From This Cause.

There are a multitude of women, especially housewives, and all other women obliged to be on their feet constantly, who are wretched beyond description, simply because their strength and vitality is sapped away by catarrhal discharges from the pelvic organs. These women get up in the morning tired, drag themselves through their daily duties tired, only to go to bed at night as tired as before.

MRS. EVA BARTHO.

Mrs. Eva Bartho, 133 East 12th Street, N. Y. City, N. Y., writes:—"I suffered for three years with what is generally known as leucorrhea, in connection with ulceration of the womb. The doctors advocated an operation which I dreaded very much, and strongly objected to go under it. Reading of the value of Peruna, I thought it best to give this well-known remedy a trial, so I bought three bottles of it at once. Now I am a changed woman. Peruna cured me; it took nine bottles, but I felt so much improved I kept taking it, as I dreaded an operation so much. I am to-day in perfect health, and have not felt so well for fifteen years."—Mrs. Eva Bartho.

MISS LOUISE MAHON.

Miss Louise Mahon, 3 Glen Baille Street, Toronto, Ont. Can., Secretary of the King's Daughters and Secretary of Lady Maccabees, writes:—"If all women knew of the benefits to be derived from taking Peruna we would have many happier and more healthful women. My health has never been too robust, and I am easily fatigued and can not stand much. About a year ago I was so run down that I had to take to my bed, and became weaker and weaker. A friend advised me to try Peruna, and I have great reason to be grateful, for in two weeks I was out of bed and in a month I was perfectly well, and I now find that my health is much more robust than formerly, so that I take Peruna once or twice a month and keep well."—Louise Mahon

Peruna is such a perfect specific for each case that when patients have once used it they can never be induced to quit it until they are permantly cured. It begins to relieve the disagreeable symptoms at once. The backache ceases, the trembling knees are strengthened, the appetite restored, the digestion made perfect, the dull headache is stopped and the weakening drains are gradually cured. These results certainly follow a course of treatment with Peruna.

Barbara Alberty, corner Seventh and Walnut streets, Appleton, Wis., writes as follows in regard to Peruna:

"For years I have suffered with backache and severe pains in the side. I doctored so much that I became discouraged. A school friend told me how very much Peruna had benefited her and I sent out for a bottle, which did more to relieve me than all the other medicine I have ever taken. I used it faithfully for two weeks and it completely cured me. I have not had any pains since, anywhere, but feel like a new woman. I am truly thankful for what Peruna has done for me."—Barbara Alberty.

MRS. KATE MANN.

Mrs. Kate Mann, 806 Bathurst Street, Toronto, Ont. Can., Vice President of the Ladies Aid Society, writes:—"I am pleased to give praise to Peruna for the blessed relief I found through its use. I suffered for years with backache and dragging down pains and often had to go to bed and stay there when I was so busy that I could ill be spared. It was therefore a simple godsend to me when Peruna was brought to my notice. Every drop seemed to give me new life, and every dose made me feel much better, and I promised myself that if I found that it cured me I would advocate it so that other suffering women should know of it. I have been in perfect health for one year, I enjoy work and pleasure because in such fine health, and no trouble seems too heavy to bear when you are in good health. Peruna has simply been a household blessing, and I never will be without it again."—Mrs. Kate Mann.

Mrs. Anna Martin, 47 Hoyt St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:—"Peruna did so much for me that I feel it my duty to recommend it to others who may be similarly afflicted. About a year ago my health was completely broken down, had backache, dizziness and irregularities, and life seemed dark indeed. We had used Peruna in our home as a tonic, and for colds and catarrh, and I decided to try it for my trouble. In less than three months I became regular, my pains had entirely disappeared, and I am now perfectly well."—Mrs. Anna Martin.

Mrs. Wm. Hetrick, Kennard, Washington county, Neb., writes:

"I am fifty-six years old and have not felt well since the Change of Life began ten years age. I was in misery somewhere most of the time. My back was very weak, and my flesh so tender it hurt me to lean against the back of a chair. I had pain under my shoulder-blades, in the small of my back and hips. I sometimes wished myself out of this world. Had hot and cold spells, dizziness and trembling of the limbs, and was losing flesh all the time. After following your directions and taking Peruna I now feel like a different person."—Mrs. Wm. Hetrick.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Peruna can be purchased for $1 per bottle at all first class drug stores.

The board of public service, in devoting attention to neglected sidewalks, is undertaking a very necessary and important work. The inspection about to be undertaken should be thorough and immediate steps should be taken to repair the numerous walks which will be found in a dangerous and dilapidated condition. Bad sidewalks, besides being an eyesore and a disgrace to a city of the size of East Liverpool, are unprofitable and undesirable in other ways. They are quite likely to result in damage suits and prove far more expensive in the long run than good walks. Unfortunately this city is no stranger to this sort of litigation. A little labor and effort will put the sidewalks in good condition at a cost which is small in comparison with that entailed by damage suits and damage verdicts. The old theory regarding an ounce of prevention is particularly applicable to this matter. East Liverpool has a great number of well paved streets, and much to the satisfaction of the public, they are now being kept reasonably clean. The sidewalks should be kept in a correspondingly good condition. The public service board will do the public genuine good service by keeping at the work it has initiated until the sidewalks of the city are in all respects what a city's sidewalks ought to be.

A scarcity of school teachers is reported in several Ohio and West Virginia counties. Such a condition would not exist if living wages were paid, but nothing else can be expected as long as men can make more money at digging ditches than the instructors of many a rural school receive. Cheap wages will never secure the sort of talent that ought to be employed in the school room. If there is any servant of the people who earns and ought to receive good pay it is the country school teacher who tries to do his duty. Such a teacher works harder than many a man who draws a salary twenty times as large and thinks he earns it.

Cheap automobiles will soon be with us if Thomas A. Edison's latest invention is what he claims for it. Mr. Edison says he has invented a storage battery for autos which can be charged at a cost of thirty cents, which will take the machine a hundred miles. Mr. Edison also states that his experiments at this time are being directed to a reduction of cost in the production of his battery, but that his invention has been tested in running automobiles for five hundred miles, and has proven very satisfactory.

The universal verdict is that, in the conviction of Jett and White, justice for once has triumphed in Kentucky. When all assassins in the Blue Grass State come to be treated as murderers should be, that old commonwealth will prosper and grow strong. Kentucky is a great state and would quickly become much greater but for her reputation for lawlessness.

Mobs are cowardly. One Indianapolis policeman with a revolver prevented a lynching by holding the crowd at bay until help arrived. Courageous officers who will do their duty are often successful in like emergencies. Even a crowd thirsting for the blood of a victim will pause before defying the law as personified by an officer with a weapon which he is not afraid to use.

It is nonsense to talk of war with Canada because the crew of an American fishing boat got into a dispute with the crew of a Canadian government vessel. All the same, steps ought to be taken to prevent the recurrence of such unpleasant episodes before they become more serious.

The latest about C. M. Schwab is that he is backing a taliors' trust. Probably the first thing he will do is to establish a "no trust" rule.

Corbett was not as badly damaged as the Ohio Democracy will be next November.

THE HERMIT'S REVENGE.

General Braddock Slain in Retaliation for Abuse of Brother.

When the writer was a youth he spent much time, especially during his vacation periods, in Fayette county, Pennsylvania. There he often took short trips into the mountains known as Chestnut Ridge and Laurel Hill where were enacted so many famous scenes during the days of the colonial wars. In these trips he was told many times of a noted hermit, Thomas Faucett by name, who lived in a secluded cabin among the mountains. The tales which came to the ears of the awestruck lad were so gaily decorated that they wore the aspect of the legends of a dim and misty past but were all readily accepted with youthful credulity. Mature years have robbed them of their Arabian Nights' splendor, but I must confess that I got much more pleasure out of mountain legends than I now get out of the truth.

Thomas Faucett was reputed to be a mountain hermit of gigantic size and fierce demeanor. He had been a soldier in General Braddock's army in 1755, and had helped to cut the fatal path across the mountains which came to such a sudden and tragic end on that terrible July day by the Monongahela fords. During the march, or during the earlier part of the battle, General Braddock had in some way affronted this rude man. One of the tales says that he had punished Faucett's brother for some offense. This was not unlikely, for Braddock was a severe disciplinarian. Another story is that during the battle the general drove Faucett's brother out from behind a tree, beating him with his sword.

Anyhow, in some such fashion as this, it is not important just how, he had incurred the wrath of the gigantic trooper, who determined on a revenge of which all his life he boasted, but which was cowardly. When the fight was about lost, Faucett, according to his lifelong claim, procured a silver button, and ramming it down into his musket, shot the already wounded and broken-hearted general. This course he followed because of the superstition then prevalent among ignorant soldiers that a general officer could be killed only with a silver bullet. Such is the tale which lived for generations among the Fayette county mountains. Once in a while one may hear it there even now in some far removed mountain cabin, and there are some who religiously believe it just as it had been handed down.

It has been often investigated. Many years ago, while the old hermit was still living, there were serious doubts in the minds of thoughtful men as to the truth of the story. So eminent a historian as the Hon. Winthrop Sargent half a century ago investigated Faucett's claim and pronounced it entirely incredible. This is the general opinion of historical students. There was never one bit of contemporary evidence, even hint, to support Faucett's claim, and his story was always somewhat confused and misleading. But the adherents of the Faucett cult were ever zealous believers of the tale that made their rough hero the assassin of the unfortunate Braddock. C. L. SMITH purpose of the board of public service to see that the work is done without delay.

The much-discussed question of a sewer on Bradshaw avenue, was up for an inning at the meeting of the board last night, and it is likely something will be done for the relief of the residents of that vicinity before the bad weather comes. It will be remembered that the property owners along Bradshaw avenue were before council at its last meeting with a request that the work be started. It was found at that time that there had been no appropriation for the purpose, and the council could not legally begin the work. It was that the lot owners advance the money necessary to go ahead with the contract and the city would pledge itself to pay its share when the money was forthcoming. The service board rather favored the plan, and it is likely will give instructions for its execution within a short time. No action was taken at the meeting last night.

John Logan, who was assessed for the improvement of Ravine street objected to the amount, saying he had not been given value received. In fact, no improvements whatever were in evidence, and he objected strenuously to paying for something he did not get.

Engineer John A. George was in office at the time the work was supposed to have been performed, and Mr. Kelly, the present engineer was instructed to confer with Mr. George with a view of straightening the matter out.

Cheap Cigars Sold for Good Ones.

The arrest of Henry Silberstone, a cigar dealer at No. 283 Bowery, New York, charged with having refilled cigar boxes, marked the beginning of a war that will be waged against dealers who have been engaged in similar practices. Siberstone is alleged to have bought several boxes of "Cremo" cigars, and after selling the genuine article at the regular price (five cents) refilled the boxes with a cheaper article, which he sold at eight for 25 cents, explaining to his customers that the only difference in the cigars was in the matter of the bands. Substitution of cigars or refilling of boxes has been going on for some time. The bands were placed upon the goods to protect customers. The federal authorities expect more arrests. There are federal and state penalties.

A MISSION OF VENGEANCE.

Captain Jack Devotes Balance of His Days to Extermination of Redskins.

One of the most famous characters of colonial times in Pennsylvania was Captain Jack, the scout. Much is known of his history and about him has gathered a nebulous cloud of mystery which makes enchanting reading, even if we cannot accept it all as gospel truth. The home of this noted ranger was in the Juniata valley, and he was known variously as the Black Hunter, the Wild Hunter of the Juniata, the Black Rifle, La Carabine Noir, or Captain Jack. His early life has always been shrouded in impenetrable darkness. Even in his own days the stories of his origin and of his presence on the frontier as an Indian fighter was mere conjecture. The commonly received tradition, which has passed current among the mountains of Pennsylvania for a century and a half is that Jack was a prosperous settler who took out his family to the frontier to make a home amid the newer and wilder scenes then prevailing. One evening he came back from a day's hunting to find his cabin in ruins and the charred bones of his wife and children smoldering in the ashes. Bitterness filled his heart, and over those loved relics of his dear ones he swore to devote his whole life to the taking of a bloody revenge on the red devils who had so cruelly treated him. According to all stories of his subsequent career the grief-stricken frontiersman carried out his vow in full measure and to the very letter.

He became the relentless foe of the Indians and never lost an opportunity to exact dire vengeance for the evil done him that fatal day. It was his custom to lie in wait along the trails most frequented by the Indian marauding parties, and the vicious crack of his long, black rifle was the only warning of the leaden messenger in its searching flight to brain or heart.

Captain Jack was one of those unerring riflemen whose deeds made the story of the days of American settlement so heroic a narrative. His vow of vengeance was to prove in after years the salvation of many a settler's home which would otherwise have been doomed to destruction, for Jack was always ranging the mountain trails in search of his foes, and many a party of Indians, sneaking stealthily on an unsuspecting foe, was discovered by him and his ranger companions and slain. Settlers frequently found the decomposing bodies of Jack's victims lying where his fatal bullet had tumbled them in the deep forest. And the traveler generally knew who had been that way on his mission of revenge. Jack became a well-known character in the life of the time, his name appearing frequently in the public records of Pennsylvania as a man who rendered great public service to the endangered frontier. His last days are shrouded in the same mystery as his early life. Some say that he went west as the tide of immigration drove both game and Indians on ahead.

In the Juniata valley it is currently said that he lived to old age and at his death was buried near a large spring by the foot of Jack's mountain. If he lies there, there is no definite knowledge of the fact at this day, though this is likely the case. It is said that Captain Jack was the portotype of Cooper's Natty Bumppo.

C. L. SMITH.

The First Rumor of the Ohio.

The Ohio river occupies today so important a place in the geography and commerce of this country that it is very difficult to realize that there was ever a time in which its existence was not known to the white man. It is now the stream on whose broad and swelling bosom float southward the millions of bushels of coal from Pittsburg on which the southern markets rely for their fuel supply. It is also the subject of constant discussion, and the several plans for making it a regular water highway, independent of freshets and rises, occupy a large share in the public attention. Yet there was a time when to the settlers along the Atlantic coast there was not known any such mighty and majestic river. Its great watershed was only the hunting ground of savages and its valley was the home of myriads of wild game, both large and small. In those days the banks of the Ohio were the tramping grounds for countless herds of buffaloes. It was along about the latter part of the seventeenth century that the first rumors of which we have any definite record of this noble stream in the wilderness began to filter through to the French Canadian settlers. In 1669 the Sieur de La Salle sold all his landed property and set out westward from the head of the St. Lawrence on an extensive exploring expedition in what was then the great western wilderness. First he visited the Senecas for guides. Then he skirted the southern shore of Lake Ontario to Irondequoit bay to a Jesuit mission. There he found an interpreter who told with enthusiasm of a great prairie land to the southwest—a fair and fertile region—where flowed a great river in such a direction that it must reach the Vermilion sea or the gulf of Mexico. The stream thus vaguely hinted at was none other than the now world-famous Ohio, then as yet undiscovered and unknown. La Salle proceeded on his long and remarkable journey and came back in safety from this first search for new marvels. It is said that in 1670, the summer following his talk with the interpreter at the mission, he discovered the Ohio and traveled some distance on its waters, but this claim is something like a Scotch verdict, not proven. NEW ICE PLANT

The Manufactory of Judge P. M. Smith Expected to Be Completed in November.

Work on the new P. M. Smith artificial ice plant, which is being erected along the new C. & P. belt line switch in the vicinity of Second street and Broadway, has not been progressing as rapidly as heretofore during the past few days. It was at first stated that the plant would be completed about the middle of September, but it is now feared that the contractors will not finish their work before the first of November, when it will at once be put in operation.

This plant is to have a capacity of 50 tons of ice per day. The building of the plant is to be 150x125 feet. It is to be two stories in height. The west and south ends of the building are to be of brick and the balance framework.

The two large 150-horse-power boilers which were received a week or so ago have been placed on their foundation. This work was completed by Contractor W. M. Wooster. The foundation has not been completed for the large tank which was also recently received, but it is now being laid and will be completed within a few days. Work on the building proper has not yet been started.

This factory will no doubt be one of the best paying institutions of the city. It has the best of backing and is a concern which has been much needed here for several years.

HEALTH BOARD MET

And Discussed the Abatement of Nuisances—Suspicious Flour to Be Analyzed.

An adjourned meeting of the board of health was held last evening in the private office of Mayor Fogo, president of the board. Only a short session was held which lasted about 45 minutes. Mayor Fogo presided. Others present were G. P. Ashley, John F. McQueen, E. C. Taylor and Health Officer Tarr.

The matter of cesspools was the first taken up by the board. They talked over the different cases which were heard at a previous meeting, particularly that of the one located on Thirteenth street on property owned by Ross Noble and McLean Bros. This case was to have been decided by City Engineer Leitz, who was to examine the property and report as to whether the property owners or the city were at fault. It was reported at this meeting that the city engineers had not yet made an examination of the property, and the matter was deferred until the next meeting.

Daniel McIntosh, a farmer residing near Irondale, appeared at the board meeting and presented a sample of flour which he had purchased here and which tended to raise bread quickly and said the substance was a menace to health. Different members of the board examined the flour, but were unable to discover any foreign substance. They finally decided to have the flour sent to the secretary of the state board of health and have the same analyzed. The board adjourned to meet in regular session Tuesday evening, Aug. 25.

REMEDY FOR HAY FEVER

After Trying Other Treatments Hyomei Was Used With Perfect Success.

Prior to the discovery of Hyomei, the only advice a physician could give to a hay fever patient was to go away from home but now any one who expects the disease, can, if Hyomei is used, stay at home without fear of the annual attack of sneezing, watery eyes, and other discomfort.

J. F. Forbes, a well known western railroad man, whose home is at McCook, Neb., writes: "I have never had relief from any other remedy for hay fever, even temporarily, until I discovered the merits of Hyomei. I will always reccommend it whenever occasion requires."

There is no offensive stomach dosing when Hyomei is used. It is a reliable remedy for the cure of all diseases of the respiratory organs and is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, so that the air taken into the throat and lungs is like that of the White Mountains or other health resorts where hay fever is unknown.

Will Reed, who has the local agency for Hyomei, advises all who are subject to hay fever to begin its use two or three weeks before the time of the annual appearance of this disease and thus prevent the attack. If, however, Hyomei is not used until the sneezing and other disagreeable symptoms have shown themselves, it is necessary to use the treatment more frequently, at least half a dozen times daily, and Hyomei Balm should be rubbed into the nostrils both morning and night.

The fact that Will Reed agrees to refund the money to any hay fever sufferer who uses Hyomei without success, should inspire confidence in its power to effect a cure.

Ready to Begin Work.

A notification has been received by the water works trustees from the Duquesne Engineering company of Pittsburg, the successful bidders for the erection of the new pumping station here, to the effect that they will begin work on the contract next Tuesday, August 18. Material and tools have already been shipped here and the work will be rushed. The contractors expect to have the tunnel, the pump pit and the foundation of the plant completed within six weeks time.

Reduction of Railroad Men.

"The reduction in wages of trainmen on the Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad affects only those employed on the Mingo Junction division, with headquarters at Conway. Not a great number are included in the cut. The notices have been posted here by Assistant Superintendent Coney, whose office is at Wellsville. The order is effective beginning this week, and the only known reason for the reduction is a curtailment of expenses."

Bought a Restaurant.

Charles Patterson, formerly a C. & P. brakeman, whose home is in Salineville, yesterday purchased the restaurant and lunch counter formerly owned by Frank Fitzpatrick and located between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets on Main street. The consideration was $300 and possession was immediately given. Mr. Fitzpatrick has laid no future plans.

A STRONG BILL

Numerous Attractions of Merit at Rock Springs Theatre the Coming Week.

The bill at the Rock Springs theatre the coming week is one of the strongest of the season, and the artists will doubtless be welcomed by large crowds throughout the engagement. Manager Franklin has made an especial effort to secure a good bill for this week and he has succeeded.

A novel feature of the bill will be given by Rose Traynon and her intelligent troupe of birds. The pack contains 50 birds, and the feats performed by them is nothing short of wonderful.

Levina & Gray as the tramp juggler and the soubrette, have been engaged for the week, and their act is one of the best on the vaudeville stage. Their audiences have been delighted everywhere, and they will surely be appreciated in East Liverpool.

A paper tearing turn will be given by Kitty Gray, one of the cleverest women who ever faced an audience here. The act is a catchy piece of work, and is entirely new to a majority of the theatre goers.

"On the Golf Links" is the subject of a very funny sketch created and played by Warren and Howard. This team is noted for the novelty of its acts, and the industry of the members. They are sure to please.

The bill will be concluded by a Kinetograph exhibition which has won the admiration and applause of audiences all over the country, and will be among the most pleasing features of the evening's vaudeville performance.

SMITH WAS PENITENT

Disorderly at the Park Last Night He Repented This Morning.

John Smith, of New Cumberland, made too many trips to East Liverpool in an effort to quench his thirst and lay the dust in his throat caused by the many brick kilns at home. He was very disorderly at the park last night and was taken to the town hall by Officer Good.

At his hearing this morning he was penitent and appearing to be a good fellow, Justice W. C. Johnston was lenient and allowed him to depart on payment of $1 and costs. Part of the fine was paid by himself and the rest by the the prosecution.

Colonel Maschin and His Part In Servia's Tragedy.

One odd phase of the recent Servian tragedy is the fact that the leader of the assassins of King Alexander and Queen Draga was a brother-in-law of the ill fated queen, whose insatiable ambition finally led her on to her doom. The name of this chief conspirator against the Obrenovitch dynasty is Alexander Maschin, who became the implacable enemy of Queen Draga when she was still plain Draga Maschin, wife of his brother. As soon as Draga, after years of scheming, captured the affections of the young king and became his queen in defiance of public sentiment in Servia, she speedily brought about the downfall of her old enemy. Colonel Maschin lost all his appointments, was looked upon with suspicion and disfavor by King Alexander and was in disgrace despite the fact that he still held rank in the Servian army.

Queen Draga was a good hater and a dangerous enemy, but she seems to have more than met her match in the person of Maschin. In revenge for the slights that had been put upon him he seems to have used all his influence to inflame his brother officers against the royal couple, who were none too popular already, and when the conspiracy against them was organized he was its chief. On the night of June 10 he gave his final instructions to the plotters at a tavern named the Servian Crown and then led them to the palace, where, it is said, he even took a personal part in the butchery of the king and queen. When the couple concealed themselves it was Colonel Maschin who searched for them with such persistence that they were finally discovered and dispatched in the secret room to which they had fled.

Colonel Maschin is a veteran of both the Servian army and diplomatic corps. He served with distinction in the army, was military attache at Vienna and also served as Servian minister at an unimportant post. He is now minister of public works under King Peter Karageorgevitch and was a conspicuous figure at the welcome accorded the new king when he reached Belgrade recently.

Living, Yet Dead.

In a German law journal may be found a curious account of a woman who, though actually living, is legally dead. Some years ago she disappeared from her home, and after three years had elapsed the court formally pronounced her dead and turned over her property to her next of kin. Soon afterward she returned to her native place, and as there was no question as to her identity she naturally thought that she would have no difficulty in recovering her property. The court, however, flatly refused to comply with her request.

"You have been declared dead," it virtually said, "and it is impossible for us to regard you as living."

Thereupon the woman appealed to a higher court, but her labor was in vain, for the verdict of the lower court was upheld, and, moreover, an official notice was issued to the effect that the plaintiff, having formally been declared dead, could not now be restored to life, as the law understands that word, and must remain dead until doomsday.

Bullets and Botany.

A correspondent tells the London News that being at Palling, in Norfolk, he asked permission of a local marsh owner to walk over his meadows. "What for?" he wanted to know. "Oh, to do a little botanizing," was the reply. There was a pause while the landowner scratched his head. Then, slowly and suspiciously, "Not with a gun?"

John Wesley's Shrewish Wife.

One of his biographers declares that if he had searched the whole kingdom the evangelist John Wesley would hardly have found a woman more unsuitable than she whom he married. She did not even confine herself to her tongue in her attacks. More than once she laid violent hands on him. "Jack," said John Hampson to his son, "I was once on the point of committing murder. It was when I was in the north of Ireland and I went into a room and found Mrs. Wesley foaming with fury. Her husband was on the floor, where she had been trailing him by the hair of his head, and she herself was still holding in her hand venerable locks which she had plucked out by the roots. I felt," continued Hampson, who was a giant of a man, though not one of Wesley's warmest friends—"I felt as though I could have knocked the soul out of her."—Everybody's Magazine.

Moorish Baths.

In Spain, while the Moors were in the ascendency, luxurious hot baths were established. They were used in connection with the religious rites of Islam. The Islamites were required to bathe frequently. The manner of bathing was as follows:

After undressing, the bather is wrapped in a woolen coat, sandals are put on and he walks to the hot bath. After a thorough hot bath all parts of the body are rubbed. The soles of the feet are rubbed with pumice stone, then the body is anointed with oil and sprinkled with perfumed powders.

When the Moors were driven out of Spain the first thing the people did was to destroy the Moorish bath houses. This was done because of religious prejudice against the Moors.

WINTERS PUZZLED NILES SWATTERS

The Locals Took a Brace in Fielding and Played Brilliant Ball, Reark Being the Star—Houser Had Great Luck.

Talk about Deacon Philippe, Pedagogue Leever, Rube Waddell and the rest of the slab stars of the league, but it must be remembered that our own Morg. Winters scintillates a little himself. Morg. added so much to the laurels he has previously won this season that he had to borrow the wheelbarrow in the club house to cart them home. Holding the hard hitting Niles bunch to seven hits, with only two of them in any one round, giving but one free pass and beating them to the tune of 5 to 4, is a feat, the record of which Morg. ought to paste in his scrap book to pore over in the years to come. It was his masterly pitching that made yesterday's victory possible.

Morg. made the premier swatters from Niles town look like a string of sausages and had it not been for a couple of wobbles in the opener, would have held them until the ninth without a run. That tally in the hoodoo inning was earned on two clean hits. Outside of Gibby's two messes in the first the only other miscue was a wild throw by Houser of Patterson's grounder in the third—quite a revrsal of fielding from Thursday.

Manager Reark carried off the honors with a couple of sensational catches in middle field. After Glassburner had doubled in the second, with two down, Kommer hit a short liner to right center. It looked goood for a safety but the fleet footed Reark nailed it on a dead run. In the eighth he spoiled a long hit for Glassburner by taking his terrific line drive. Both of Reark's hits were timely, the first starting the batting rally in the first and the second scoring Heckathorn, who had found his old friend, Charley Crowe, for a terrific smash the first time he faced him. Big Heck failed to connect with Kommer's speedy ones.

Houser was also a star both with the willow and in the field. That smash of his in the fifth was as hard a center shot as has been seen here this season and with a fair amount of luck it would have been good for a homer. The leather traveled to left on a line, about 3 feet over Glassburner's head and struck the fence on the first bound. Glassburner's quick return held Houser at third and he was left there.

There was a noticeable difference in the fielding of the visitors their two bungles coming in rapid succession in the third, helping the locals to their first tally. Kommel, who did the twirling until his "baby act" and quit, had terrific speed and the best command of any south paw here this season. That drubbing he got in the fifth started his ill humor and when Umpire Davis' judgment on balls and strikes while Webb was up failed to please him, he took his marbles and sulked to the bench. This settled Kommer with the fans and when the veteran Charley Crowe went to the slab to finish the game he was lustily cheered.

Gibby made a mess of things in the opener and after it was over he was switched to left garden, Webb going to second and Houser to short, a wise move. Porter fanned for a starter but DeMoss hit safely. Patterson's grounder was foozled and DeMoss scooted on to third. Brown threw Patterson out at second on Ortlieb's grounder, while DeMoss was crossing the pan for the first tally of the game. Gibby made another fozzle on Murphy's bounder, a difficult chance, and recovered the sphere too late to nail him at first. Ortlieb tried for home and made it when Big Heck's throw to catch him got away. Murphy was caught napping off first for the third out.

The locals went out in order in their half and the second was unproductive of runs although Glassburner doubled with two hands down. Reark's great catch of Kommer's short liner spoiled their chances for a run.

Houser gave them another in the third on his wild throw of Patterson's grounder. He made a great stop but did not have time to straighten up for an accurate throw and the ball rolled past Heckathorn to the fence. Ortlieb's safety scored him.

Webb made the circuit in the third, getting a start when Nagel failed on his grounder. Webb tried to steal and Kreuger failed to hold Ortlieb's throw. Gibby placed a nice safety, good for two sacks, and Webb scored. Kommer fanned three men in this round.

There was an old time batting bee in the fifth that delighted the hearts of the fans who were beginning to fear that Kommel was too deep a mystery to be solved. Reark led off with a clean one and Webb advanced, him with a sacrifice. Winters came to the rescue with a hit and Reark counted. Gibby helped Winters along with another clean rap and Houser met one squarely on the nose. The leather shot to left on a line and Houser sprinted around to third while Glassburner was pulling it out of the grass at the fence. Bennett could not bring him in.

When Webb came to the bat in the seventh Kommel showed himself to be a rank quitter, leaving the game after Umpire Davis had called four bad ones. He was roasted by his fellow players for showing the white feather but the small amount of coaxing he got failed to induce him to resume the game. Charley Crowe, who twirled Thursday's trying contest gamely went to the rubber. Emmerling helped Webb to second with a single but he was nailed at third on Gibby's grounder. Houser ended the round with a fly to Patterson.

Morg gave Porter a free pass in the eighth but he was caught off first and run down by Emmeruing, Winters, Houser and Heck. DeMoss followed with a hit but it went for naught as Patterson went out to Heck.

Heck faced Crowe for the first time in the eighth and found him just as easy as he did in the opener. He cracked out a pretty double and scored on Reark's two sacker.

That hoodoo inning, the ninth, looked dangerous again for a brief time. Ortlieb opened with a screecher and stopped at second. Murphy fanned out but Kreuger scored him with a shot good for two. The best Nagel could do was a grounder to Houser. A hit would have tied the score but Glassburner failed, popping up to Houser.

CURRENCY LEGISLATION NEEDED

Going to Be a Difficult Task to Frame a Financial Measure That Will Be Reasonably Satisfactory.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 15.—Senator Cullom and Comptroller Ridgely discussed the financial situation with the president with special reference to the necessity of currency legislation. Comptroller Ridgely talked over with the president some of the features of his annual report to congress. The opinion is expressed frankly that it is going to be a difficult task to frame a financial measure that will be reasonably satisfactory to the exponents of the various schemes for improving the currency system. Thus far practically the only proposition upon which nearly all seem to be agreed is that the proposed legislation should include a provision for the depositing of customs receipts in national banks.

Comptroller Ridgely is going to Pittsfield, Mass., for a few days' rest, while Senator Cullom will start for Chicago.

Secretary Hitchcock talked with the president about the Littauer-Lyon glove contract case, among other things, but said, before leaving for Washington that it would not be proper for him to discuss the matter for publication at this time.

Former Secretary of the Treasury John G. Carlisle, Dennis T. Flynn, for several years delegate from Oklahoma in the house of representatives; Bishop Frederick Z. Rooker, who until recently was secretary of the papal delegation in Washington and Edward Lauterbach of New York, called on the president.

General Robert Shaw Oliver, recently appointed assistant secretary of war, will take luncheon with the President. The visit will afford the president and Secretary Oliver opportunity to discuss some important details of the departmental work.

Go Prepared.

In preparing for your summer outing a little forethought may save you no end of trouble. Mr. John H. Manly, a dry goods merchant, of Bellville, R. I., while packing an outfit for camping a few weeks on Narragansett Bay, put in a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for emergency use. The second day in camp his little boy was taken with cramp colic. The first dose of this remedy gave relief and the second dose effected a cure. Think of the pain and suffering this boy would have had to endure without this remedy at hand to relieve him. Such cases often result fatally. For sale by Alvin H. Bulger.

The Ways of Boston.

The crooked streets of Boston are said to follow the old paths along which the early settlers of the place drove their cows to and from their pasture on the common. However true this may be, it is certain that many of the main streets of the old city proper mark geographic features, formerly of importance, but now almost entirely forgotten. Atlantic avenue follows closely the original shore line; Washington street preserves in its curves the old road along the narrow neck of land which was the only connection for a long time between the mainland and Boston peninsula, with its three hills, which gave the name Tremont; Causeway street represents the dam to the earliest tidal mill pond, and Beacon street, the "mill dam," was built later to hold back the waters of Back bay at high tide to be used for power at low tide; the curve of Park square gives the shore line of this Back bay, where the fathers and grandfathers of the present generation used to put on their skates to glide over the area now occupied by Trinity church and the Public library.—F. P. Gulliver in Journal of Geography.

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

CHAPTER I.—Grenfall Lorry, a wealthy American globe trotter, stumbles into acquaintance with a charming foreign girl on the train from Denver to Washington. The pair are left behind when the car stops for repairs in West Virginia. II.—Lorry wires ahead to hold the train. He and the unknown girl ride twenty miles at a tearing pace in a mountain coach. Lorry knows it is a dangerous ride. There is no love-making, but a near approach to it as the rolling stage tumbles the passengers about. III.—Lorry dines with the foreign party, consisting of Miss Guggenslocker, Uncle Caspar and Aunt Yvonne. They are natives of Graustark, a country Lorry had never heard of before. IV.—Lorry shows the foreigners the sights of Washington. They leave for New York to sail on the Kaiser Wilhelm. Miss Guggenslocker naively calls Lorry her "Ideal American" and invites him to come and see her at Edelweiss. V.—Wildly infatuated, Lorry hurries to New York. The name Guggenslocker is not on the steamer list. He sees the steamer off. Miss G. waves him a kiss from the deck. VI.—Lorry joins his old friend, Harry Anguish, an American artist in Paris. Graustark and its capital Edelweiss, are located by a guide book. The Americans get no trace of the Guggenslockers there. VII.—Lorry sees his charmer driving in a carriage with a beautiful companion of her own sex. He gets a glance of recognition, but the carriage rolls on, leaving the mystery unsolved. Later he receives a note at his hotel signed Sophia Guggenslocker, inviting him to visit her next day. VIII.—In the evening Lorry and Anguish ramble about the grounds of the castle where dwells the court of the princess of Graustark. They overhear a plot to abduct the princess and resolve to capture the plotters red handed. IX.—Following the conspirators, Lorry finds himself in a room he heard them designate as that of the princess. X.—Lorry tells the princess of the plot. Mutual recognition: she is Miss Guggenslocker. Dannox, the guard, is in the abduction plot. He fells Lorry with a terrible blow. Anguish to the rescue. XI.—Lorry quartered in the castle. The princess visits him, but forbids all talk of love. XII.—Graustark is bankrupt and owes the neighboring princedom of Axphain $30,000,000. The creditor demands cash or the cession of the richest districts of Graustark.

"Has she chosen the course she will pursue?" asked Lorry as the countess concluded her story. His face was turned away.

"She cannot decide. We have wept together over this dreadful, this horrible thing. You do not know what it means to all of us, Mr. Lorry. We love her, and there is not one in our land who would sacrifice her to save this territory. As for Gabriel, Graustark would kill her before she should go to him. Still she cannot let herself sacrifice those northern subjects when by a single act she can save them. You see, the princess has not forgotten that her father brought this war upon the people, and she feels it her duty to pay the penalty of his error, whatever the cost."

"Is there no other to whom she can turn—no other course?" asked Lorry.

"There is none who would assist us, bankrupt as we are. There is a question I want to ask, Mr. Lorry. Please look at me. Do not stare at the fountain all the time. Why have you come to Edelweiss?" She asked the question so boldly that his startled embarrassment was an unspoken confession. He calmed himself and hesitated long before answering, weighing his reply. She sat close beside him, her clear gray eyes reading him like a book.

"I came to see a Miss Guggenslocker," he answered at last.

"For what purpose? There must have been an urgent cause to bring you so far. You are not an American banker?"

"I had intended to ask her to be my wife," he said, knowing that secrecy was useless and seeing a faint hope.

"You did not find Miss Guggenslocker?"

"No; I have not found her."

"And are you going home disappointed, Mr. Lorry, because she is not here?"

"I leave the answer to your tender imagination."

There was a long pause.

"May I ask when you expect to leave Graustark?" she asked somewhat timidly.

"Why do you wish to know?" he asked in turn.

"Because I know how hopeless your quest has been. You have found Miss Guggenslocker, but she is held behind a wall so strong and impregnable that you cannot reach her with the question you came to ask. You have come to that wall, and now you must turn back. I have asked how soon?"

"Not until your princess bids me take up my load and go. You see, my lady, I love to sit beneath the shadow of the wall you describe. It will require a royal edict to compel me to abandon my position."

"You cannot expect the princess to drive you from her country, you who have done so much for her. You must go, Mr. Lorry, without her bidding."

"I must?"

"Yes, for your presence outside that wall may make the imprisonment all the more unendurable for the one your love cannot reach. Do you understand me?"

"Has the one behind the wall instructed you to say this to me?" he asked miserably.

"She has not. I do not know her heart, but I am a woman and have a woman's foresight. If you wish to be kind and good to her, go."

"I cannot!" he exclaimed, his pent feelings bursting forth. "I cannot go!"

"You will not be so selfish and so cruel as to increase the horror of the wreck that is sure to come," she said, drawing back.

"You know, countess, of the life saving crews who draw from the wrecks of ships lives that were hopelessly lost. There is to be a wreck here. Is there to be a life saver? When the night is darkest, the sea wildest, when hope is gone, is not that the time when rescue is most precious? Tell me, you who know all there is of this approaching disaster."

"I cannot command you to leave Edelweiss. I can only tell you that you will have something to answer for if you stay," said the countess.

"Will you help me if I show to you that I can reach the wreck and save the one who clings to it despairingly?" he asked, smiling, suddenly calm and confident.

"Willingly, for I love the one who is going down in the sea. I have spoken to you seriously, though, and I trust you will not misunderstand me. I like you, and I like Mr. Anguish. You could stay here forever so far as I am concerned."

He thought long and intently over what she had said as he smoked his cigar on the great balcony that night. He saw in one moment the vast chasm between the man and the princess; in the next he laughed at the puny space.

Down on the promenade he could see the figures of men and women strolling in the moonlight. To his ears came the occasional laugh of a man, the silvery gurgle of a woman. The royal military band was playing in the stand near the edge of the great circle. There were gayety, comfort, charm and security about everything that came to his eyes and ears. Where was she? He had seen her in the afternoon and had talked with her, had walked with her. Their conversation had been bright, but of the commonplace kind. She had said nothing to indicate that she remembered the hour spent beside his couch a day or so before; he had uttered none of the words that struggled to rush from his lips—the questions, the pleadings, the vows. Where was she now? Not in that gay crowd below, for he had scanned every figure with the hawk's eye; closeted again, no doubt, with her ministers, wearying her tired brain, her brave heart into fatigue without rest.

Her court still trembled with the excitement of the daring attempt of the abductors and their swift punishment. Functionaries flocked to Edelweiss to inquire after the welfare of the princess, and indignation was at the highest pitch. There were theories innumerable as to the identity of the arch conspirator. Baron Dangloss was at sea completely. He cursed himself and everybody else for the hasty and ill timed execution of the hirelings. It was quite evident that the buzzing wonder and intense feeling of the people had for the moment driven out all thought of the coming day of judgment and its bitter atonement for all Graustark. Today the castle was full of the nobility, drawn to its walls by the news that had startled them beyond all expression. The police were at work, the military trembled with rage, the people clamored for the apprehension of the man who had been the instigator of this audacity. The general belief was that some brigand chief from the south had planned the great theft for the purpose of securing a fabulous ransom. Grenfall Lorry had an astonishing theory in his mind, and the more he thought it over the more firmly it was imbedded.

The warm, blue coils from the cigar wafted away into the night, carrying with them a myriad of tangled thoughts—of her, of Axphain, of the abductor, of himself, of everything. A light step on the stone floor of the shadowy balcony attracted his attention. He turned his head and saw the Princess Yetive. She was walking slowly toward the balustrade, not aware of his presence. There was no covering for the dark hair, no wrap about the white shoulders. She wore an exquisite gown of white, shimmering with the reflections from the moon that scaled the mountain top. She stood at the balustrade, her hands clasping a bouquet of red roses, her chin lifted, her eyes gazing toward the mountain's crest, the prettiest picture he had ever seen. The strange dizziness of love overpowered him. How long he reveled in the glory of the picture he knew not, for it was as if he looked from a dream. At last he saw her look down upon the roses, lift them slowly and drop them over the rail. They fell to the ground below. He thought he understood—the gift of a prince despised.

They were not twenty feet apart. He advanced to her side, his hat in one hand, his stick—the one that felled the Viennese—trembling in the other.

"I did not know you were here," she exclaimed in half frightened amazement. "I left my ladies inside."

He was standing beside her, looking down into the eyes.

"And I am richer because of your ignorance," he said softly. "I have seen a picture that shall never leave my memory—never! Its beauty enthralled, enraptured. Then I saw the drama of the roses. Ah, your highness, the crown is not always a mask."

"The roses were—were of no consequence," she faltered.

"I have heard how you stand between two suitors and that wretched treaty. My heart has ached to tell you how I pity you."

"It is not pity I need, but courage. Pity will not aid me in my duty, Mr. Lorry. It stands plainly before me, this duty, but I have not the courage to take it up and place it about my neck forever."

"You do not, cannot love this Lorenz?" he asked.

"Love him!" she cried. "Ach, I forget! You do not know him. Yet I shall doubtless be his wife." There was an eternity of despair in that low, steady voice.

"You shall not! I swear you shall not!"

"Oh, he is a prince! I must accept the offer that means salvation to Graustark. Why do you make it harder with torture which you think is kindness? Listen to me. Next week I am to give my answer. He will be here in this castle. My father brought this calamity upon Graustark; I must lift it from the people. What has my happiness to do with it?"

Her sudden strength silenced him, crushed him with the real awakening of helplessness. He stood beside her, looking up at the cold monastery, strangely conscious that she was gazing toward the same dizzy height.

"It looks so peaceful up there," she said at last.

"But so cold and cheerless," he added drearily. There was another long silence in which two hearts communed through the medium of that faraway sentinel. "They have not discovered a clew to the chief abductor, have they?" he asked in an effort to return to his proper sphere.

"Baron Dangloss believes he has a clew—a meager and unsatisfactory one, he admits—and today sent officers to Ganlook to investigate the actions of a strange man who was there last week, a man who styled himself the Count of Arabazon and who claimed to be of Vienna. Some Austrians had been hunting stags and bears in the north, however, and it is possible he is one of them." She spoke slowly, her eyes still bent on the home of the monks.

"Your highness, I have a theory, a bold and perhaps a criminal theory, but you will allow me to tell you why I am possessed of it. I am aware that there is a Prince Gabriel. It is my opinion that no Viennese is guilty, nor are the brigands to be accused of this masterpiece in crime. Have you thought how far a man may go to obtain his heart's desire?"

She looked at him instantly, her eyes wide with growing comprehension, the solution to the mystery darting into her mind like a flash.

"You mean"— she began, stopping as if afraid to voice the suspicion.

"That Prince Gabriel is the man who bought your guards and hired Geddos and Ostrom to carry you to the place where he could own you, whether you would or no," said Lorry.

"But he could never have forced me to marry him, and I should sooner or later have exposed him," she whispered argumentatively. "He could not expect me to be silent and submit to a marriage under such circumstances. He knows that I would denounce him even at the altar."

The prettiest picture he had ever seen.

"You do not appreciate my estimate of that gentleman."

"What is to become of me?" she almost sobbed in an anguish of fear. "I see now—I see plainly! It was Gabriel, and he would have done as you say." A shudder ran through her figure, and he tenderly whispered in her ear:

"The danger is past. He can do no more, your highness. Were I positive that he is the man—and I believe he is—I would hunt him down this night."

Her eyes closed happily under his gaze, her hand dropped timidly from his arm, and a sweet sense of security filled her soul.

"I am not afraid," she murmured.

"Because I am here?" he asked, bending nearer.

"Because God can bless with the same hand that punishes," she answered enigmatically, lifting her lashes again and looking into his eyes with a love at last unmasked. "He gives me a man to love and denies me happiness. He makes of me a woman, but he does not unmake me a princess. Through you he thwarts a villain; through you he crushes the innocent. More than ever, I thank you for coming into my life. You, and you alone, guided by the God who loves and despises me, saved me from Gabriel."

"I only ask"— he began eagerly, but she interrupted.

"You should not ask anything, for I have said I cannot pay. I owe to you all I have, but cannot pay the debt."

"I shall not again forget," he murmured.

"Tomorrow, if you like, I will take you over the castle and let you see the squalor in which I exist—my throne-room, my chapel, my banquet hall, my ballroom, my conservatory, my sepulcher. You may say it is wealth, but I shall call it poverty," she said.

"Tomorrow, if you will be so kind."

"Perhaps I may be poorer after I have saved Graustark," she said.

"I would to God I could save you from that!" he said.

"I would to God you could," she said. Her manner changed suddenly. She laughed gayly, turning a light face to his. "I hear your friend's laugh out there in the darkness. It is delightfully infectious."

CHAPTER XIV.

THE EPISODE OF THE THRONEROOM.

"THIS is the throneroom, Allode!" The Princess Yetive paused before two massive doors. It was the next afternoon, and she had already shown him the palace of a queen, the hovel of a pauper!

Through the afternoon not one word other than those which might have passed between good friends escaped the lips of either. He was all interest, she all graciousness. Allode, the sturdy guard, swung open the doors, drew the curtain and stood aside for them to pass. Into the quiet hall she led him, a princess in a gown of gray, a courtier in tweeds. Inside the doors he paused.

"And I thought you were Miss Guggenslocker," he said. She laughed with the glee of a child who has charmed and delighted through surprise.

"Am I not a feeble mite to sit on that throne and rule all that comes within its reach?" She directed his attention to the throne at the opposite end of the hall. "From its seat I calmly instruct gray haired statesmen, weigh their wisdom and pass upon it as if I were Demosthenes, challenge the evils that may drive monarchs mad and wonder if my crown is on straight."

"Let me be ambassador from the United States and kneel at the throne, your highness."

"I could not engage in a jest with the crown my ancestors wore, Mr. Lorry. It is sacred, thou thoughtless American. Come, we will draw nearer that you may see the beauty of the workmanship in that great old chair."

They stood at the base of the low, velveted stage on which stood the chair, with its high back, its massive arms and legs a-shimmer in the light from the lofty windows. It was of gold, inlaid with precious stones—diamonds, rubies, emeralds, sapphires and other wondrous jewels—a relic of ancient Graustark.

"I never sit in the center. Always at one side or the other, usually leaning my elbow on the arm. You see, the discussions are generally so long and dreary that I become fatigued. One time—I am ashamed to confess it—I went to sleep on the throne. That was long ago. I manage to keep awake very well of late. Do you like my throneroom?"

"And to think that it is yours!"

"It is this room that gives me the right to be hailed with 'Long live the princess!' Not with campaign yells and 'Hurrah for Yetive!' How does that sound? 'Hurrah for Yetive!'" She was laughing merrily.

"Don't say it! It sounds sacrilegious, revolting!"

"For over three years—since I was eighteen—I have been supreme in that chair. During the years of my reign prior to that time I sat there with my Uncle Caspar standing beside me. How often I begged him to sit down with me! There was so much room, and he certainly must have grown tired of standing. One time I cried because he frowned at me when I persisted in the presence of a great assemblage of nobles from Dawsbergen. It seems that it was a most important audience that I was granting, but I thought more of my uncle's tired old legs. I remember saying through my sobs of mortification that I would have him beheaded. You are to guess whether that startling threat created consternation or mirth."

"What a whimsical little princess you must have been, weeping and pouting and going to sleep!" he laughed. "And how sedate and wise you have become!"

"Thank you. How very nice you are. I have felt all along that some one would discern my effort to be dignified and sedate. They say I am wise and good and gracious, but that is to be expected. They said that of sovereigns as far back as the deluge, I've heard. Would you really like to see me in that old chair?" she asked.

"Ah, you are still a woman," he said, smiling at her pretty vanity. "Nothing could impress me more pleasantly."

She stepped carelessly and impulsively upon the royal platform, leaned against the arm of the throne, and with the charming blush of consciousness turned to him with the quickness of a guilty conscience, eager to hear his praise, but fearful lest he secretly condemned her conceit. His eyes were burning with the admiration that knows no defining, and his breath came quick and sharp through parted lips. He involuntarily placed a foot upon the bottom step, as if to spring to her side.

"You must not come up here!" she cried, shrinking back, her hands extended in fluttering remonstrance. "I cannot permit that at all!"

"I beg your pardon," he cried. "That is all the humble plebeian can say. That I may be more completely under this fairy spell, pray cast about yourself the robe of rank and take up the scepter. Perhaps I may fall upon my face."

"And hurt your head all over again," she said, laughing nervously. She hesitated for a moment, a perplexed frown crossing her brow. Then she jerked a rich robe from the back of the throne and placed it about her shoulders as only a woman can. Taking up the scepter, she stood before the great chair and, with a smile on her lips, held it above his head, saying softly:

"Graustark welcomes the American prince."

He sank to his knee before the real princess, kissed the hem of her robe and arose with face pallid. The chasm was now endless in its immensity. The princess gingerly seated herself on the throne, placed her elbow on the broad arm, her white chin in her hand, and tranquilly surveyed the voiceless American prince.

"You have not said 'Thank you,'" she said finally, her eyes wavering beneath his steady gaze.

"I am only thinking how easy it would be to cross the gulf that lies between us. With two movements of my body I can place it before you, with a third I can be sitting at your side. It is not so difficult after all," he said, hungrily eying the broad chair.

"No man, unless a prince, ever sat upon this throne," she said.

"You have called me a prince."

"Oh, I jested," she cried quickly, comprehending his intention. "I forbid you!"

Her command came too late, for he was beside her on the throne of Graustark! She sat perfectly rigid for a moment, intense fear in her eyes.

"Do you know what you have done?" she whispered miserably.

"Usurped the throne," he replied, assuming an ease and complacence he did not feel. Truly he was guilty of unprecedented presumption.

"You have desecrated—desecrated! Do you hear?" she went on, paying no attention to his remark.

"Peccavi. Ah, your highness, I delight in my sin! For once I am a power. I speak from the throne. You will not have me abdicate in the zenith of my glory? Be kind, most gracious one. Besides, did you not once cry because your uncle refused to sit with you? Had he been the possessor of a dangerous wound, as I am, and had he found himself so weak that he could stand no longer, I am sure he would have done as I have—sat down in preference to falling limp at your feet. You do not know how badly I am wounded," he pleaded, with the subtlest double meaning.

"Why should you wound me?" she asked plaintively. "You have no right to treat the throne I occupy as a subject for pranks and indignities. I did not believe you could be so forgetful." There was a proud and pitiful resentment in her voice that brought him to his senses at once. He had defiled her throne. In shame and humiliation he cried:

"I am a fool, an ingrate! You have been too gentle with me. For this despicable act of mine I cannot ask pardon, and it would be beneath you to grant it. I have hurt you, and I can never atone. I forgot how sacred is your throne. Let me depart in disgrace." He stood erect as if to forsake the throne he had stained, but she, swayed by a complete reversal of feeling, timidly, pleadingly touched his arm.

"Stay! It is my throne, after all. I shall divide it, as well as the sin, with you. Sit down again, I beg of you. For a brief spell I would rule beside a man who is fit to be a king, but who is a desecrator. There can be no harm, and no one shall be the wiser for this sentimental departure from royal custom. We are children anyhow, mere children."

With an exclamation of delight he resumed his position beside her. His hand trembled as he took up hers to carry it to his lips. "We are children—playing with fire," he murmured, this ingrate, this fool!

She allowed her hand to lie limply in his, her head sinking to the back of the chair. When her hand was near his feverish lips, cool and white and trusting, he checked the upward progress. Slowly he raised his eyes to study her face, finding that hers were closed, the semblance of a smile touching her lips as if they were in a happy dream.

The lips! The lips! The lips! The madness of love rushed into his heart; the expectant hand was forgotten; his every hope and every desire measured itself against his discretion as he looked upon the tempting face. Could he kiss those lips but once his life would be complete.

With a start she opened her eyes, doubtless at the command of the masterful ones above. The eyes of blue met the eyes of gray in a short, sharp struggle, and the blue went down in surrender. His lips triumphed slowly, drawing closer and closer as if restrained and impelled by the same emotion—arrogant love.

"Open your eyes, darling," he whispered, and she obeyed. Then their lips met—her first kiss of love!

She trembled from head to foot, perfectly powerless beneath the spell. Again he kissed a princess on her throne. At this second kiss her eyes grew wide with terror, and she sprang from his side, standing before him like one bereft of reason.

"Oh, my God! What have you done?" she wailed. He staggered to his feet, dizzy with joy.

"Ha!" cried a gruff voice from the doorway, and the guilty ones whirled to look upon the witness to their blissful crime. Inside the curtains, with carbine leveled at the head of the American, stood Allode, the guard, his face distorted with rage. The princess screamed and leaped between Lorry and the threatening carbine.

"Allode!" she cried in frantic terror.

He angrily cried out something in his native tongue and she breathlessly, imploringly replied. Lorry did not understand their words, but he knew that she had saved him from death at the hand of her loyal, erring guard. Allode lowered his gun, bowed low and turned his back upon the throne.

"He—he would have killed you," she said tremulously, her face the picture of combined agony and relief. She remembered the blighting kisses and then the averted disaster.

RALPH CONNOR, NOVELIST.

How the Author of "Sky Pilot" Got His Nom de Plume.

The new Canadian writer Ralph Connor, whose books, "Black Rock" and "Sky Pilot," have placed him in the very front rank of Canadian story tellers, in private life is the Rev. Charles W. Gordon, a Presbyterian minister of Winnipeg.

Ralph Connor came of stolid Scottish stock. His father, the Rev. Daniel Gordon, went to Canada in the early forties, finally settling in the village of Glengarry, in the Indian lands, and there the author was born forty-three years ago. He was educated at Toronto university, subsequently taking a three years' course in theology at Knox college.

The nom de plume of Ralph Connor came to the Rev. Mr. Gordon in a rather curious way. He was discouraged over the appropriation that had been made by a certain missionary committee for work in the mining camps of western Canada. Disheartened, he went to the editor of the Westminster, a weekly published in Toronto. This editor, an old college mate, told him to wage his campaign for mission funds through his columns.

He wrote his first sketch. It is now the first chapter of "Black Rock." The editor was delighted with it, but what should the author be called? The signing of his real name at the time might have provoked criticism from the mission board. He telegraphed to Mr. Gordon asking what name should be signed.

Mr. Gordon received the telegram late in the evening, just as he was finishing a report to the missionary society. His eye lit upon the heading of it, which was abbreviated as follows: "Brit.-Can. Nor. West. Miss. Soc." The two syllables "Can" and "Nor" struck his fancy, and he telegraphed his reply, "Sign Cannor." By some slip of the telegraph operator the message reached Toronto, "Sign Connor." The editor prefixed the name Ralph, and so Ralph Connor was found.

Ralph Connor's books have been wonderfully successful, and his work as an author, so strangely begun, has brought substantial rewards as well as fame. Besides "Black Rock" and "Sky Pilot" he has written "The Man From Glengarry," "Glengarry School Days" and "Beyond the Marshes."

HORSESHOERS' OUTING A BIG SUCCESS

A Large Gathering of the Fraternity Has An Enjoyable Day at Columbian Park.

The first annual picnic and outing of the local branches of the Master Horseshoers' National Protective association, of America, was held today at Columbian park with members in attendance from this city, Wellsville Chester, Lisbon, Beaver, Hookstown Salem and other points. The arrangements were in charge of committees from the organization in this city and were most effectually carried out, providing a day of unalloyed pleasure for all in attendance. A program of sports and other amusements was provided and there were other diversions for those who did not care to witness the contests.

While the day was given over to pure enjoyment, many matters pertaining to the welfare of the organization were discussed and there was an interchange of ideas and opinions upon pending matters that will result in much good when the time for action arrives.

The visiting members will leave for their homes this evening.

It is sure to command the trade of its district and neighborhood and it is grocery stores located as this is that make the money. Location overcomes the necessity of meeting ruinous competition and with less expenses and with regular trade the merchant prospers when his contemporary in the city's center does five times the business and makes less. We have 25 times as many more properties. Call and see us about any or all of them. We will sell on terms to suit your income. Why pay rent when you can own a home? Don't you know that by paying a dollar on each $100 you owe will wipe out the debt and interest in ten years? For instance, fifteen dollars paid monthly for ten years will pay off a $1,500 debt and interest. It's not how much money one spends but how one spends it that makes one's financial weal or woe.

terms with several of the male members of the company. She attended the exhibitions each night, and when the engagement here was finished was well acquainted with a number of the showmen. It is thought she carried on a correspondence with some one of them after they left the city, and was to have received a letter the day before she disappeared.

Last Saturday Mabel visited her home in the country, but said never a word concerning her intention to leave East Liverpool. She told her mother that her employer had promised to raise her salary, and that she would return to her work on Monday morning. From that time until the present moment not a word has been received from her either by her own folks or at the boarding house in this city. Mrs. Geomo came to town yesterday on a matter of business, and as has been her custom always, called at the home of Mrs. Cunningham to see her daughter. She was dumbfounded and nearly fainted when informed that the girl had not been there since leaving over a week ago to visit her parents in the country. The distracted mother went directly home and reported the affair to her husband, who lost no time in acquainting the police with the circumstances.

It was thought the girl might have gone to Alliance to visit relatives named Brandon, but on account of the carnival episode the most feasible theory was that she had deserted her family and friends and joined the show. No one seems to know where the carnival company has been exhibiting during the present week, but it is thought if this can be found out no difficulty will be encountered in locating the missing girl. A message was sent to Alliance this afternoon and an answer is expected this evening.

The entire eGomo family are heartbroken over the unforutnate occurrence, an dare leaving nothing undone with the aid of the police which will shed light upon the girl's whereabouts. The circumstances are particularly sad when it is known that an aged uncle to whom the girl was greatly attached, is lying at the point of death at the home of her parents, and is continually calling for her. The parents are hoping that the girl will be found at Alliance.

AN INJUNCTION SUIT OVER A STAIRWAY

May Interfre With the Construction of Columbiana's New Bank Building.

Lisbon, Aug. 15.—(Special)—Mrs. C. Deemer, of Columbiana, has filed a petition in court, asking a temporary injunction to restrain the First National bank of Columbiana from removing or interfereing with an outside stairway in the construction of a new brick block on which work has been started. Mrs. Meemer owns a frame building adjoining the bank company's premises, and the stairway is partly on the lot recently purchased by the bank.

The plaintiff says that about the year 1876 the owner of the lot now held by the banking company built a two story office building near the Deemer building, leaving just room enough for the stairway between the two structures, the stairway being constructed jointly by the owners of each building, the plaintiff furnishing two feet of the space, and the owner of the adjoining premises one foot and four inches. Mrs. Deemer says the stairway was used jointly from that time and that, relying on a continuance of the arrangement, she removed a stairway for the other side and erected a brick block in such a manner that the stairway cannot be replaced. She alleges that the proposed bank building will make the present stairway useless.

Joan C. Devine, of Alliance, has the contract for the new bank building, which, it is said, will cost nearly $30,000. Work on the foundation is under way.

JOHN STOVALL RELEASED FROM JAIL

Thought Mentally Sound Once More. His Derangement Due to Drink.

John Stovall, who has been an inmate of the city jail for several days, was released from custody today, and it is thought he has entirely recovered from his recent mental derangement. Stovall has been confined in a cell ever since last Tuesday afternoon when he was taken in charge by Officer Morris, who thought his actions peculiar. He was located on lower Fourth street, where he had started a little religious revival all by himself, and was in the midst of a fervent prayer.

For several days he was entirely unbalanced, and cut up many funny capers at the jail. He was not violent at any time, however, and Dr. Ogden pronounced his mental condition due entirely to the effects of strong drink. His nervous system had given completely out, and it required the strongest kind of medicine to restore him to anything like a normal state. Yesterday he had intervals of good sound reason. He would be in the midst of a conversation, and all of a sudden would become as wild as an ape. This morning, however, his reason returned, and he was as bright as ever.

The authorities interested the township trustees in the unfortunate man's case several days ago, and it had been arranged to take him to the asylum this morning, but he was so much improved that the determination was reconsidered and he was given his liberty.

CITY RECORDER'S $12,000 SHORTAGE

Case of a Sistersville Official Accused of Embezzlement Is On Trial.

Sistersville, W. Va. August 15.—The case of J. H. Pine, former city recorder, who has been in jail for some time on a charge of embezzlement, came up at Middlebourne in the circuit court yesterday morning, but was continued on account of the jury not having been properly drawn. The judy adjourned as soon as possible after the plea of abatement had been passed upon and a new panel of jurors was drawn. This morning the case came up again for trial and the selection of the jury is being made. The case will now be tried and it is likely that some time will be consumed as all the civil business for the present term has been continued and only the misdemeanors will be tried. The case against Pine promises to be an interesting one. An expert accounting of his books showed that he was over $12,000 short in his accounts.

His method of extracting the money from the city collector was a unique one. He would have a number of small bills passed through council, and later take them to the city treasurer, raised several figures higher and have the check made out to himself, saying that he desired to send money orders to the people to whom the money was due. The name of one person appeared on the books so frequently that the city treasurer became suspicious and with the mayor made a superficial examination, sufficient to tell that Pine had worked a very slick scheme and had secured a large amount of money. He was then arrested and later an examination of his books made with the result mentioned. There are several charges against Pine and it is likely that he will be tried on all of them.

JACKSONS HAVE NOT YET BEEN ARRESTED

Chief of Police John Wyman and his force, who have been on the lookout for two members of the Jackson family since yesterday morning, have not succeeded in locating the men. It is said that one of the parties wanted got wind of the intention of the police and has departed for Sebring. It is thought the other one is in hiding some where about the city, and the police expect to capture him soon.

The Jacksons are suspected of being implicated in a number of depredations which have been committed in and about Chester within the past few weeks, and the farmers of that section are greatly exercised at the frequency with which the thefts are committed. Chickens, sheep and even calves have been stolen, and until recently no trace of the guilty parties could be obtained. Suspicion has at last pointed in the direction of the Jacksons, and an investigation will be made. Their actions are said to have been peculiar, and so noticeable has it become that the interested parties are sure to be prosecuted if they can be apprehended.

Councilman J. C. Cunningham, who is a heavy loser at the hands of the thieves, whoever they are, was at the mayor's office early yesterday morning, and enlisted Chief Wyman and Officer Dawson in the search. Mr. Cunningham and several other farmers residing in the neighborhood of Chester, have exhausted every effort to secure some clue upon which to work. They say the thefts are becoming more numerous and of greater importance every night and the state of affairs is becoming alarming. Mr. Cunningham lost several sheep, and it is likely he will prosecute the thieves without mercy if they can be found.

THE NOBLE RED MAN.

White Man, as a Rule, Excels the Indian in His Own Chosen Field.

A careful study of the history of the early days of this region of country does away with several preconceived and very commonly accepted ideas. One of these is as to the primeval excellence of the Indian character. Once the red man of Cooper's novels was supposed to be the typical savage, but now we know much better than to believe that. If ever such Indians lived they were the exception rather than the rule. Another false notion, and one which obtains even to this day in many quarters, relates to the supposed superiority of the Indian to the white man in all matters pertaining to woodcraft and the outdoor life.

We have heard much about the untiring muscles and eagle-like eyes of the red-skinned scout. His hardihood, his bravery, his superhuman skill in following a trail, his bold defiance of the elements in winter or summer, his matchless worth as a hunter, and so on. To read what some have written one is led to think that in comparison the wisest and shrewdest white man was a booby and ignoramus. Nothing could be more misleading. In the first place, the much vaunted skill of the red man has always been largely overrated. He was of necessity a wise son of the forest, but never the supernatural being he has been said to be. In the second place, the white man has never as a rule shown himself in any sense inferior to the Indian in cunning of woodcraft.

The fact is that the white man, under similar conditions, has excelled the red man in his own chosen field. Give a typical frontiersman of other days the same chance for outdoor education which fell to the lot of the Indian and he never failed to outclass him. In endurance, skill and shrewdness he excelled every time. What was true in olden days is true now. The white man has spent many summers in the last 20 years and more in the regions where the red man still lives, and he knows full well, from much experience, that the white woodsmen are far the superiors of their red rivals. In every sense do they excel. The better stuff of which they are made makes them able to meet the lower race on its own ground and vanquish it. Study and observation have driven the halo of glory away from the Indian brow, and he is seen to be what he is—an inferior being. C. L. SMITH.

STRANGE CHAPTER IN OHIO CRIME

Appears to Have Flourished At An Alarming Rate For 25 Years—The Old Man, Who Was the Tool of Others, in Hiding and in Terror.

Columbus, August 15.—"Old Jack" Page, the man who in his eighteenth year made a confession which not only forms a chapter of the most interesting kind of criminal history running back for a quarter of a century, but which also resulted in the indictment of 25 more or less prominent citizens of Williams and Fulton counties, on charges of arson, dares not go back to the scene of many of his own and neighbors' crimes.

His life would be snuffed out almost as quickly as would that of Captain B. J. Ewen, should the witness in the feud cases of famous Breathitt county, Ky., appear upon the streets of his home city unguarded.

Page would encounter men not desperate by nature, but men now indifferent to the fate which has sent a dozen to state's prison and which will land others there before long.

Chief Deputy Fire State Marshal H. H. Hollenbeck, who, after the most painstaking and searching investigation, worked up the cases in Williams and Fulton counties, spent many days in close contact with Page, and though accustomed to man's criminal side, the fire marshal became much attached to the old fellow, and in accord with his promises to Page, when the confession was made, has been careful at all times to guard him from assassination.

Just now Page is on a farm near Chardon, where he is watched night and day. The precaution is not taken to prevent his escape but to protect his life.

Several of the men indicted as the result of Page's confession have threatened to kill him and one or two have boasted openly to the officials that they would shoot the old man if they had half a chance.

A report has been circulated that Page was kept on the farm of the fire marshal near Chardon. Deputy Hollenbeck would not deny this yesterday.

"I won't say on whose farm he is," was his only comment.

Property worth probably $150,000 destroyed in 25 years' time is the known record of the gang in the northwestern part of the state. Farmers, merchants and stockraisers, the best known men and church workers in the community, are included among those brought to trial by Deputy Hollenbeck, with the assistance of Deputy G. Fox, of Columbus, Walter Payne, of Toledo and H. R. Patchen, of Cleveland.

Though reduced to want, without clothing and food and refused aid by the men for whom he had made thousands of dollars, Page doubtless would have remained loyal until his death but for the persistent and skillful fire marshals.

He suffered long and much, yet his lips were sealed and the men who had fired not only their own homes and business houses, but the property of others, for the insurance money, for years worked with impunity and kept their heads as high as their fellow-citizens or neighboring farmers.

It is unlikely that the criminal annals of any state can show a parallel to conditions which have been unearthed in Ohio.

Page confessed to his own implication in over a score of fires in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. One of his fires was a $35,000 affair. Most of his fires were in West Unity and Alvordtown, Williams county. But Page was only a tool. H. B. Morrison, 54 years of age, the son of a banker at West Unity, a member of one of the oldest and most respected families in that section, was the ringleader. Morrison is now serving a ten-year sentence in the penitentiary here. For years he was a cattle buyer and farmer but after drinking heavily became a saloonkeeper. His wife and chillren are held in the highest esteem, just as Morrison, himself, was once.

Morrison was a contractor—that is, he contracted to fire buildings. For 30 years he was in this unique business. He often sub-let his contracts, the same as legitimate work is let out, and "Old Jack" Page usually secured the work, for he was hard up most of the time, and his prices were not high.

Page made thousands for Morrison, but when he went to Morrison less than a year ago and told him he had no money, hardly any place to live and agreed to eternal silence upon their crimes, Morrison coldly rejected the proposal and dared the old man to tell anything.

Though fifty-three indictments have been returned in Williams and Fulton counties, the end is not yet in sight, for through the confessions secured, other convictions are confidently expected, especially in Toledo.

Just a few days ago, Deputy Hollenbeck secured a confession from a Toledo man that he had hired an incendiary to burn his building many years ago. If this man is indicted, as he will unquestionably be, it will cause a sensation in Toledo, for the man is very well known, having held a public office.

DEMENTED WOMEN HAS LEFT HER HOME

Mrs. Henry Ehring, of Industry, Was Last Seen Walking Toward This City.

Mrs. Luella Ehring, wife of Henry Ehring, a well-to-do citizen of Industry, disappeared from her home Thursday morning while the family were engaged in eating breakfast, and has not been found. She is slightly demented and has on prior occasions disappeared in a similar manner. Neighbors saw her walking toward East Liverpool bareheaded. Recently she hid $100 and was unable to remember where she buried it. She had about $25 with her when she disappeared.

She is 42 years of age, dark complected, wears glasses and was last seen at Riverview. This is not the first time she has left home, but previous to this she has always been found with relatives. Her mind is worse affected at the present time, owing to the fact that she has hidden in the ground somewhere near her home twenty five-dollar gold pieces and has forgotten the place of hiding.

Anyone knowing of her whereabouts is requested to send word to Henry Ehring, Industry, or Attorney W. G. Mellon, Beaver.

SALINEVILLE

Salineville, August 14.—Rev. F. E. Dean, pastor of the U. P. church, accompanied by his wife, took the train Thursday morning for a visit to the home of his parents near Xenia. They will be absent about two weeks.

Mrs. William Dodds took the train Thursday for the campmeeting near Mt. Vernon.

An enjoyable time was had last Saturday afternoon at the home of aged Mrs. Isabella Dallas, on Cemetery hill, when a number of ladies of the missionary society of the U. P. church met with well filled baskets. The aged mother was delighted and all spent a pleasant afternoon at her beautiful home.

GUILTY OF MURDER

Jett and White Convicted of the Assassination of J. B. Marcum.

BOTH ARE SENTENCED FOR LIFE

A Motion for a New Trial Has Been Heard—Charges Have Been Preferred Against a Juror for Attempting to Hang the Jury.

Cynthiana, Ky., Aug. 15.—Curtis Jett and Thomas White were found guilty of the murder of J. B. Marcum at Jackson, May 4, and sentenced for life. At their trial, held in Jackson, last month, one juror hung to the last on the question of guilt, and this time one juror hung the jury for 24 hours on the question of sentence. The first ballot was 11 to 1 for conviction of both defendants and the second was unanimous for both. The first ballot on the sentence was seven for death and five for life imprisonment. The seperate ballots on Jett's case stood 11 for hanging and one for life sentence, and this result was not changed in subsequent votes, Jasper King, a former deputy sheriff, voting alone until a compromise was reached for life sentence for both.

During the afternoon Judge Osborne heard the motion of the defense for a new trial. The grounds set forth consist of objections to evidence admitted for the commonwealth and rejected for the defense, and also to the ruling out of affidavits made by the defendants saying that a fair and impartial trial could not be had on account of the military display which inflamed the public mind.

Charges have been preferred against Juror Jasper King for attempting to hang the jury. King lives in this city, and was until two years ago a deputy sheriff of the county and a man who has been highly esteemed.

County Attorney Webster stated that he would bring the charges against King to the court's attention today.

No movements have been made as yet as to the retention of the soldiers, and Colonel Williams, the officer in command, said that the matter was in the hands of himself and Judge Osborne. The prisoners are still at the jail, guarded by soldiers.

BOARD OF VISITORS REPORTS

Satisfaction Is Expressed With the Conduct of the Academy Under Captain Brownson.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Recommendations of far-reaching importance to the future of the naval academy are contained in the annual report of the board of visitors of that institution which, by order of the acting secretary of the navy, was made public. The board recommends that candidates be admitted to Annapolis on certificates from certain schools approved by the academic board; that candidates be nominated a year in advance of the entrance examination; that graduation at the end of four years be final, relieving midshipmen of the necessity of returning for two years after graduation for further examination; that graduates be commissioned as soon as graduated; that the teaching force of the academy be increased in view of the recent great increase in numbers of midshipmen, and that a department of physical training be established, thereby placing this matter under the special supervision of a highly qualified expert.

The board regrets the expedient recently adopted of graduating the first class in February instead of in June, and recommends that the first class hereafter be permitted to carry its course to the normal conclusion.

Keen satisfaction is expressed by the board with the conduct of the academy under the superintendency of Captain Brownson. The suggestion is made that some continuity of existence be given the board of visitors.

Strikers Issue a Reply.

Cripple Creek, Col., Aug. 15.—The strike committee issued a reply to the mine owners' manifesto which declared their intention to reopen their mines and called upon the men to return to work. The reply says that the miners quit work for a principle and will not go back until ordered to do so by their officers. It adds: "Regarding the offers of protection of men who desire to return to work, no protection will be necessary, because the miners are law-abiding men and no trouble is anticipated."

Captain Pershing Reports.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Captain John H. Pershing, Fifteenth cavalry, who was in command for several years in the Moro country and made the last campaign against the chiefs, reported at the war department. He is a member of the general staff.

Public Land Withdrawn from Entry.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The commissioner of the general land office withdrew from entry 150,000 acres of public land in Northwestern Colorado, to be used in connection with the White River irrigation project.

Destructive Hail Storm.

Owensboro, Ky., Aug. 15.—A section of two miles square in Davis county was visited by a destructive hail storm. The damage to crops and property is estimated at over $50,000. Many acres of tobacco were ruined.

FEARFUL SCENES IN JAMAICA

Thousands Seek Shelter in the Buildings That Have Survived the Hurricane.

Kingston, Jamaica, Aug. 15.—There are heartrending scenes all over the eastern and northern portions of the island of Jamaica. At Port Antonio thousands of homeless and starving people have sought shelter in the old prison and the few other buildings which survived the hurricane. Those who could not be accommodated are cowering in the lee of ruined walls and dismantled piazzas. The railroad sheds and waiting rooms are filled with women and children. The merchants of the place are feeding the hungry to the best of their ability, but the majority are depending upon green, unripe bananas knocked down by the storm. The bananas are boiled in kerosene tins over open fires made from the debris of the destroyed buildings. This is their sole food supply and it will be exhausted in 9 or 10 days.

Similar conditions prevail at Annotta bay, Buff bay, Orange bay, Port Maria, Manchionwal, Morant bay, Bowden and other smaller seaports.

In the interior the distress is equally acute. Scarcely a peasant's home is standing. Even the dwellings of the planters, which are built of substantial stone, have been unroofed, with few exceptions.

The misery of the peasants' families is indescribable. Their homes and belongings have been literally blown away and they are contriving rude shelters from fallen trees, palm boughs and banana leaves. Owing to the continued unsettled weather with occasional torrential rains these shelters afford practically no protection.

It is now estimated that the loss on the island will reach $15,000,000.

Special Bulletin by Weather Bureau.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The following special bulletin was issued by the weather bureau: The tropical storm is still in the gulf of Mexico and apparently near the middle of western portion. Some slight indications of its presence have been afforded by sea swells that have been reported from Pensacola to Corpus Christi. No reports have been received from Yucatan, but the director of the Mexican Central observatory reports that the storm is apparently in the center of the gulf and moving toward the coast of Tamaulipas with diminishing intensity. Tamaulipas is the state directly south of the extreme southern portion of Texas. It is still considered dangerous for vessels to sail to or from west gulf ports, but safe on the east coast for vessels sailing eastward. Hurricane warnings have been ordered displayed on the Texas coast for dangerous winds southward and high winds on the coast.

May Visit Anthracite Region.

Wilkesbarre, Aug. 15.—Louis Hammerling, a well-known Republican politician and labor leader of this city, returned from Oyster Bay, where he saw President Roosevelt relative to having the latter attend the meeting of Republican clubs which will be held in this city next month. The president consented to see a committee representing the convention committee of arrangements at Oyster Bay on Wednesday next Aug. 19. It is said that President Roosevelt is greatly interested in the anthracite coal regions and is desirous of visiting this section of the state, and the committee feel confident that he will accept their invitation and make an address to the miners.

Counterfeiters' Den Raided.

Wheeling, Aug. 15.—Constable E. M. Hall and Prosecuting Attorney Rills raided a counterfeiters' den in Ritchie county, and while the counterfeiters were able to escape their moulds, ladles and metal pots fell into the hands of the officers. The mint was situated on a high, brushy ridge between Cornwallis and the Pleasant county line. The officers believe that they have broken in on a dangerous gang and are confident that the miscreants will shortly fall into their hands. They have been plying their nefarious trade for months and Ritchie county is full of the spurious coin.

Three Men Seriously Burned.

Pittsburg, Aug. 15.—Three men were seriously burned at the Edith furnace of the American Steel and Wire company, in Preble avenue, Allegheny, through the explosion of a "tap." They are: Patrick Hare, head furnaceman, of No. 3 Cross street, burned about the head, face and arms; Daniel McCarthy, helper, of No. 17 Furnace row, burned so severely about the head that he may be blinded; Michael Onick, helper, of Deer Lyn street, burned about the head and body.

Cornerstone to Be Blessed

Washington, Aug. 15.—The cornerstone of the new Dominican monastery on Bunker Hill road, in the suburbs of this city, is to be blessed on Sunday. The Most Rev. Archbishop Falconio, apostolic delegate, will perform the ceremony. The sermon will be preached by the Right Rev. William H. O'Connell, bishop of Portland, Me., formerly rector of the American college at Rome. Distinguished clergymen from all parts of the United States have signified their intention to be present.

Boodler Sentenced.

St. Louis, Aug. 15.—Harry A. Faulkner, former member of the house of delegates, who was convicted of perjury in connection with the suburban boodle deal, was sentenced in the criminal court to three years in the penitentiary. Immediately after Faulkner's attorneys took an appeal to the supreme court and Faulkner furnished bond in the sum of $10,000.

GENERAL ST. CLAIR'S DEFEAT

Attacked by Indians and His Army Suffers Terrible Loss.

SOLDIERS RESISTED BRAVELY

Slaughter Was Frightful and Remnant of Brave Band Forced to Retreat.

NEVER RECOVERED FROM BLOW

On the wall of the writer's library, in company with a number of other valuable relics, hangs an old rusty bayonet which lay for many years embedded in the soil at the site of St. Clair's ever memorable defeat at what is now known at Fort Recovery, in Darke county, O. Its browned blade is never looked upon without a thought of that terrible battle coming vividly to mind.

In 1790 General Harmar had gone out against the western Indians, but had met with a sad repulse. Then President Washington determined to send against them such an army and such a man as should insure victory, for the Ohio frontier was crowding up with settlers and they must be freed from the terror of the scalping knife. He selected his intimate friend, Major General Arthur St. Clair, a commander whose bravery and skill none could gainsay. To him the president committed this important command, taking extra pains to point out to him Harmar's mistakes and repeatedly cautioning him against their repetition.

Under these instructions St. Clair set to work on his first task, that of organizing his army, always the most difficult and disheartening of a commander's duties. In April, 1791, the general had begun this work, his headquarters being at Pittsburg. Levies of men, regular troops and militia were being forwarded to that place from several quarters, and arms and supplies were being gathered as rapidly as the slow-going officers charged with that duty could effect it. But this was far too slow to allow of the plans for the campaign being promptly carried out. The quartermaster's work was so poorly done that the army, which should have moved westward from Fort Washington, on the site of Cincinnati, whither it had moved in May, by the beginning of August, was kept waiting for several weeks. It then marched six miles to Fort Ludlow and remained till Sept. 17. As it was then 2,300 strong, not counting the militia, march was made to the Great Miami, where Fort Hamilton was built.

Then they proceeded 44 miles further, built Fort Jefferson, remained there till Oct. 24, and set out on the hard march through the forest. The object was to erect a fort on the present site of Fort Wayne, Ind., and from that as a center overawe the western tribes. The forward movement from Fort Jefferson had not gone many days when 300 militiamen, finding the life not to their liking, deserted and took the back track. Somewhere along the road were the supply trains, and St. Clair, fearing the deserters would confiscate them, halted and sent back his best organization, the First infantry, to convoy the provisions and if possible bring back the deserters. It was decided to build a fort here while waiting the return of the expedition. Nov. 4 was the day set for the beginning of this work, but the plan was never carried out, and for a good reason.

Early in the morning of that day the men were just being dismissed from parade when the Indians attacked the advanced militia post. The men gave way and ran back in confusion on the regular camp, throwing the main body into such great confusion that they never recovered from it while the conflict lasted. The hostile Indians were met with a heavy fire, which partially checked their onset, but they returned it with such terrible vigor that the whites soon saw that the field was lost. Nevertheless a brave and determined resistance was kept against the repeated and increasing effective attacks of the enemy for three hours. During this time the slaughter of St. Clair's men was awful. Especially heavy was the fatality among the officers, who were compelled by the lack of discipline among the men to expose themselves to an unusual degree in trying to save the day. Charge after charge was made, with some temporary signs of success, but the foe returned like hornets each time to the fray, and no definite advantage was gained.

At last, after three hours had elapsed, the redskins got in on two sides of the army at once and completely outflanked its position. Then a retreat was ordered. Pursuit was made by the victors for about four miles. Then the shattered little remnant of the once brave array kept up its sad flight unharrassed. The camp and the artillery were abandoned, and in the flight the despondent and terrorized troopers filled the road with their accoutrements. The retreat began at half-past 9 in the morning and at dark that evening the army reached Fort Jefferson, 27 miles away. Here was found the First regiment on its way back to the front, not having found either the deserters or the supplies.

When the news of this great disaster reached the east the chagrin and humiliation of the people were painful. Searching for a scapegoat, they fell on General St. Clair like a pack of wolves. From one end of the country to the other there arose a deafening and discordant clamor of abuse and venomous criticism. Seldom has it ever fallen to so excellent a man to be so shamefully attacked. The gross injustice of it all, added to the rankling bitterness of defeat, was a blow from which General St. Clair never rallied. From this moment his life was a darkened and sad one. Through it all he retained the confidence and esteem of Washington. Congress appointed a special committee which thoroughly investigated the disaster and fully exonorated the general from any blame. From this the secretary of war appealed and a second investigation affirmed the verdict of the first. The blame was laid on those whose delays in furnishing the army with supplies retarded its movements, and on the fault of sending out a commander on so dangerous a tour of service with so poorly disciplined and provided a force.

General St. Clair's conduct throughout the battle was brave in the extreme. He was an ideal commander, instructing, encouraging and leading his men. In everything he was alert and at his post, even though he was wasted with a painful disease. So ill was he that when all his four horses had been killed, if a poor old pack horse had not been provided for him he could not have left the stricken field unless his men had carried him.

What he did was also shared in by officers and men, but the enemy had the advantage, and they were too strong to be overcome. So defeat came—a defeat over which it is said that President Washington swore most intemperately when the disastrous news came. Owing to the lack of provisions the army left Fort Jefferson and continued the retreat back to Fort Washington. There the reports were sent in and the campaign was definitely and sadly abandoned. A brass cannon was found buried on the battlefield in 1830 and many other relics have been picked up, among them the old bayonet on my library wall.

GRAVE UNDER THEATER.

Workmen Come Across Remains of a Pioneer.

Workmen at the Grand opera house removal on Diamond street, Pittsburg, have found the headstone and grave of a pioneer buried there in 1834.

At a depth of three feet under the surface the diggers encountered a flat stone three feet long and one foot wide lying in a horizontal position and when the accumulated clay of many years had been removed from its surface it was found to be the headstone of a grave bearing the following inscription:

In Memory of
MARY M'DOWELL,
Died May 28, 1834, aged 78 years.

Previous to 1840 the present site of the Grand opera house was occupied by the Second Presbyterian church and in the rear was the cemetery of the congregation. The disastrous conflagration that swept over that section in 1845 consumed the church edifice and many of the surrounding buildings. The congregation did not rebuild, and the property was sold to Marshall Bros. The bodies were claimed by relatives or were removed by the church to Cust's cemetery, on Center avenue, near Fulton street.

WHISKEY AND BEER HABIT
PERMANENTLY CURED BY
"ORRINE"

Physicians and scientists throughout the world have long since pronounced drunkenness a disease of the nervous system, creating a morbid craving for a stimulant. Systems vary as to the kind of drink that will satisfy this craving—some want whiskey, others beer, wine, kimmel, etc., the use of which will eventually result in ruining the health and bringing on disease, in many cases ending in death.

"ORRINE" permanently removes the craving for liquor, restores the organs of the stomach to their natural condition and improves the appetite and digestion. It contains no injurious drugs of any description. "ORRINE" can be given without the patient's knowledge, if desired, in tea, coffee, water or milk. It requires no office or sanitarium treatment, but can be taken at home. We will refund the money if it fails to do all that is claimed for it.

Mr. E. T. Sims, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "Use my name as a twenty-year drunkard restored to manhood and health by 4 boxes of 'ORRINE.' It is a wonderful and marvelous cure for the drink habit."

The price of "ORRINE" is $1 per box, 6 boxes for $5. Mailed in plain, sealed wrapper, by ORRINE Co., 817 14th St., N. W., Washington, D. C. Interesting booklet (sealed) free on request. Sold and recommended by

ALCOHOL IN ALL LIQUID KIDNEY AND RHEUMATIC REMEDIES CONDEMNS THEM.

An ignorantly compounded remedy, containing alcohol, as nearly all kidney remedies do, will stimulate them so violently that an inflammation will be set up, and instead of being merely lazy the kidneys will become diseased. Alcohol congests the kidneys with blood and retards their activity.

There is no Alcohol in Nervan Tablets to interfere with the removal of all harmful sediment from the body. The Tablets soothe and heal the kidneys when they are irritated and inflamed. They cure the kidney diseases that make you dizzy, restless, sleepless and irritable; that make you pass water often during the day and night; that cause rheumatism, catarrh of the bladder, pain in the back, joints and muscles; that make your head ache and indigestion, stomach and liver trouble, and a sallow, yellow complexion.

No matter how many other remedies you may have tried and found useless, remember the great modern remedy, Nervan Tablets.

Starting and Staying.

At the start in a long race, the advantage often appears to be with an outsider. But the race is won not in starting but in staying. The quality which wins is power. It is so in the race of life.

Staying power comes from the best food. All physical strength is derived from food which is properly digested and assimilated. Often the food eaten is only partly digested and assimilated there is a loss of nutrition which means a loss of strength and the general result is physical breakdown.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery gives strength and staying power, because it cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of the food eaten, and so strengthens the body naturally by the nutrition derived from food.

"I was troubled with indigestion for about two years," writes Wm. Bowker, Esq., of Juliaetta, Latah Co., Idaho. "I tried different doctors and remedies but to no avail, until I wrote to you and you told me what to do. I suffered with a pain in my stomach and left side and thought that it would kill me. Now I am glad to write this and let you know that I am all right. I can do my work now without pain and I don't have that tired feeling that I used to have. Five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets' cured me."

Accept no substitute for Golden Medical Discovery. There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are easy and pleasant to take. A most effective laxative.

EVERYBODY knows the remarkable medicinal value of cod liver oil, but few people can take the ordinary, nauseating kind.

Until Hagee's Cordial of Cod Liver Oil (with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda) was compounded, a really pleasant and palatable cod liver oil was unknown. The first taste of Hagee's Cordial will dispel all prejudice.

Especially valuable in hot weather—a time when its wonderful properties are so much needed to help nature replenish the extra consumption of vitality, caused by excessive heat. A fine tonic food for puny children. Contains no grease. Agrees with the weakest stomach.

The Ethics of Fiction

By ANNE FITZHUGH MACLEAN

V.—The Predominance of the Love Motive.

It is hard to speak of the methods of novelists without referring, at least by suggestion, on almost every point, to William Dean Howells, who has either said everything or contradicted everything. And so just is his mind in criticism and so admirable his achievement in novel writing that it is not possible to speak without deference of principles which have so well stood the test of practical application even when agreement with them seems impossible.

But in his derision of the predominance of the love motive in fiction it

William Dean Howells.
(Who derides the predominance of the love motive in fiction.)

certainly appears to the ordinary observer of life that it is Mr. Howells, and not the novelists he derides, who is mistaken. He has said many times in different ways what he long ago put into the mouth of one of his personages in "Silas Lapham," that "the whole business of love and lovemaking and marrying is painted by the novelists in monstrous disproportion to life," meaning, in effect, that love is one of many equal interests in a man's life or is itself a subordinate interest. I believe that we might leave fiction out of the question and consider only authentic biography and yet easily refute this doctrine. Whether or not love and marriage ought to be of unsurpassed importance in adult life up to this time, they have so proved. The extravagances of imaginary lovers have never exceeded the extravagances of real lovers and are just as extreme with the highest type of man as with the lowest. Indeed, it might be proved that, in spite of exceptional cases, the finer the intellect the deeper the affections and that men of destiny are those most vitally influenced by passion.

The tragedies of the heart—crime, suicide, the throwing away of a career—darken the course of history, not so much as they darken the course of fiction, but they do so as undeniably. Against the fact that their dramatic value has overemphasized them in literature we may set the fact that but a small proportion of such occurrences in real life reaches our knowledge. We may have a lifetime's acquaintance with a man without being able to gauge the effect of his love experience upon his fate or character.

So, too, the current of a happy love, a fitting mating, decides the channel of the life of many a one without the outsider perceiving that the current

William Makepeace Thackeray.

has been diverted from its course. Marriage alone cannot make, but it may aid in making and can most surely mar, a man's career.

With regard to women this is universally admitted, and it is true of the other sex frequently enough to justify novelists in making love the dominant note. Besides, what fundamentally affects all wives and mothers can be of hardly less fundamental importance to those whose lives are inextricably interwoven with theirs. Often in tradition has the world's history been changed by the charms of a woman. How much oftener than comes to common knowledge is a nation's ruler himself ruled by a wife or mistress? It is out reasonable that that upon which depends the perpetuation of the human race—the attraction of man for woman and woman for man—should be divinely created a force second to none in impelling power. Such a force once operating must alter the destiny of him whom it impels. He who lacks it lacks a vital element; he who resists or overcomes it by his will has by that very effort modified his character.

The novelist's further justification in this matter is the persistency of interest that the world shows in this most ancient of themes. In the face of the innumerable love stories already existing the writer who can tell a new one, if only fairly, has as eager an audience as if his were the first love story ever told. All the world loves a lover as much as ever, and there are no signs of diminution in this love.

Subjects for novels have multiplied exceedingly. We have the "novel of manners," depicting ordinary social life, with love only incidental, as it usually appears to us in the lives of others; the controversial, the socialistic, the humorous, the historical, where love is merely decorative; we have Wall street as a topic, industrial conditions and every phase of modern complex life. Of all these none has supplanted the pure romance in popular affection or weakened the power of the story of loyal love. A modern of the moderns, a man of affairs in the forefront of practical life, found he had touched a common and responsive chord in the apparent extravagance of these four little lines:

Not from the whole wide world I chose thee,
Sweetheart, light of the land and sea;
The whole wide world could not inclose thee,
For thou art the whole wide world to me.

The excellent things said by the masters of literature on the subject of love alone would indeed make a considerable library. Few are even the prose writers who have not touched upon it. Of the harm that has been wrought by low and immoral presentations of this most important subject and by false and morbid treatment, not less than by the intentionally licentious, no estimate could approach the truth. In this, as in all other ethical aspects of fiction, there must come an elevation in the public mind before any but the greatest masters can, lacking the seer's foresight, place love in its right relation to the other elements of character.

Already the love story has taken one long step in the recognition of wedded love as the ideal and highest type. No more does it break off abruptly at the altar, for of necessity no more is love after marriage regarded as less interesting and less dramatic than the frenzied ardor of immature youths and maidens.

Thackeray reached no higher point in his art than in one little scene between a pair—John Sedley and his wife—whose love had endured through a lifetime. The old man is in anguished fear of the effect upon his wife of the announcement that he has brought her in her age to poverty. "As he spoke he trembled in every limb and almost fell. He thought the news would have overpowered his wife—his wife, to whom he had never said a hard word. But it was he that was the most moved, sudden as the shock was to her.

"When he sank back into his seat, it was his wife that took the office of consoler. She took his trembling hand and kissed it and put it around her neck. She called him her John, her dear John, her old man, her kind old man. She poured out a hundred words of incoherent love and tenderness. Her faithful voice and simple caresses wrought this sad heart up to an inexpressible delight and anguish and cheered and solaced his overburdened soul."

One such wife in fiction means many such wives in real life, and can it be thought that John Sedley ever in his life made a more important decision than between marrying or not marrying that woman?

The love letters of Victor Hugo afford an interesting instance of how a man full of the consciousness of genius, burning to his finger tips with the vital force that was to spend itself in achievement, felt this and all else within him subordinated to his love.

"I am often told," he says, to quote one of many similar passages, "that I am to achieve a dazzling reputation. [I repeat this hyperbole in its exact words.] For my own part I care only for domestic happiness. I have no hope or desire to give to anything but you. * * * Love is the only feeling that cannot be exaggerated. * * * If to obtain you sooner all that was necessary was to abandon the projects and dreams of my whole life, I should undertake it joyfully, my Adele."

Whether or not he would have repented later had he been taken at his word might well be inquired into. The sacrifice was not demanded. Both the wife of his choice and the career of his appointed destiny were his. But no reader of his letters can doubt his sincerity in all that he professed.

Love predominates in fiction because it predominates in life. Evanescent passion, unrequited affection, the piteous, self blinded devotion that worships at a shrine whose idol inevitably falls to dust and ruin, immortal love—alas, too rare—in one form or another the master passion comes to all and to each, whether he recognizes it or not, and "life is never the same again."

DUN'S TRADE REVIEW

Preparations for Fall Trade Are Being Vigorously Pushed.

CROP NEWS ARE REASSURING

There Is Hesitation in Certain Branches of the Iron and Steel Industry, Incident to the Season and Labor Controversies.

New York, Aug. 15.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Earnings of railways for August thus far show an average gain of 7.7 per cent over last year's figures and 16.3 per cent compared with 1901. Distribution of merchandise is very heavy, more interruption to traffic being recorded, and in staple lines prices are steady. Preparations for fall trade are vigorous, many manufacturers working overtime to fill important orders. Collections are fully as prompt as usual for the season, although in some lines there is less inclination to discount bills. Crop news is reassuring. Foreign trade at this port for the last week showed a loss of $1,461,049 in exports as compared with the same week last year, and imports decreased $2,127,575.

Hesitation in certain branches of the iron and steel industry, incident to the season and aggravated by labor controversies, is indicated with some degree of definiteness by the monthly statistics just published by the Iron Age. A vast amount of business is being done, but there is no indication to anticipate requirements of the future beyond contracts already placed. The week has brought no developments in the price situation, but there is a steady gain in purchases of pig iron, although the meeting of the leading concern's committee to fail to decide upon placing new contracts was a disappointment to some prospective sellers.

Agricultural implements and machinery manufacturers have secured a further large tonnage of material. Merchant steel and pipe show improved demand, but in plates and structural material the waiting tendency is still dominant.

Failures this week numbered 174 in the United States, against 196 last year, and in Canada 22, compared with 21 a year ago.

Terrible Mine Disaster.

Rome, Aug. 15.—A horrible disaster has occurred in the sulphur mine near Caltanissetta, Sicily. Gas in the mine became ignited and obstructed the exit of a hundred miners. The mine boss directed all the employes to save themselves if they could, while he with five others bravely remained on the spot in order to try to extinguish the fire. Three of the miners have died and many others, although they succeeded in reaching the open air, are horribly burned and maimed. The mine boss and his five companions found an unused exit and escaped, but their condition is desperate.

DEAD OF THE DAY.

B. F. Gilkeson.

BABY'S VOICE

Is the joy of the household, for without it no happiness can be complete. How sweet the picture of mother and babe, angels smile at and commend the thoughts and aspirations of the mother bending over the cradle. The ordeal through which the expectant mother must pass, however, is so full of danger and suffering that she looks forward to the hour when she shall feel the exquisite thrill of motherhood with indescribable dread and fear. Every woman should know that the danger, pain and horror of child-birth can be entirely avoided by the use of Mother's Friend, a scientific liniment for external use only, which toughens and renders pliable all the parts, and assists nature in its sublime work. By its aid thousands of women have passed this great crisis in perfect safety and without pain. Sold at $1.00 per bottle by druggists. Our book of priceless value to all women sent free. GOVERNOR'S VETO.

Be it resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio:

SECTION 1. That a proposition shall be submitted to the electors of this state, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, A. D. 1903, to amend section 16, of article II, of the constitution of the state of Ohio, so that it shall read as follows:

ARTICLE II.

Sec. 16. Every bill shall be fully and distinctly read three different days, unless in case of urgency three-fourths of the house in which it shall be pending, shall dispense with the rule. No bill shall contain more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in its title, and no law shall be revived, or amended unless the new act contains the entire act revived, or the section or sections amended, and the section or sections so amended shall be repealed.

Every bill passed by both houses of the general assembly shall, before said bill can become law, be presented to the governor. If he approves he shall sign said bill and thereupon said bill shall be law. If he object he shall not sign and shall return said bill, together with his objections thereto in writing, to the house wherein said bill originated, which house shall enter at large upon its journal said objection and shall proceed to reconsider said bill. If, after said reconsideration, at least two-thirds of the members elect of that house vote to repass said bill it shall be sent, together with said objection, to the other house, which shall enter at large upon its journal said objection and shall proceed to reconsider said bill. If, after said reconsideration, at least two-thirds of the members elect of that house vote to pass said bill it shall be law, otherwise it shall not be law. The votes for the repassage of said bill shall in each house respectively be no less than those given on the original passage. If any bill passed by both houses of the general assembly and presented to the governor is not signed and is not returned to the house wherein it originated and within ten days after being so presented, exclusive of Sunday and the day said bill was presented, said bill shall be law as in like manner as if signed, unless final adjournment of the general assembly prevents such return, in which case shall be law, unless objected to by the governor and filed, together with his objection thereto in writing, by him in the office of the secretary of state within the prescribed ten days; and the secretary of state shall at once make public said fact and shall return said bill, together with said objection, upon the opening of the next following session of the general assembly, to the house wherein said bill originated, where it shall be treated in like manner as if returned within the prescribed ten days.

If any bill passed by both houses of the general assembly and presented to the governor contains two or more sections, or two or more items of appropriation of money, he may object to one or more of said sections or to one or more of said items of appropriation of money, and approve the other portion of said bill, in which case said approved portion may be signed and then shall be law; and such section or sections, item or items of appropriation of money objected to shall be returned within the time and in the manner prescribed for, and shall be separately reconsidered as in the case of, a whole bill; but if final adjournment of the general assembly prevents such return the governor shall file said section or sections, item or items of appropriation of money, together with his objection thereto in writing, with the secretary of state as in the case of a whole bill, and the secretary of state shall then make public said fact, but shall not further act as in the case of a whole bill."

SECTION 2. At such election those electors desiring to vote for such amendment shall have placed upon their ballots the words "Constitutional amendment—governor's veto—yes;" and those opposed to such amendment shall have placed upon their ballots the words, "Constitutional amendment—governor's veto—no."

The King Snake's Prowess.

The most relentless exterminator of reptiles is a member of the family itself—the beautiful, lithe, yellow and black king snake, the friend of man and the avowed enemy of anything that creeps or crawls regardless of size or poison fang. A native of our own south, the king snake is between five and eight feet long and no thicker around than a man's thumb. Built in every muscle and bone for speed and tremendous constricting power, there is not another snake on earth that can withstand his assault. He is immune to the poison of the cobra and of the rattler alike, and the strength of a thirty foot python has no terrors for him. Within five minutes from the opening of the fight the king snake could kill the biggest python that ever lived. Ferocious as the little constrictor is toward his own kind, toward man he is friendly and rarely tries to escape when met afield.—A. W. Roker in McClure's.

STRONG TESTIMONY

This is East Liverpool Testimony and Will Stand Investigation.

If you doubt the following and wish to investigate, you haven't to go to some other state in the union to prove it. It's not a long story published in East Liverpool newspapers about a resident in Kalamazoo, Mich., or Temple, Fla. It's about a resident of East Liverpool and given in East Liverpool's own words. No stronger proof can be had.

Mr. Robert M. Newell, carpenter, of West Fifth street, says: "If everyone receives the same results as I from the course of treatment prescribed by Doan's Kidney Pills my advice is, go to Larkins' drug store, procure about a box, take them according to directions and the results will inevitably follow. One box effected a cure in my case, the particulars of which I will only be too pleased to give to anyone personally calling upon me."

Wounds of the Heart.

In wounds of the heart itself the escape of blood is never in large quantity, and the lethal consequences are due to the fact that the escape of blood from within its cavity or cavities into the surrounding sac of the pericardium mechanically interrupts the alternate contraction and expansion by which its pumping action is maintained. Accordingly the results of the wound of the heart are usually identical with those of gradual suffocation.—American Medicine.

"Yes, mum," replied the servant. "I have yet to break me record for destructiveness."—Baltimore American.

JEFFRIES THE WINNER

CORBETT'S SPEED WAS LACKING

The End Came Shortly After the Beginning of the Tenth Round, When Jeffries Planted One of His Terrific Swings on Corbett's Stomach.

Mechanics' Pavilion, San Francisco, Aug. 15.—James J. Jeffries, champion heavyweight of the world, played with Jim Corbett for nine rounds and a half and then Corbett's seconds motioned to Referee Graney to stop the fight in order to save their man from needless punishment. The end came shortly after the beginning of the tenth round, when Jeffries planted one of his terrific left swings on Corbett's stomach. The man who conquered John L. Sullivan dropped to the floor in agony and the memorable scene at Carson City, when Bob Fitzsimmons landed his solar plexus blow was almost duplicated. This time, however, Corbett struggled to his feet and again faced his gigantic adversary. With hardly a moment's hesitation Jeffries swung his right and again landed on Corbett's stomach. Jim dropped to the floor, and then it was that Tommy Ryan, seeing that it was all over, motioned to Referee Graney to stop the punishment.

The fight demonstrated beyond all doubt that Jeffries stands alone in his class. He showed remarkable improvement in both speed and skill. Corbett, during the first part of the fight, was almost outpointed and the few blows he landed on Jeffries were apparently without sting. Jeffries was never in better condition. He looked lighter than usual and the way he moved about on his feet and the frequency with which he countered Corbett's leads astonished everybody. Corbett, in comparison with the big man opposed to him, looked very light but was really heavier than ever before. He seemed to have lost some of his old-time speed and skill during the early part of the fight, but this may have been due to Jeffries' marvelous improvement. Corbett's physical condition appeared to be all that he claimed for it. He stood many of Jeffries' terrific blows without wincing and came back swinging left and right and landing frequently, but his blows hardly stung Jeffries. Jeffries was not only stronger, faster and cleverer than ever before, but he used his head to better purpose, and although Corbett hit him hard enough to hurt an ordinary man, Jeffries bored right in without noticing the blows and delivered telling hits that materially helped in deciding the result of the fight.

At first Corbett was very cautious and apparently was outpointed by Jeffries, but later in the fight he warmed up and showed some of his old-time cleverness. From the first, however, it was generally regarded as a hopeless case for Corbett. He made a gallant fight, but he never stood a show to win.

After the fight was over Corbett quickly recovered, walked over to Jeffries and shook him warmly by the hand. He said:

"Jim, you beat me fairly. You stand alone. No one can touch you."

Two General Orders Will Be Issued by General Young as Chief of Staff of the Army.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Two general orders will be issued by General Young as chief of staff of the army under the new law. The first states that in compliance with the instructions of the president, he, General Young, relinquishes command of the army and assumes the duties of chief of staff.

The second order announces the assignment of officers of the general staff as follows: Assistants to the chief of staff, Major General Henry C. Corbin, adjutant general; Brigadier General William H. Carter; Brigadier General Wallace F. Randolph, chief of artillery. The officers named will perform such duties as may be assigned them under the law by the chief of staff.

War college board: Brigadier General Tasker H. Bliss, president; Colonel Alexander Mackenzie, corps of engineers, general staff, and Major William D. Beach, Tenth cavalry, general staff, directors.

Colonel William P. Hall, assistant adjutant general, is designated acting adjutant general of the assembly.

Heretofore all army orders have been issued from the headquarters of the army adjutant general's office, by command of lieutenant general, but signed by the adjutant general. Hereafter orders will be issued direct from the war department, signed by the chief of staff and inscribed, "Official, W. P. Hall, acting adjutant general."

As assistant chief of staff General Corbin will perform much the same duties that have come under his direction hertofore.

Head-on Collision.

Wheeling, Aug. 15.—The accommodation passenger train from Pittsburg, on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, due here at 1:30 p. m., and a freight train met in a head-on collision near the Peninsular tunnel. The engine of the freight was almost completely demolished and the front of the passenger engine smashed in. Three freight cars were hurled over an embankment. Engineer Davis, of the freight, sustained a broken leg, while the two firemen had arms broken in the jump for safety. Several passengers were considerably shaken up and bruised, but were not otherwise injured. A serious wreck occurred on the Ohio River division of the Baltimore and Ohio at Glendale, when a freight train and an engine met in a rear-end collision, caused by a confusion of orders. Two cars and a caboose were demolished. No one was injured.

Body Identified.

New York, Aug. 15.—Simon Kuhn and William H. McGuire, members of the Royal Arcanum, of Allegheny City, Pa., called at the morgue and identified the body of the man found in the Hudson river Wednesday morning as that of Adolph J. Gerl, the missing treasurer of the Royal Arcanum lodge in Allegheny City. Gerl's body was found in the river with a knotted handkerchief tightly bound about the neck. There were two deep abrasions over the eyes and a wound in the back of the head, which was at first thought to be a bullet wound.

Shot His Wife.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 15.—Frank J. Conway, a prominent young man of Cumberland, went to Westernport, and, meeting his wife, Gertrude Conway, in front of the Lutheran church with another man, shot her through the heart, death being instantaneous.

World's Record Broken.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Dick Welles broke the world's record for a mile on a circular track at Harlem, going the distance in 1:37 in a match race against Grand Opera.

Three Curious Epitaphs.

In a cemetery near Dublin the following words appear on a tombstone:

"Here lies John Hurley, whose father and mother died while on their way home from America. If they had lived they would have been buried here."

The following epitaph adorns the tomb of a gravedigger in the Taibach cemetery in the south of Wales:

"Hurrah, comrades, parson is dead! If he had lived he would have buried all of us."

Here is another curious epitaph which was recently discovered; it marks the grave of an indefatigable smoker and contains only the following four words:

"My pipe is out."

Some were at death's door when put on the compounds, but many such recovered. That many were in extremis may be learned from this. Some recovered who had been tapped dozens of times; others were already in the twitchings of uraemic poisoning; many had from four to six physicians confirm the fatal diagnosis; several left standard hospitals in extremis; several had relatives called in for last interviews, and a few recovered who were in a state of absolute coma.

In a word about 87% of all cases of Bright's Disease and Diabetes, heretofore positively incurable, are now curable under the new Fulton Compounds. The Renal Compound for Bright's and Kidney Disease is $1; for Diabetes, $1.50. Pamphlet free. We have just established a depot in your city where you will find the Compounds and pamphlets, viz:

THE OLD-TIME STAGE COACH

Its Coming in Colonial Days an Event of Much Moment.

GENERALLY GREETED BY CROWD

In the old colonial days the chief event of the day at the wayside inn or country village tavern was the arrival of the coach. This lumbering but vastly important vehicle was the shuttle in the loom of colonial life, which by its ceaseless going to and fro wove the many different threads into a harmonious whole. It usually was pulled by four or six horses, and there were some difficult roads, or some extra vain coachman, who plied the lines over the backs of four pairs of finely matched steeds. In the country tavern a crowd always gathered at the time drew near for the coach to arrive. As time was the most plentiful and least costly article these old colonists had, they generally got to the tavern early. The time was easily spent in such gossip as is usually the rule in the rural assembly place. After a while some urchin or overwatchful lounger, who had kept his eye on the long brown ribbon of road running in from the forest on the hill yonder, would with great importance cry out:

"There she comes!"

Then a cloud of dust would be seen, a rumbling sound heard and the occasional blare of a horn. At length the dust clouds would give up the outlines of galloping steeds, a charioteer using his whip with pistol-like snaps, a trumpeter blowing like the warder of an ancient castle, a heavy, clumsy coach with passengers and baggage. On this great vehicle would roll till, with a skill of which he was justly proud, the driver would bring it to a stop just where mine host could with many words and bows welcome his prospective customers. The driver would throw down the lines and leisurely descend, too great a personage by far to give any attention to the care of the teams or the changing of them. His was as high a place in the scale as is that of the captain of a modern ocean greyhound.

The coach always brought the letters and the papers. These were few, but relatively of so much the greater importance. Immediately a group of eager idlers would surround one who had the latest paper in the tavern taproom, and that paper would furnish the occasion for many a wise and solemn, and sometimes boisterous, discussion over topics of grave public import. Meanwhile mine host was doing everything in his power to make his guests feel at home. He was always striving to build up the reputation of his hostelry. In those days quality counted much. If from the coach descended those whom the quick eye of the landlord discerned as being of the "quality," his face always beamed the brighter and his bow was the more profound. There were then in America distinctions which in this industrial domestic age go for nothing at all. To the ladies and gentlemen the finest the tavern could afford was always offered.

While all this was going on the axles had been greased, the horses watered, or perhaps a new set of animals had been provided, the mails had been changed, the transient guests had been fed and had finished their cups of toddy. When all was in readiness that grand mogul of all, the driver, came out calmly and with conscious dignity, the center of all observing, took his place on the box. Then away, amid cheers and dust, passed the coach, and the village settled down again to its wonted quiet and neighborhood gossip. The great event of the day was over. And gone now forever are those days. C. L. SMITH.

TOMAHAWK RIGHTS.

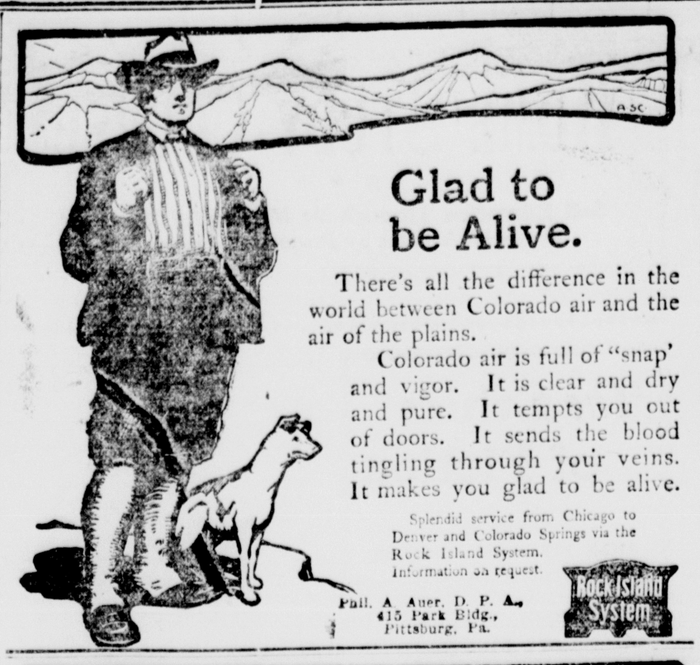

Method of Acquiring Title to Land in Early Days.

In different ages and countries the laws relating to the acquiring and holding of land vary to an astonishing degree. In the same country the customs change very much, according to the exigencies of the generation. The purchaser of a tract of land in this region today who cares to trace back to the beginning the title by which he is to hold the property will often run across some very curious facts. The original settlers got possession of their lands in a variety of ways, more or less able to stand close scrutiny.

But those first years were times of rough and unusual methods of living, and often the law which prevailed was the law of possession and the might requisite to hold on undisturbed.

Many of the most valuable lands today were originally taken by what was known as "tomahawk rights." An immigrant, finding a piece of good land on which he would like to settle, would find the best spring of water on his intended tract. He would blaze the trees around this spring and then on various notable trees over the whole tract he would cut his initials. This did not definitely mark out his intended farm, but it gave him possession, a right which was rarely violated except by murder or some equally heinous method, a rare occurrence. New settlers coming to the spring would see the blazing and after drinking would pass on. Once improved, the title was perfect, and stands today. C. L. SMITH.

NO SENTIMENT FOR JOHNSON

The Cleveland Mayor Won't Get Much Comfort Down in Montgomery.

THE FRIENDS OF ZIMMERMAN

Fear That an Attempt Will Be Made to Steal the Convention.

DEMOCRATS MUCH WORRIED

Columbus, Aug. 15.—(Special)—Former Representative Chapman, of Montgomery county, and who is now the candidate of the party for state senator in the Montgomery-Preble district, was in the city last evening. In speaking of the situation in his county, he said:

"We are having no exciting times in Montgomery county politics now that we did in former days, when the Dowling and anti-Dowlingites engaged in their annual contest for supremacy in that county. Dowling won year after year in those contests, and it was not until after Tom Johnson began to show his hand in the politics of the state that a decision was given against Dowling, which, temporarily, at least, has put him out of the business.

"So far as I have been able to discover, there is no sentiment among the democrats down our way for Johnson for governor. Geographically their sympathies ought to be with Zimmerman, and, I believe are, but, of course, no one can tell what a Democratic convention will do. The unexpected happens oftener than the expected."

Much interest centers in the outcome of the Montgomery county convention in so far as it concerns Johnson and Zimmerman, as to which will secure the assurance of its support in the state convention.

Zimmerman's friends are suspicious that Johnson's tactics of putting up contesting delegations in counties of sufficient importance, where he is unable to control the situation, means that he will attempt to "steal" the convention outright when it meets it this city a week from next Wednesday.

ZIMMERMAN'S FRIENDS ARE VERY ANXIOUS

The Springfield Man Credited With a Scheme to Put Johnson In the Hole.

Columbus, Aug. 15.—The announcement that Tom L. Johnson is boosting the candidacy of John W. Bookwalter for the United States senate, and that all the power of his machine in Ohio will be exerted to that end, has caused the friends of John L. Zimmerman to look for some plan to block the Johnson game.

The one scheme that is receiving the most attention is for the backers of Zimmerman to assist in the endorsement of John J. Lentz for the senate. On first blush this would seem to be an impossible thing, but when it is understood that the Zimmerman people in Franklin county at least have consented that Lentz shall head the delegation to the state convention, the arrangement is not so improbable.

Such an arrangement, if agreed to, would put Mr. Johnson in the hole. He could not go back on Lentz who has been one of his closest political friends.

CHEAPER NATURAL GAS FOR THE OHIO VALLEY

A Virginia Company Proposes to Compete With Companies Now Supplying Fuel.

Wheeling, August 15.—The announcement that the Virginia Oil & Gas company, with backing to the extent of a million or more, will apply to the Ohio county commissioners and city councils for franchises to give Wheeling and surrounding towns on each side of the river competitive natural gas and at rates lower than those charged by the Wheeling and West Virginia companies has been received with great pleasure, both by domestic and manufacturing consumers.

The company has developed a great natural gas territory almost at the doors of the city in Marshall county and across the line in Pennsylvania, and should by all means be given the franchises which it is asking. Competition in gas would bring immeasurable results to the people, especially to manufacturers. In some quarters it is declared that the natural gas company of West Virginia has an exclusive franchise in the domestic field, but the Virginia people declare the conditions of the grant have been repeatedly broken, and that it will not hold water for a minute if tested in the courts. If they get the franchise they are willing and anxious to make the legal test.

Directors Will Seek to Get the Income to Pay For His Support.

Lisbon, Agust 15.—(Special)—John Duncan, of Wellsville, an insane inmate of the county infirmary, has been represented to be the owner of property in Wellsville and the infirmary directors are now investigating with the intention of applying to his support any income that may arise from the property.

Duncan was received at the infirmary last spring from the Massillon asylum. About 10 years ago he was sent to an asylum at Columbus, whence he was transferred to Massillon.

GOOD FOR 100 BARRELS

A Knoxville Field Oil Well is Most Promising—Harrison Rinehart in Luck.

The oil well drilled in Thursday on Harrison Rinehart's farm in the Knoxville field, is thought to be good for 100 barrels a day and is one of the biggest producers found in that field in the recent past. The well was shot with nitro-glycerine with the best of results. Oil spouted up through the derrick to a heighth of 100 feet and the drillers experienced some difficulty in controlling the flow.

Mr. Rinehart, the owner of the property, leased to Marks & Co., of Pittsburg. The success of their first well will decide them to attempt several more in the same locality.

THE RETURNS COMING IN

The Different Propositions On Points Affecting Potters' Wage Scale.

FINAL MEETINGS OF LOCALS

The result of the referendum vote of the National Brotherhood upon the proposed settlement of the wage scale will be known at headquarters either Monday night or Tuesday. Already returns from a large majority of the locals are in the hands of President Duffy and Secretary Menge. The locals in this city have been meeting during the week and only the printers and the kiln drawers have not voted These locals will meet tonight for that purpose. Last night the kilnmen and the packers held meetings and meeting of the kilnmen lasttemfwypp the result of the balloting was handed in at headquarters this morning. The meeting of the kilnmen lasted until a late hour and was largely attended.

Nearly every mail brings to headquarters an official document containing the vote of out-of-town locals. It is expected that all of them will be heard from by Monday night.

The propositions upon which the locals have been voting were submitted as a result of the conferences between the Brotherhood and manufacturers' committees and are as follows:

1. Pressers working day wage shall receive $3 per day.

2. Nine (9) hours shall constitute a day for all day wage earners excepting engineers, engineers' helpers, kiln firemen, watchmen, odd men and such others as from necessity must put in longer hours.

3. Lunch time shall be abolished for all day workers.

4. No apprentice printer shall be put on the press as long as a competent journeyman can be secured.

5. Ware dressers, ware brushers, drawing girls and dipping girls shall receive 10 per cent increase in wages when such increase does not bring the total wage above one ($1.00) dollar and no extra is to be paid on account of location of factory.

6. Kilndrawers shall receive twenty-five (25c) cents per hour, with a maximum of seven (7) hours for any kiln (which does not change present conditions materially); boss drawer to receive twenty-five (25c) cents extra per kiln.

7. All plain edge plates to be increased one-quarter cent per dozen.

8. All plain edge saucers, fruits and ice creams to be increased one-eighth cent per dozen.

9. All plain edge hotel plates, roll edge, double thick and half thick, shall be increased one-half cent per dozen.

10. That 205 feet shall constitute a day's work on bisque kiln, 200 feet having been asked for.

These reductions have been asked for by the manufacturers to offset the above concessions: Oat meals to be reduced one-half cent per dozen; coupe soups, to be reduced one-half cent per dozen; 5, 6, 7 and 8 inch nappies(outside), one cent per dozen; combinets, making only, 5 cents per dozen; C. C. roll edge basins, 5 cents per dozen.

The present conditions under the uniform price list are as follows: Day wage of pressers, per day, $2.75; day wage workers' day, 10 hours per day; lunch time for day wage workers, from 9:30 to 9:45 a. m.; apprentice printers ratio in each shop.

Ware dressers, $1.00 per day; ware brushers, drawing girls and dipping girls, 87½ cents per day.

Kilndrawers, $1.50 per kiln; boss drawer, $1.75 per kiln; takes five to seven hours to draw kiln; plain edge plates, 3 inch, 3 cents; 4 inch, 3 cents; 5 inch, 3½ cents; 6 inch, 4 cents; 7 inch, 4½ cents; and 8 inch, 5¼ cents per dozen. Plain edge saucers, fruits and ice creams, 2¾ cents per dozen. 212 cubic feet constitute one day in bisque kiln.

Following are the prices of goods on which reduction was offered: Oat meals, 5 cents per dozen; coupe soups, 6 cents per dozen; 5, 6, 7 and 8 inch (outside) nappies, 10 cents per dozen; combinets, 50 cents per dozen; figured cups, turned, 3½ cents per dozen; basins, 35 cents per dozen.

Should the propositions be rejected it is likely that the two committees will get together again and prepare a new basis of settlement.

President Duffy will leave the city tomorrow for Trenton to participate in the sanitary conference, which is to begin Monday. The members of these committees are given elsewhere in this issue. President Duffy will be one of the conferees.

Both Arms and Leg Broken, Besides Other Injuries

An unfortunate accident that may cost the life of a young boy occurred at Rock Springs park at a late hour this afternoon. Willie Hunter, one of the excursionists at the park today from the delegation of Pittsburg bridge workers, fell from a car on the roller coaster and sustained the facture of both arms and the right leg, and it is feared, is internally injured. At the hour of going to press the physicians had not determined the exact extent of his hurts. They are, however, of a very dangerous character.

Young Hunter fell from the car while it was at one of the very highest points. It is stated that he very imprudently tried to make the trip standing and was thrown out as the car swept around a curve. The awful accident was witnessed by a large number of horror-stricken spectators.

GIRL MISSING FROM HERE A WEEK

Well Known Young Lady Thought to Have Gone With the Carnival Company.

The aid of the police was invoked today in an effort to ascertain the whereabouts of a 17-year-old girl who, it is thought, eloped with an attache of the carnival company which recently exhibited in this city. The circumstances surrounding the girl's strange disappearance are so mysterious that her own relatives have been completely baffled in their efforts to locate the missing girl.

Mabel Geomo, whose parents reside in Hancock county, about seven miles south of Chester, came to this city nearly a year ago, and securing employment in one of the potteries, learned the decorating trade. She was a good worker, and was known among her associates as a well behaved and very sensible young lady, and intelligent beyond her years. The father, John Geomo, is a well-to-do farmer and though the father of seven children of whom Mabel is the oldest, he was amply able to care for them all. The daughter, however, was of an independent turn and determined to make her own way.

She secured board with Mrs. Rowena Cunningham, at 255 Third street, and at the time of her disappearance was employed at the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles pottery.

When the carnival visited the city a few weeks ago, the girl became fascinated with the life of a wandering showman, and was soon upon intimate

New Jersey's Governor and Factory Inspector Will Apply Law Rigidly.

A TECHNICALITY IS FOUND

By Which the Glass Manufacturers Expect to Escape Its Provisions.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 15.—Governor Murphy has marked with the stamp of disapproval the efforts of the South Jersey manufacturers to disregard the child labor law which becomes operative September 1. He has assured the factory inspecting department that he will provide every means for protection and has instructed Attorney General McCarter to proceed against any of the violators of the new law. Governor Murphy in conversation with a News Review reporter yesterday said:

"I shall insist upon its rigid enforcement and if the case is taken into the courts I will direct the attorney general to defend it. The complaint of the glass men that they cannot make their business pay without child labor seems incredible, but if it is true, it will not change the enforcement of this necessary law. The wrong of such employment is too grievous to be palliated upon any consideration."

The glass interests of South Jersey have banded together and this week sent out circulars to the manufacturers throughout the state asking for their assistance in defeating the law. Copies of the circular were received by the manufacturing potters of this city and the matter has been the subject for much discussion at the meetings of the locals of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters. The manufacturers are prepared to defeat the enforcement of the law upon a technicality. They claim that the law does not state the September of what year it shall become operative and propose to bring the matter to the attention of the supreme court. Chief Factory Inspector John T. Ward has instructed all his employes as follows:

"You are to see positively that there are no violations of the child labor laws of New Jersey, no equivocations on terms of speech. You will be held strictly to account for any failure to detect anything at variance with this law which is reported to this department."

The new law makes the willful employment of children in worksnops below the age of fourteen a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $200 or the imprisonment of the offending manufacturer for one year in state prison.

In accordance with the instructions sent out last week from the headquarters of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters at East Liverpool, the Trenton locals this week voted on the propositions submitted by the Western Manufacturers' Association for the government of the general ware trade.

C. Sidney Smith who is widely known here in potting circles, left this week for Sebring, O., where he has accepted a position as foreman in the decorating department of the plant of the Sebring Pottery company. Mr. Smith was connected with the decorating department of the Trenton Potteries company for seven years and previous to his employment there he was with the Maddock Pottery company. He was superintendent of the Walnut avenue Presbyterian Sunday school and was actively engaged in Y. M. C. A. work. Abraham Hays and W. F. Ellison have gone out with the Cook Pottery company's line of dinners, toilets and specialties. Hays is penetrating the New England market and Ellison is expounding the merits of the goods in the west. Both have several new lines this season. There is an unusualy large varfety of jardineres in which department of production the local concern has been pressing forward with astounding rapidity in recent years.

PROMINENT MILL MAN COMMITTED SUICIDE

William Everson, Who Had Relatives in Wellsville, Took His Life in Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, August 15.—William Everson, prominent for many years in the iron and steel industry in Pittsburg and at various times superintendent of several of the largest plants in the city, committed suicide yesterday afternoon at Thirty-fifth street and the Allegheny Valley railroad. He left no word as to the cause of his action, but it is supposed he took his life in a fit of despondency over his inability to obtain a position at Clarke's mill, within a stone's throw of the place where he drank the contents of a bottle of carbolic acid.

He was 59 years old and has been identified with the steel and iron works of the city for most of his life. He was formerly superintendent of the Ft. Pitt works and afterward manager of the Keystone mill.

Mr. Everson is survived by two brothers and two sisters: Richard Everson, of Wellsville, O., formerly manager of the Wellsville Iron and Steel company, and Walter Everson; Miss Lillian Everson and Mrs. A. S. Livengood, of Everson, Pa. He left two sons and two daughters, Ralph Everson, employed at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company works; Reese Everson, a clerk; Mrs. Mildred Maxwell and Mrs. Stella Westerfield, of Kelly street, East End.

Chris McTaggart Now in the Hospital Being Treated for His Injuries.

No new features have developed as the outcome of the attack made by William Bridge on Chris McTaggart a few days ago. The men were brought into court after the fight, but McTaggart was in such a pitiable condition that the proceedings were stayed pending his recovery. He was placed in Dr. Taylor's hospital, where he is now undergoing treatment for his injuries. It is likely McTaggart will make some sort of a charge against Bridge as soon as he is able to be about, as he denies the accusation made by the latter, and says he was treated in a most brutal manner.

The way the men explained the occurrence at the mayor's office the evening of the fight, the impression was given out that the trouble occurred at the saloon of John Robinson, on Second street. This was an error, and Mr. Bridge states he has not been in Robinson's place in 14 years.

No adjustment has been made of the new wage scale of local union No. 169, International Union of Steam Engineers, and the officials of the local having exhausted every effort toward its adoption, will submit the matter to trades council at the next regular meeting Wednesday night. It is hoped in this way to effect a settlement without further delay.

Just what steps will be taken by the council is to be determined at the meeting. Several plans have been proposed but it is likely that a committee will be appointed to confer with the Western Manufacturers' association, which has been holding out against granting the advance provided for in the scale submitted.

TAKEN ILL ON THE STEEET

Thomas Cooke, a Hookstown Farmer Seized With Heart Disease In This City.

Thomas Cooke, a prosperous and well-known farmer, residing near Hookstown, was last evening overtaken with a serious attack of neuralgia of heart, while in the vicinity of the power house.

Cooke was seen staggering along the railroad tracks and was about ready to fall when reached by assistance and was taken into the brick works nearby where for two hours he could not be moved owing to his precarious condition. Dr. G. P. Ikirt was summoned, and after relieving the sufferer, had him removed in the ambulance to the home of friends in Chester where today he is much improved.

THE SIDEWALKS IN BAD SHAPE

Public Service Board Determines to Have Them Inspected and Improved.

JETHRO BRIDGE REPAIRS

The condition of some of East Liverpool's pavements has been the subject of a great deal of unfavorable comment within the past two years. The city council has been criticised and censured for neglecting so important a matter, and the men in charge of the street department have been condemned in no uncertain terms. When the service board took charge of the public works it was one of the first questions taken up by that body. For several weeks past plans have been discussed to be followed in the execution of the work, and at the meeting of the board held last night the first move was made. It was determined to take up the work at once, and it will be pushed to completion just as fast as the city's facilities will permit.

Engineer Kelly and City Commissioner Frank Dickey will begin at once a systematic inspection and upon their report will depend the extent of the work. The task will be a difficult one, since there is scarcely a street in the city upon which repairs of some kind are not needed. The men have been instructed to have the report ready by Monday evening at which time the board of public service will hold another meeting.

The action of the board will be commended by a large number of property owners, and was the result of continued effort on the part of Commissioner Dickey. This official reported to the board last night that the condition of some of the streets was very bad, and unless they were given attention soon the city would surely become involved in damage suits. The pavements on Fourth street were reported as being particularly bad. It will be the purpose of the commissioner and engineer to make their inspection in a thorough manner, and when they have finished none of the sidewalks needing attention will have been overlooked. It is hoped the work of repairing can be completed before the rough weather sets in.

The condition of the Jethro bridge was reported on by Mr. Dickey. He said that several planks were loose and the danger to people who daily use the structure was great. The matter was discussed at some length and it was finally decided to refer the matter to the county commissioners who were thought to be responsible. The bridge was built by the East Liverpool railway corporation and the county commissioners, each contributing a certain amount to the expense of constructing the trestle. The board was not certain that the city would be exempt from damage in case an accident resulted from the bad condition of the structure, and concluded, in order to make sure, that it would be the proper course to refer the matter to the county commissioners. It may be that the railway company is responsible for the repairs, and if it is, the commissioners, with whom the deal for its construction was originally made, are thought to be the proper parties to call it to the attention of the management. Clerk J. W. Gipner will notify the commissioners at once that the bridge is in a dangerous condition and in need of immediate attention. The Jethro bridge was built several years after the East Liverpool railway line was constructed, and was only substituted for the old wooden structure after the latter was considered dangerous. An arrangement was made whereby the county commissioners were to share the expense of construction, and though the bridge was well built and the very best materials were used, but little attention has been given to its care since that time. All of the farmers from the northwestern part of the county come into the city from the campground road and use this bridge, and in addition to that the heavy traffic from Wellsville by road is all done from thatdirection. It is considered no wonder that the bridge is in need of repairs at this time, and it will be the

Arrangements are being made for the holding of the Sanitary conference in the east, says this week's Potters' Herald. The manufacturers held a meeting on the fourth inst. and it is decided to leave the arrangements of the date of meeting to the two committees. This leaves no doubt but what an early date will be set for the considering of the propositions asked by the operatives.

The committees will be composed as follows: That of the manufacturers will be John A. Campbell, general manager of the Trenton Potteries company, and John Maddock, of the Maddock company, John Moore, and the selection of one of the following three: A. Maddock, Fred Conradt or D. K. Willet.

The National Brotherhood of Operative Potters will be represented by First Vice President F. H. Hutchins, Sixth Vice President Joseph T. Cotton, Eighth Vice President George Dix, William Wooten, Thomas Walklett, David Moore, William Harney and Edward Taylor. There is also a possible chance of National President Duffy also being present, as no doubt but what the western conference will have been closed by the time of the Sanitary meeting.

The questions that will come before the two committees are of a very reasonable nature and will in all probability be granted without any serious difficulty. Among them are the following:

The establishing of a regulation governing the rights of the presser to pay the carrier-out. This arose over some of the firms, instead of allowing the men to pay the carrier-out, deducting it from their pay and paying the carrier, thereby making it so the men would not have any control over him, and it is to abolish this and permit the men to pay and control their own carriers-out, that the adopting of the above regulation is asked for.

Another thing that will be of great benefit to the operatives, both in being just and a help in the day's wages, is the abolishing of the charging of the workman to pay for ware broken by kilnhands, or in the green room. Also the neglect of anyone who may handle the ware. Heretofore the workmen have been responsible for ware broken in this way, a feature that will appeal to all as being a great hindrance to the workman making the average day.

A uniform list for the making of sanitary saggers will also be up for action. Heretofore there has been no uniform list in general use for the making of saggers for sanitary use. Also a uniform list for sanitary jiggering; uniform list for placing sanitary kilns. There will also be a strenuous effort put forth to adopt a rule which will govern the working of an apprentice kilnman in the sanitary trade, the same to be similar to the rule governing ..... class in the placing of the general ware kilns. The establishing of a uniform list to govern the wages of a sanitary presser when working day wage. Also the establishing of a price for local seat, hub, and trap vents, and a uniform price to be paid for the packing of sanitary ware.

The meeting of the two committees is to be expected within the course of a few days, when the exact date of the conference will be known.

EAGLES' FLIGHT WELL BEGUN

INITIATION CEREMONIES

Impressively Conducted and the Officers Installed by the State President—An Elaborate Banquet Follows the Ceremonies.

East Liverpool is a great secret order town. If this fact had not impressed itself upon the average citizen before they will be convinced after last night's demonstration upon the occasion of the institution of the new aerie of the fraternal order of Eagles. The charter list is made up of over 100 young men, and the new lodge starts off under the most favorable circumstances.

Col. C. H. Voute, state president of the organization, had charge of the ceremonies, and he was assisted in the ritualistic work by the Steubenville degree team. The latter arrived in the city on the evening train, two extra coaches having been added to the regular train. They were met at the passenger station by a large delegation of the prospective brothers, and headed by Manley's band, marched to Turner hall, where the aerie was to be instituted.

The charter list was a large one, and the officers went to work at once with a determination to finish the task by midnight. After the balloting had been finished the entire membership received the obligation, and then the men in charge were ready for the enjoyable portion of the program. The Steubenville brethren had made all arrangements to exemplify the secret work and though a young aerie itself went through the work in a manner which indicated careful study and a perfect conception of the ritual. The following officers were elected:

Worthy President—Henry Bullock.
Worthy Vice President—John C. Walsh.
Worthy Chaplain—Criss McConnell.
Worthy Secretary—D. A. Devine.
Worthy Treasurer—Thomas O'Brien.
Worthy Conductor—George Parry.
Worthy Inside Guard—Samuel Whittenberger.
Worthy Outside Guard—Pat I. Quinn.
Trustes—Alex Stevenson, Dick Bell, Clifford Dawson.
Physician—O. P. Andrews.

Upon the completion of the initiatory ceremonies the assemblage adjourned to the banquet hall, where a sumptuous repast had been prepared. This was one of the most enjoyable features of the entire evening. Toasts were responded to by a large number of out-of-town brothers, and speeches were made by members of the East Liverpool aerie. The banquet was enjoyed by nearly 200 people, and all voted it the most successful ever attended.

The East Liverpool aerie begins its career with flattering prospects, and will begin at once on the formation of a degree team. There are a large number of persons whose names are on the charter list who were not present for initiation last night, and it will be the duty of the members to initiate them. The ritualistic work is fine, and the initiation most impressive. It will be the aim of the new lodge to perfect the work promptly and in a thorough manner.

Bank Failure.

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 15.—The alleged embezzlement of $45,000 of the funds of the Commercial Banking company, for which E. E. Johnson, the trusted clerk of the bank, is under arrest, has brought about the failure of the Merchants' bank of Duluth. President Smith said that the failure was due to a run on the bank, resulting from the closing of the Commercial Banking company's institution. He said that he could not anticipate the extent of the withdrawals and closed to protect all depositors as much as possible. This is the fourth bank suspending business as a result of the alleged embezzlement.

The "United Tailors."

New York, Aug. 15.—The latest thing in trade combinations is to be known as the "United Tailors." Charles M. Schwab's millions are said to be behind the scheme, which, it is understood, will be launched in this city in one week. Five branch stores have already been leased in various parts of Manhattan and the projectors say that within 30 days their stores will be in operation in large cities all over the country.

Heroic Measures.

"I'm after a servant girl," said Hausekeep; "one with a good, big appetite preferred."

"That's rather an unusual request," began the employment agent.

"Well, I've got to put a stop to this business of having things warmed over the next day."—Philadelphia Press.

The Lamp of a Man's Life.

Dr. Holmes said the lamp of a man's life has three wicks—brain, blood and breath—and to turn down any one of them makes the other two go out. The wounds a man will survive and even disregard so long as his head, heart and lungs are unhurt have long been one of the wonders of war history.

The Russian Bride.

A Russian bride has a very much more trying time on her wedding day than has her American sister, for she must fast until after the ceremony is over and that after enduring the trials of a "farewell party" the day before. As the wedding, to be fashionable, must not take place till the evening, it is easy to imagine in what an exhausted state the bride often enters on her new life. Besides bridesmaids there are also bridesmen, who have to provide the bridesmaids with sweetmeats. The number of bridesmaids is unlimited, and they are not dressed alike. Following the bridal procession is carried a picture in gold and silver of Christ, which is stationed against the altar. The bride's old nurse is intrusted with the removal of the bride's dowry from her father's house to that of her future husband.

A Million For Advice.

Sometimes repressing a client pays a lawyer well. There is a persistent story, which probably will never be printed as to names and details, that a famous trust magnate paid a lawyer a million dollars in cash for simply saying to him: "Don't fight. If you insist on fighting I will take your case. But if you fight remember all your books will be opened and all your methods disclosed." The bewildering munificence of that instant fee of a million was a record for wise philanthropy which showed the genius of the philanthropist. Never was a fee better earned if the tale is true.—Everybody's Magazine.

FREEDRICKTOWN WON

The East End Grays Defeated By Just One Run in Yesterday's Game.

The East End Grays went up against the real thing yesterday afternoon at Columbian park when they tackled the Fredericktown boys. The game of ball was played in excellent manner throughout and had Bolton and Herbert, the Grays' battery, been given better assistance, they would have won the game. It resulted Fredericktown 13, Grays 12.

The Grays are scheduled to play a game on the same grounds with the Eclipse today.

A REMARKABLE WELL

It Produces Both Water and Gas and Both Are Utilized.

The flow of gas which U. E. Price struck some time ago in his back yard on Pennsylvania avenue still keeps up and Mr. Price has just finished piping the gas through his house for light and fuel. The gas keeps up its early test of 4½ pounds pressure, which is more than enough to supply the building Mr. Price lives in. The well, which had been drilled for water, now supplies both water and gas, the gas having been cased off so as not to affect the taste or smell of the water.

Neville Institute Repairs.

Those in charge of the Neville Institute have determined to make extensive and much needed repairs at the school building within the next few weeks. Contractors have been over the work, and figures are now in the hands of the trustees. It is the intention to begin the work next week.

Lost

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure Cured Entirely.

"If it hadn't been for Dr. Miles' Remedies I would not be here to write this letter. Two years ago last June I lost the use of my left arm, could not use it and could only move it with the help of my right hand. My heart was so weak I could not sleep nights for smothering spells. I was out of sorts all over and could eat nothing. I grew so weak that I could not walk without staggering like a drunken man and my home doctor said he could do nothing for me. I was in so much pain I was almost wild. I could not take morphine nor opium as they made me worse. So I got to thinking about Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine and the more I thought about it the more I wanted to try them. I wrote to the Dr. Miles Medical Co. for advice which I followed to the letter. I can say today that I am glad I did as I am a well woman now; can work and can walk two or three miles and not mind it. I can also use my arm again as well as ever. You do not know how thankful I am for those grand medicines Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and Nervine. I think Dr. Miles' Remedies are the best in the world, and if I should get sick again I should take the same course. The remedies also helped my daughter Vida so wonderfully that I should have written you before to thank you, but I wanted to be sure that the cure was permanent, which I now know to be the case."—Mrs. Frank Loomis, Allen, Mich.

The men boarded the train at Fairmont in an intoxicated condition and almost threw the passengers in a panic by flourishing knives and revolvers. The train crew attempted to quiet the rowdies, but were driven out of the coach at the point of pistols.

Reported Lynching Denied.

Albany, Ga., Aug. 15.—Officials here deny the reported lynching of King Wightman, a negro, and a white man named Thompson at Hartsfield for assaulting Mrs. Mathis, a white woman. The two men, who were recognized by Mrs. Mathis as her assailants, have been placed safely in jail at Moultrie, Ga., by officers, after eluding a mob which had been in pursuit of the negro. The report of the lynching was received through apparently reliable sources.

Mammoth Concern Formed in Cleveland to Control Eastern Ohio Cities.

Cleveland, Aug. 15.—Calvary Morris of this city, is at the head of a new $10,000,000 combine, formed for the purpose of acquiring the title to mineral lands in Ohio.

A telegram from Wheeling says the men interested in the venture have perfected plans and that articles of incorporation will be filed shortly.

At the office of Morris it was said that he was in the east and that until his return next Monday it would be impossible to give details of the combine. It was said by other coal men that he was there for the purpose of financing the corporation.

Options have already been secured on the coal fields of Harrison, Jefferson and Belmont counties and agents are reaching out for more territory. The purchase a few days ago of the property of the Postill Coal Co., at Hoosac, O., for $500,000 by the Morris syndicate was the first step in the big deal. Until that time the matter had not been given publicity. It is said that there is great wealth behind the combine and that it will develop into the biggest concern of the kind in Ohio.

C. L. Poston, who recently sold his Hocking Valley coal lands to J. P. Morgan's syndicate for $3,000,000, is interested with Morris in the promotion of the new corporation.

DISGUISED CATARRH

A Stealthy, Insidious, Weakening Enemy to Women---Many Thousand Women Suffer Needlessly From This Cause.

There are a multitude of women, especially housewives, and all other women obliged to be on their feet constantly, who are wretched beyond description, simply because their strength and vitality is sapped away by catarrhal discharges from the pelvic organs. These women get up in the morning tired, drag themselves through their daily duties tired, only to go to bed at night as tired as before.

Mrs. Eva Bartho, 133 East 12th Street, N. Y. City, N. Y., writes:—"I suffered for three years with what is generally known as leucorrhea, in connection with ulceration of the womb. The doctors advocated an operation which I dreaded very much, and strongly objected to go under it. Reading of the value of Peruna, I thought it best to give this well-known remedy a trial, so I bought three bottles of it at once. Now I am a changed woman. Peruna cured me; it took nine bottles, but I felt so much improved I kept taking it, as I dreaded an operation so much. I am to-day in perfect health, and have not felt so well for fifteen years."—Mrs. Eva Bartho.

MRS. EVA BARTHO.

MRS. KATE MANN.

Miss Louise Mahon, 3 Glen Baille Street, Toronto, Ont. Can., Secretary of the King's Daughters and Secretary of Lady Maccabees, writes:—"If all women knew of the benefits to be derived from taking Peruna we would have many happier and more healthful women. My health has never been too robust, and I am easily fatigued and can not stand much. About a year ago I was so run down that I had to take to my bed, and became weaker and weaker. A friend advised me to try Peruna, and I have great reason to be grateful, for in two weeks I was out of bed and in a month I was perfectly well, and I now find that my health is much more robust than formerly, so that I take Peruna once or twice a month and keep well."—Louise Mahon

Peruna is such a perfect specific for each case that when patients have once used it they can never be induced to quit it until they are permantly cured. It begins to relieve the disagreeable symptoms at once. The backache ceases, the trembling knees are strengthened, the appetite restored, the digestion made perfect, the dull headache is stopped and the weakening drains are gradually cured. These results certainly follow a course of treatment with Peruna.

Barbara Alberty, corner Seventh and Walnut streets, Appleton, Wis., writes as follows in regard to Peruna:

"For years I have suffered with backache and severe pains in the side. I doctored so much that I became discouraged. A school friend told me how very much Peruna had benefited her and I sent out for a bottle, which did more to relieve me than all the other medicine I have ever taken. I used it faithfully for two weeks and it completely cured me. I have not had any pains since, anywhere, but feel like a new woman. I am truly thankful for what Peruna has done for me."—Barbara Alberty.

Mrs. Kate Mann, 806 Bathurst Street, Toronto, Ont. Can., Vice President of the Ladies Aid Society, writes:—"I am pleased to give praise to Peruna for the blessed relief I found through its use. I suffered for years with backache and dragging down pains and often had to go to bed and stay there when I was so busy that I could ill be spared. It was therefore a simple godsend to me when Peruna was brought to my notice. Every drop seemed to give me new life, and every dose made me feel much better, and I promised myself that if I found that it cured me I would advocate it so that other suffering women should know of it. I have been in perfect health for one year, I enjoy work and pleasure because in such fine health, and no trouble seems too heavy to bear when you are in good health. Peruna has simply been a household blessing, and I never will be without it again."—Mrs. Kate Mann.

Mrs. Anna Martin, 47 Boyt St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:—"Peruna did so much for me that I feel it my duty to recommend it to others who may be similarly afflicted. About a year ago my health was completely broken down, had backache, dizziness and irregularities, and life seemed dark indeed. We had used Peruna in our home as a tonic, and for colds and catarrh, and I decided to try it for my trouble. In less than three months I became regular, my pains had entirely disappeared, and I am now perfectly well."—Mrs. Anna Martin.

Mrs. Wm. Hetrick, Kennard, Washington county, Neb., writes:

"I am fifty-six years old and have not felt well since the Change of Life began ten years age. I was in misery somewhere most of the time. My back was very weak, and my flesh so tender it hurt me to lean against the back of a chair. I had pain under my shoulder-blades, in the small of my back and hips. I sometimes wished myself out of this world. Had hot and cold spells, dizziness and trembling of the limbs, and was losing flesh all the time. After following your directions and taking Peruna I now feel like a different person."—Mrs. Wm. Hetrick.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

The board of public service, in devoting attention to neglected sidewalks, is undertaking a very necessary and important work. The inspection about to be undertaken should be thorough and immediate steps should be taken to repair the numerous walks which will be found in a dangerous and dilapidated condition. Bad sidewalks, besides being an eyesore and a disgrace to a city of the size of East Liverpool, are unprofitable and undesirable in other ways. They are quite likely to result in damage suits and prove far more expensive in the long run than good walks. Unfortunately this city is no stranger to this sort of litigation. A little labor and effort will put the sidewalks in good condition at a cost which is small in comparison with that entailed by damage suits and damage verdicts. The old theory regarding an ounce of prevention is particularly applicable to this matter. East Liverpool has a great number of well paved streets, and much to the satisfaction of the public, they are now being kept reasonably clean. The sidewalks should be kept in a correspondingly good condition. The public service board will do the public genuine good service by keeping at the work it has initiated until the sidewalks of the city are in all respects what a city's sidewalks ought to be.

A scarcity of school teachers is reported in several Ohio and West Virginia counties. Such a condition would not exist if living wages were paid, but nothing else can be expected as long as men can make more money at digging ditches than the instructors of many a rural school receive. Cheap wages will never secure the sort of talent that ought to be employed in the school room. If there is any servant of the people who earns and ought to receive good pay it is the country school teacher who tries to do his duty. Such a teacher works harder than many a man who draws a salary twenty times as large and thinks he earns it.

Cheap automobiles will soon be with us if Thomas A. Edison's latest invention is what he claims for it. Mr. Edison says he has invented a storage battery for autos which can be charged at a cost of thirty cents, which will take the machine a hundred miles. Mr. Edison also states that his experiments at this time are being directed to a reduction of cost in the production of his battery, but that his invention has been tested in running automobiles for five hundred miles, and has proven very satisfactory.

The universal verdict is that, in the conviction of Jett and White, justice for once has triumphed in Kentucky. When all assassins in the Blue Grass State come to be treated as murderers should be, that old commonwealth will prosper and grow strong. Kentucky is a great state and would quickly become much greater but for her reputation for lawlessness.

Mobs are cowardly. One Indianapolis policeman with a revolver prevented a lynching by holding the crowd at bay until help arrived. Courageous officers who will do their duty are often successful in like emergencies. Even a crowd thirsting for the blood of a victim will pause before defying the law as personified by an officer with a weapon which he is not afraid to use.

It is nonsense to talk of war with Canada because the crew of an American fishing boat got into a dispute with the crew of a Canadian government vessel. All the same, steps ought to be taken to prevent the reoccurrence of such unpleasant episodes before they become more serious.

The latest about C. M. Schwab is that he is backing a taliors' trust. Probably the first thing he will do is to establish a "no trust" rule.

Corbett was not as badly damaged as the Ohio Democracy will be next November.

THE HERMIT'S REVENGE.

General Braddock Slain in Retaliation for Abuse of Brother.

When the writer was a youth he spent much time, especially during his vacation periods, in Fayette county, Pennsylvania. There he often took short trips into the mountains known as Chestnut Ridge and Laurel Hill, where were enacted so many famous scenes during the days of the colonial wars. In these trips he was told many times of a noted hermit, Thomas Faucett by name, who lived in a secluded cabin among the mountains. The tales which came to the ears of the awestruck lad were so gaily decorated that they wore the aspect of the legends of a dim and misty past but were all readily accepted with youthful credulity. Mature years have robbed them of their Arabian Nights' splendor, but I must confess that I got much more pleasure out of mountain legends than I now get out of the truth.

Thomas Faucett was reputed to be a mountain hermit of gigantic size and fierce demeanor. He had been a soldier in General Braddock's army in 1755, and had helped to cut the fatal path across the mountains which came to such a sudden and tragic end on that terrible July day by the Monongahela fords. During the march, or during the earlier part of the battle, General Braddock had in some way affronted this rude man. One of the tales says that he had punished Faucett's brother for some offense. This was not unlikely, for Braddock was a severe disciplinarian. Another story is that during the battle the general drove Faucett's brother out from behind a tree, beating him with his sword.

Anyhow, in some such fashion as this, it is not important just how, he had incurred the wrath of the gigantic trooper, who determined on a revenge of which all his life he boasted, but which was cowardly. When the fight was about lost, Faucett, according to his lifelong claim, procured a silver button, and ramming it down into his musket, shot the already wounded and broken-hearted general. This course he followed because of the superstition then prevalent among ignorant soldiers that a general officer could be killed only with a silver bullet. Such is the tale which lived for generations among the Fayette county mountains. Once in a while one may hear it there even now in some far removed mountain cabin, and there are some who religiously believe it just as it had been handed down.

It has been often investigated. Many years ago, while the old hermit was still living, there were serious doubts in the minds of thoughtful men as to the truth of the story. So eminent a historian as the Hon. Winthrop Sargent half a century ago investigated Faucett's claim and pronounced it entirely incredible. This is the general opinion of historical students. There was never one bit of contemporary evidence, even hint, to support Faucett's claim, and his story was always somewhat confused and misleading. But the adherents of the Faucett cult were ever zealous believers of the tale that made their rough hero the assassin of the unfortunate Braddock. C. L. SMITH purpose of the board of public service to see that the work is done without delay.

The much-discussed question of a sewer on Bradshaw avenue, was up for an inning at the meeting of the board last night, and it is likely something will be done for the relief of the residents of that vicinity before the bad weatner comes. It will be remembered that the property owners along Bradshaw avenue were before council at its last meeting with a request that the work be started. It was found at that time that there had been no appropriation for the purpose, and the council could not legally begin the work. It was that the lot owners advance the money necessary to go ahead with the contract and the city would pledge itself to pay its share when the money was forthcoming. The service board racher favored the plan, and it is likely will give instructions for its execution within a short time. No action was taken at the meeting last night.

John Logan, who was assessed for the improvement of Ravine street objected to the amount, saying he had not been given value received. In fact, no improvements whatever were in evidence, and he objected strenuously to paying for something he did not get.

Engineer John A. George was in office at the time the work was supposed to have been performed, and Mr. Kelly, the present engineer was instructed to confer with Mr. George with a view of straightening the matter out.

Cheap Cigars Sold for Good Ones.

The arrest of Henry Silberstone, a cigar dealer at No. 283 Bowery, New York, charged with having refilled cigar boxes, marked the beginning of a war that will be waged against dealers who have been engaged in similar practices. Siberstone is alleged to have bought several boxes of "Cremo" cigars, and after selling the genuine article at the regular price (five cents) refilled the boxes with a cheaper article, which he sold at eight for 25 cents, explaining to his customers that the only difference in the cigars was in the matter of the bands. Substitution of cigars or refilling of boxes has been going on for some time. The bands were placed upon the goods to protect customers. The federal authorities expect more arrests. There are federal and state penalties.

A MISSION OF VENGEANCE.

Captain Jack Devotes Balance of His Days to Extermination of Redskins.

One of the most famous characters of colonial times in Pennsylvania was Captain Jack, the scout. Much is known of his history and about him has gathered a nebulous cloud of mystery which makes enchanting reading, even if we cannot accept it all as gospel truth. The home of this noted ranger was in the Juniata valley, and he was known variously as the Black Hunter, the Wild Hunter of the Juniata, the Black Rifle, La Carabine Noir, or Captain Jack. His early life has always been shrouded in impenetrable darkness. Even in his own days the stories of his origin and of his presence on the frontier as an Indian fighter was mere conjecture. The commonly received tradition, which has passed current among the mountains of Pennsylvania for a century and a half is that Jack was a prosperous settler who took out his family to the frontier to make a home amid the newer and wilder scenes there prevailing. One evening he came back from a day's hunting to find his cabin in ruins and the charred bones of his wife and children smoldering in the ashes. Bitterness filled his heart, and over those loved relics of his dear ones he swore to devote his whole life to the taking of a bloody revenge on the red devils who had so cruelly treated him. According to all stories of his subsequent career the grief-stricken frontiersman carried out his vow in full measure and to the very letter.

He became the relentless foe of the Indians and never lost an opportunity to exact dire vengeance for the evil done him that fatal day. It was his custom to lie in wait along the trails most frequented by the Indian marauding parties, and the vicious crack of his long, black rifle was the only warning of the leaden messenger in its searching flight to brain or heart.

Captain Jack was one of those unerring riflemen whose deeds made the story of the days of American settlement so heroic a narrative. His vow of vengeance was to prove in after years the salvation of many a settler's home which would otherwise have been doomed to destruction, for Jack was always ranging the mountain trails in search of his foes, and many a party of Indians, sneaking stealthily on an unsuspecting foe, was discovered by him and his ranger companions and slain. Settlers frequently found the decomposing bodies of Jack's victims lying where his fatal bullet had tumbled them in the deep forest. And the traveler generally knew who had been that way on his mission of revenge. Jack became a well-known character in the life of the time, his name appearing frequently in the public records of Pennsylvania as a man who rendered great public service to the endangered frontier. His last days are shrouded in the same mystery as his early life. Some say that he went west as the tide of immigration drove both game and Indians on ahead.

In the Juniata valley it is currently said that he lived to old age and at his death was buried near a large spring by the foot of Jack's mountain. If he lies there, there is no definite knowledge of the fact at this day, though this is likely the case. It is said that Captain Jack was the portotype of Cooper's Natty Bumppo.

C. L. SMITH.

The First Rumor of the Ohio.

The Ohio river occupies today so important a place in the geography and commerce of this country that it is very difficult to realize that there was ever a time in which its existence was not known to the white man. It is now the stream on whose broad and swelling bosom float southward the millions of bushels of coal from Pittsburg on which the southern markets rely for their fuel supply. It is also the subject of constant discussion, and the several plans for making it a regular water highway, independent of freshets and rises, occupy a large share in the public attention. Yet there was a time when to the settlers along the Atlantic coast there was not known any such mighty and majestic river. Its great watershed was only the hunting ground of savages and its valley was the home of myriads of wild game, both large and small. In those days the banks of the Ohio were the tramping grounds for countless herds of buffaloes. It was along about the latter part of the seventeenth century that the first rumors of which we have any definite record of this noble stream in the wilderness began to filter through to the French Canadian settlers. In 1669 the Sieur de La Salle sold all his landed property and set out westward from the head of the St. Lawrence on an extensive exploring expedition in what was then the great western wilderness. First he visited the Senecas for guides. Then he skirted the southern shore of Lake Ontario to Irondequoit bay to a Jesuit mission. There he found an interpreter who told with enthusiasm of a great prairie land to the southwest—a fair and fertile region—where flowed a great river in such a direction that it must reach the Vermilion sea or the gulf of Mexico. The stream thus vaguely hinted at was none other than the now world-famous Ohio, then as yet undiscovered and unknown. La Salle proceeded on his long and remarkable journey and came back in safety from this first search for new marvels. It is said that in 1670, the summer following his talk with the interpreter at the mission, he discovered the Ohio and traveled some distance on its waters, but this claim is something like a Scotch verdict, not proven. NEW ICE PLANT

The Manufactory of Judge P. M. Smith Expected to Be Completed in November.

Work on the new P. M. Smith artificial ice plant, which is being erected along the new C. & P. belt line switch in the vicinity of Second street and Broadway, has not been progressing as rapidly as heretofore during the past few days. It was at first stated that the plant would be completed about the middle of September, but it is now feared that the contractors will not finish their work before the first of November, when it will at once be put in operation.

This plant is to have a capacity of 40 tons of ice per day. The building of the plant is to be 150x125 feet. It is to be two stories in height. The west and south ends of the building are to be of brick and the balance framework.

The two large 150-horse-power boilers which were received a week or so ago have been placed on their foundation. This work was completed by Contractor W. M. Wooster. The foundation has not been completed for the large tank which was also recently received, but it is now being laid and will be completed within a few days. Work on the building proper has not yet been started.

This factory will no doubt be one of the best paying institutions of the city. It has the best of backing and is a concern which has been much needed here for several years.

HEALTH BOARD MET

And Discussed the Abatement of Nuisances—Suspicious Flour to Be Analyzed.

An adjourned meeting of the board of health was held last evening in the private office of Mayor Fogo, president of the board. Only a short session was held which lasted about 45 minutes. Mayor Fogo presided. Others present were G. P. Ashley, John F. McQueen, E. C. Taylor and Health Officer Tarr.

The matter of cesspools was the first taken up by the board. They talked over the different cases which were heard at a previous meeting, particularly that of the one located on Thirteenth street on property owned by Ross Noble and McLean Bros. This case was to have been decided by City Engineer Leita, who was to examine the property and report as to whether the property owners or the city were at fault. It was reported at this meeting that the city engineers had not yet made an examination of the property, and the matter was deferred until the next meeting.

Daniel McIntosh, a farmer residing near Irondale, appeared at the board meeting and presented a sample of flour which he had purchased here and which tended to raise bread quickly and said the substance was a menace to health. Different members of the board examined the flour, but were unable to discover any foreign substance. They finally decided to have the flour sent to the secretary of the state board of health and have the same analyzed. The board adjourned to meet in regular session Tuesday evening, Aug. 25.

Millworkers vs. Athletics.

All arrangements have been made for the ball game to be played this afternoon at the Central park here between the Millworkers' team of Mingo and the West End Athletic club team of this city. The game will commence at 3:30. The two teams will lineup as follows:

Wellsville—McClure, c.; Hamilton, ss.; Coleman, 1b.; Grafton 2b.; Culbertson, 3b.; Patterson, lf.; McNutt, cf.; Chapman, rf.; Colledge, p.

Mingo—Baker, c.; Hopkins, p.; Ogden, ss.; Bennick, 1b.; Robb, 2b.; Fahey, 3b.; Thompson, lf.; Flood, cf.; Bembo, rf.

Ready to Begin Work.

A notification has been received by the water works trustees from the Duquesne Engineering company of Pittsburg, the successful bidders for the erection of the new pumping station here, to the effect that they will begin work on the contract next Tuesday, August 18. Material and tools have already been shipped here and the work will be rushed. The contractors expect to have the tunnel, the pump pit and the foundation of the plant completed within six weeks time.

Reduction of Railroad Men.

"The rduction in wages of trainmen on the Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad affects only those employed on the Mingo Junction division, with headquarters at Conway. Not a great number are included in the cut. The notices have been posted here by Assistant Superintendent Coney, whose office is at Wellsville. The order is effective beginning this week, and the only known reason for the reduction is a curtailment of expenses."

Bought a Restaurant.

Charles Patterson, formerly a C. & P. brakeman, whose home is in Salineville, yesterday purchased the restaurant and lunch counter formerly owned by Frank Fitzpatrick and located between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets on Main street. The consideration was $300 and possession was immediately given. Mr. Fitzpatrick has laid no future plans.

A. M. E. Campmeeting.

Rev. L. A. Upshaw, pastor of the A. M. E. church here, has announced that the annual campmeeting of the A. M. E. churches of the Cleveland district will be held at Columbian park beginning August 20 to and including Aug. 22. REMEDY FOR HAY FEVER

After Trying Other Treatments Hyomei Was Used With Perfect Success.

Prior to the discovery of Hyomei, the only advice a physician could give to a hay fever patient was to go away from home but now any one who expects the disease, can, if Hyomei is used, stay at home without fear of the annual attack of sneezing, watery eyes, and other discomfort.

J. F. Forbes, a well known western railroad man, whose home is at McCook, Neb., writes: "I have never had relief from any other remedy for hay fever, even temporarily, until I discovered the merits of Hyomei. I will always reccommend it whenever occasion requires."

There is no offensive stomach dosing when Hyomei is used. It is a reliable remedy for the cure of all diseases of the respiratory organs and is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, so that the air taken into the throat and lungs is like that of the White Mountains or other health resorts where hay fever is unknown.

Will Reed, who has the local agency for Hyomei, advises all who are subject to hay fever to begin its use two or three weeks before the time of the annual appearance of this disease and thus prevent the attack. If, however, Hyomei is not used until the sneezing and other disagreeable symptoms have shown themselves, it is necessary to use the treatment more frequently, at least half a dozen times daily, and Hyomei Balm should be rubbed into the nostrils both morning and night.

The fact that Will Reed agrees to refund the money to any hay fever sufferer who uses Hyomei without success, should inspire confidence in its power to effect a cure.

A STRONG BILL

Numerous Attractions of Merit at Rock Springs Theatre the Coming Week.

The bill at the Rock Springs theatre the coming week is one of the strongest of the season, and the artists will doubtless be welcomed by large crowds throughout the engagement. Manager Franklin has made an especial effort to secure a good bill for this week and he has succeeded.

A novel feature of the bill will be given by Rose Traynon and her intelligent troupe of birds. The pack contains 50 birds, and the feats performed by them is nothing short of wonderful.

Levina & Gray as the tramp juggler and the soubrette, have been engaged for the week, and their act is one of the best on the vaudeville stage. Their audiences have been delighted everywhere, and they will surely be appreciated in East Liverpool.

A paper tearing turn will be given by Kitty Gray, one of the cleverest women who ever faced an audience here. The act is a catchy piece of work, and is entirely new to a majority of the theatre goers.

"On the Golf Links" is the subject of a very funny sketch created and played by Warren and Howard. This team is noted for the novelty of its acts, and the industry of the members. They are sure to please.

The bill will be concluded by a Kinctograph exhibition which has won the admiration and applause of audiences all over the country, and will be among the most pleasing features of the evening's vaudevine performance.

At his hearing this morning he was penitent and appearing to be a good fellow, Justice W. C. Johnston was lenient and allowed him to depart on payment of $1 and costs. Part of the fine was paid by himself and the rest by the the prosecution.

Colonel Maschin and His Part In Servia's Tragedy.

One odd phase of the recent Servian tragedy is the fact that the leader of the assassins of King Alexander and Queen Draga was a brother-in-law of the ill fated queen, whose insatiable ambition finally led her on to her doom. The name of this chief conspirator against the Obrenovitch dynasty is Alexander Maschin, who became the implacable enemy of Queen Draga when she was still plain Draga Maschin, wife of his brother. As soon as Draga, after years of scheming, captured the affections of the young king and became his queen in defiance of public sentiment in Servia, she speedily brought about the downfall of her old enemy. Colonel Maschin lost all his appointments, was looked upon with suspicion and disfavor by King Alexander and was in disgrace despite the fact that he still held rank in the Servian army.

Queen Draga was a good hater and a dangerous enemy, but she seems to have more than met her match in the person of Maschin. In revenge for the slights that had been put upon him he seems to have used all his influence to inflame his brother officers against the royal couple, who were none too popular already, and when the conspiracy against them was organized he was its chief. On the night of June 10 he gave his final instructions to the plotters at a tavern named the Servian Crown and then led them to the palace, where, it is said, he even took a personal part in the butchery of the king and queen. When the couple concealed themselves it was Colonel Maschin who searched for them with such persistence that they were finally discovered and dispatched in the secret room to which they had fled.

Colonel Maschin is a veteran of both the Servian army and diplomatic corps. He served with distinction in the army, was military attache at Vienna and also served as Servian minister at an unimportant post. He is now minister of public works under King Peter Karageorgevitch and was a conspicuous figure at the welcome accorded the new king when he reached Belgrade recently.

Living, Yet Dead.

In a German law journal may be found a curious account of a woman who, though actually living, is legally dead. Some years ago she disappeared from her home, and after three years had elapsed the court formally pronounced her dead and turned over her property to her next of kin. Soon afterward she returned to her native place, and as there was no question as to her identity she naturally thought that she would have no difficulty in recovering her property. The court, however, flatly refused to comply with her request.

"You have been declared dead," it virtually said, "and it is impossible for us to regard you as living."

Thereupon the woman appealed to a higher court, but her labor was in vain, for the verdict of the lower court was upheld, and, moreover, an official notice was issued to the effect that the plaintiff, having formally been declared dead, could not now be restored to life, as the law understands that word, and must remain dead until doomsday.

Bullets and Botany.

A correspondent tells the London News that being at Palling, in Norfolk, he asked permission of a local marsh owner to walk over his meadows. "What for?" he wanted to know. "Oh, to do a little botanizing," was the reply. There was a pause while the landowner scratched his head. Then, slowly and suspiciously, "Not with a gun?"

John Wesley's Shrewish Wife.

One of his biographers declares that if he had searched the whole kingdom the evangelist John Wesley would hardly have found a woman more unsuitable than she whom he married. She did not even confine herself to her tongue in her attacks. More than once she laid violent hands on him. "Jack," said John Hampson to his son, "I was once on the point of committing murder. It was when I was in the north of Ireland and I went into a room and found Mrs. Wesley foaming with fury. Her husband was on the floor, where she had been trailing him by the hair of his head, and she herself was still holding in her hand venerable locks which she had plucked out by the roots. I felt," continued Hampson, who was a giant of a man, though not one of Wesley's warmest friends—"I felt as though I could have knocked the soul out of her."—Everybody's Magazine.

Moorish Baths.

In Spain, while the Moors were in the ascendency, luxurious hot baths were established. They were used in connection with the religious rites of Islam. The Islamites were required to bathe frequently. The manner of bathing was as follows:

After undressing, the bather is wrapped in a woolen coat, sandals are put on and he walks to the hot bath. After a thorough hot bath all parts of the body are rubbed. The soles of the feet are rubbed with pumice stone, then the body is anointed with oil and sprinkled with perfumed powders.

When the Moors were driven out of Spain the first thing the people did was to destroy the Moorish bath houses. This was done because of religious prejudice against the Moors.

WINTERS PUZZLED NILES SWATTERS

The Locals Took a Brace in Fielding and Played Brilliant Ball, Reark Being the Star—Houser Had Great Luck.

Talk about Deacon Philippe, Pedagogue Leever, Rube Waddell and the rest of the slab stars of the league, but it must be remembered that our own Morg. Winters scintillates a little himself. Morg. added so much to the laurels he has previously won this season that he had to borrow the wheel barrow in the club house to cart them home. Holding the hard hitting Niles bunch to seven hits, with only two of them in any one round, giving but one free pass and beating them to the tune of 5 to 4, is a feat, the record of which Morg. ought to paste in his scrap book to pore over in the years to come. It was his masterly pitching that made yesterday's victory possible.

Morg. made the premier swatters from Niles town look like a string of sausages and had it not been for a couple of wobbles in the opener, would have held them until the ninth without a run. That tally in the hoodoo inning was earned on two clean hits. Outside of Gibby's two messes in the first the only other miscue was a wild throw by Houser of Patterson's grounder in the third—quite a revrsal of fielding from Thursday.

Manager Reark carried off the honors with a couple of sensational catches in middle field. After Glassburner had doubled in the second, with two down, Kommer hit a short liner to right center. It looked goood for a safety but the fleet footed Reark nailed it on a dead run. In the eighth he spoiled a long hit for Glassburner by taking his terrific line drive. Both of Reark's hits were timely, the first starting the batting rally in the fifth and the second scoring Heckathorn, who had found his old friend, Charley Crowe, for a terrific smash the first time he faced him. Big Heck failed to connect with Kommer's speedy ones.

Houser was also a star both with the willow and in the field. That smash of his in the fifth was as hard a center shot as has been seen here this season and with a fair amount of luck it would have been good for a homer. The leather traveled to left on a line, about 3 feet over Glassburner's head and struck the fence on the first bound. Glassburner's quick return held Houser at third and he was left there.

There was a noticeable difference in the fielding of the visitors their two bungles coming in rapid succession in the third, helping the locals to their first tally. Kommel, who did the twirling until his "baby act" and quit, had terrific speed and the best command of any south paw here this season. That drubbing he got in the fifth started his ill humor and when Umpire Davis' judgment on balls and strikes while Webb was up failed to please him, he took his marbles and sulked to the bench. This settled Kommer with the fans and when the veteran Charley Crowe went to the slab to finish the game he was lustily cheered.

Gibby made a mess of things in the opener and after it was over he was switched to left garden, Webb going to second and Houser to short, a wise move. Porter fanned for a starter but DeMoss hit safely. Patterson's grounder was foozled and DeMoss scooted on to third. Brown threw Patterson out at second on Ortlieb's grounder, while DeMoss was crossing the pan for the first tally of the game. Gibby made another fozzle on Murphy's bounder, a difficult chance, and recovered the sphere too late to nail him at first. Ortlieb tried for home and made it when Big Heck's throw to catch him got away. Murphy was caught napping off first for the third out.

The locals went out in order in their half and the second was unproductive of runs although Glassburner doubled with two hands down. Reark's great catch of Kommer's short liner spoiled their chances for a run.

Houser gave them another in the third on his wild throw of Patterson's grounder. He made a great stop but did not have time to straighten up for an accurate throw and the ball rolled past Heckathorn to the fence. Ortlieb's safety scored him.

Webb made the circuit in the third, getting a start when Nagel failed on his grounder. Webb tried to steal and Kreuger failed to hold Ortlieb's throw. Gibby placed a nice safety, good for two sacks, and Webb scored. Kommer fanned three men in this round.

There was an old time batting bee in the fifth that delighted the hearts of the fans, who were beginning to fear that Kommel was too deep a mystery to be solved. Reark led off with a clean one and Webb advanced him with a sacrifice. Winters came to the rescue with a hit and Reark counted. Gibby helped Winters along with another clean rap and Houser met one squarely on the nose. The leather shot to left on a line and Houser sprinted around to third while Glassburner was pulling it out of the grass at the fence. Bennett could not bring him in.

When Webb came to the bat in the seventh Kommel showed himself to be a rank quitter, leaving the game after Umpire Davis had called four bad ones. He was roasted by his fellow players for showing the white feather but the small amount of coaxing he got failed to induce him to resume the game. Charley Crowe, who twirled Thursday's trying contest gamely went to the rubber. Emmerling helped Webb to second with a single but he was nailed at third on Gibby's grounder. Houser ended the round with a fly to Patterson.

Morg gave Porter a free pass in the eighth but he was caught off first and run down by Emmeruing, Winters, Houser and Heck. DeMoss followed with a hit but it went for naught as Patterson went out to Heck.

Heck faced Crowe for the first time in the eighth and found him just as easy as he did in the opener. He cracked out a pretty double and scored on Reark's two sacker.

That hoodoo inning, the ninth, looked dangerous again for a brief time. Ortlieb opened with a screecher and stopped at second. Murphy phy fanned out but Kreuger scored him with a shot good for two. The best Nagel could do was a grounder to Houser. A hit would have tied the score but Glassburner failed, popping up to Houser.

CURRENCY LEGISLATION NEEDED

Going to Be a Difficult Task to Frame a Financial Measure That Will Be Reasonably Satisfactory.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 15.—Senator Cullom and Comptroller Ridgely discussed the financial situation with the president with special reference to the necessity of currency legislation. Comptroller Ridgely talked over with the president some of the features of his annual report to congress. The opinion is expressed frankly that it is going to be a difficult task to frame a financial measure that will be reasonably satisfactory to the exponents of the various schemes for improving the currency system. Thus far practically the only proposition upon which nearly all seem to be agreed is that the proposed legislation should include a provision for the depositing of customs receipts in national banks.

Comptroller Ridgely is going to Pittsfield, Mass., for a few days' rest, while Senator Cullom will start for Chicago.

Secretary Hitchcock talked with the president about the Littauer-Lyon glove contract case, among other things, but said, before leaving for Washington that it would not be proper for him to discuss the matter for publication at this time.

Former Secretary of the Treasury John G. Carlisle, Dennis T. Flynn, for several years delegate from Oklahoma in the house of representatives; Bishop Frederick Z. Rooker, who until recently was secretary of the papal delegation in Washington and Edward Lauterbach of New York, called on the president.

General Robert Shaw Oliver, recently appointed assistant secretary of war, will take luncheon with the President. The visit will afford the president and Secretary Oliver opportunity to discuss some important details of the departmental work.

Go Prepared.

In preparing for your summer outing a little forethought may save you no end of trouble. Mr. John H. Manly, a dry goods merchant, of Bellville, R. I., while packing an outfit for camping a few weeks on Narragansett Bay, put in a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for emergency use. The second day in camp his little boy was taken with cramp colic. The first dose of this remedy gave relief and the second dose effected a cure. Think of the pain and suffering this boy would have had to endure without this remedy at hand to relieve him. Such cases often result fatally. For sale by Alvin H. Bulger.

The Ways of Boston.

The crooked streets of Boston are said to follow the old paths along which the early settlers of the place drove their cows to and from their pasture on the common. However true this may be, it is certain that many of the main streets of the old city proper mark geographic features, formerly of importance, but now almost entirely forgotten. Atlantic avenue follows closely the original shore line; Washington street preserves in its curves the old road along the narrow neck of land which was the only connection for a long time between the mainland and Boston peninsula, with its three hills, which gave the name Tremont; Causeway street represents the dam to the earliest tidal mill pond, and Beacon street, the "mill dam," was built later to hold back the waters of Back bay at high tide to be used for power at low tide; the curve of Park square gives the shore line of this Back bay, where the fathers and grandfathers of the present generation used to put on their skates to glide over the area now occupied by Trinity church and the Public library.—F. P. Gulliver in Journal of Geography.

Education is a mighty good thing to have in the house, but you can't trot a small jackass around a college and make a blooded steed of him.—Dallas News.

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

CHAPTER I.—Grenfall Lorry, a wealthy American globe trotter, stumbles into acquaintance with a charming foreign girl on the train from Denver to Washington. The pair are left behind when the fler stops for repairs in West Virginia. II.—Lorry wires ahead to hold the train. He and the unknown girl ride twenty miles at a tearing pace in a mountain coach. Lorry knows it is a dangerous ride. There is no love-making, but a near approach to it as the rolling stage tumbles the passengers about. III.—Lorry dines with the foreign party, consisting of Miss Guggenslocker, Uncle Caspar and Aunt Yvonne. They are natives of Graustark, a country Lorry had never heard of before. IV.—Lorry shows the foreigners the sights of Washington. They leave for New York to sail on the Kaiser Wilhelm. Miss Guggenslocker naively calls Lorry her "Ideal American" and invites him to come and see her at Edelweiss. V.—Wildly infatuated, Lorry hurries to New York. The name Guggenslocker is not on the steamer list. He sees the steamer off. Miss G. waves him a kiss from the deck. VI.—Lorry joins his old friend, Harry Anguish, an American artist in Paris. Graustark and its capital Edelweiss, are located by a guide book. The Americans get no trace of the Guggenslockers there. VII.—Lorry sees his charmer driving in a carriage with a beautiful companion of her own sex. He gets a glance of recognition, but the carriage rolls on, leaving the mystery unsolved. Later he receives a note at his hotel signed Sophia Guggenslocker, inviting him to visit her next day. VIII.—In the evening Lorry and Anguish ramble about the grounds of the castle where dwells the court of the princess of Graustark. They overhear a plot to abduct the princess and resolve to capture the plotters red handed. IX.—Following the conspirators, Lorry finds himself in a room he heard them designate as that of the princess. X.—Lorry tells the princess of the plot. Mutual recognition; she is Miss Guggenslocker. Dannox, the guard, is in the abduction plot. He fells Lorry with a terrible blow. Anguish to the rescue. XI.—Lorry quartered in the castle. The princess visits him, but forbids all talk of love. XII.—Graustark is bankrupt and owes the neighboring princedom of Axphain $30,000,000. The creditor demands cash or the cession of the richest districts of Graustark.

"Has she chosen the course she will pursue?" asked Lorry as the countess concluded her story. His face was turned away.

"She cannot decide. We have wept together over this dreadful, this horrible thing. You do not know what it means to all of us, Mr. Lorry. We love her, and there is not one in our land who would sacrifice her to save this territory. As for Gabriel, Graustark would kill her before she should go to him. Still she cannot let herself sacrifice those northern subjects when by a single act she can save them. You see, the princess has not forgotten that her father brought this war upon the people, and she feels it her duty to pay the penalty of his error, whatever the cost."

"Is there no other to whom she can turn—no other course?" asked Lorry.

"There is none who would assist us, bankrupt as we are. There is a question I want to ask, Mr. Lorry. Please look at me. Do not stare at the fountain all the time. Why have you come to Edelweiss?" She asked the question so boldly that his startled embarrassment was an unspoken confession. He calmed himself and hesitated long before answering, weighing his reply. She sat close beside him, her clear gray eyes reading him like a book.

"I came to see a Miss Guggenslocker," he answered at last.

"For what purpose? There must have been an urgent cause to bring you so far. You are not an American banker?"

"I had intended to ask her to be my wife," he said, knowing that secrecy was useless and seeing a faint hope.

"You did not find Miss Guggenslocker?"

"No; I have not found her."

"And are you going home disappointed, Mr. Lorry, because she is not here?"

"I leave the answer to your tender imagination."

There was a long pause.

"May I ask when you expect to leave Graustark?" she asked somewhat timidly.

"Why do you wish to know?" he asked in turn.

"Because I know how hopeless your quest has been. You have found Miss Guggenslocker, but she is held behind a wall so strong and impregnable that you cannot reach her with the question you came to ask. You have come to that wall, and now you must turn back. I have asked how soon?"

"Not until your princess bids me take up my load and go. You see, my lady, I love to sit beneath the shadow of the wall you describe. It will require a royal edict to compel me to abandon my position."

"You cannot expect the princess to drive you from her country, you who have done so much for her. You must go, Mr. Lorry, without her bidding."

"I must?"

"Yes, for your presence outside that wall may make the imprisonment all the more unendurable for the one your love cannot reach. Do you understand me?"

"Has the one behind the wall instructed you to say this to me?" he asked miserably.

"She has not. I do not know her heart, but I am a woman and have a woman's foresight. If you wish to be kind and good to her, go."

"I cannot!" he exclaimed, his pent feelings bursting forth. "I cannot go!"

"You will not be so selfish and so cruel as to increase the horror of the wreck that is sure to come," she said, drawing back.

"You know, countess, of the life saving crews who draw from the wrecks of ships lives that were hopelessly lost. There is to be a wreck here. Is there to be a life saver? When the night is darkest, the sea wildest, when hope is gone, is not that the time when rescue is most precious? Tell me, you who know all there is of this approaching disaster."

"I cannot command you to leave Edelweiss. I can only tell you that you will have something to answer for if you stay," said the countess.

"Will you help me if I show to you that I can reach the wreck and save the one who clings to it despairingly?" he asked, smiling, suddenly calm and confident.

"Willingly, for I love the one who is going down in the sea. I have spoken to you seriously, though, and I trust you will not misunderstand me. I like you, and I like Mr. Anguish. You could stay here forever so far as I am concerned."

He thought long and intently over what she had said as he smoked his cigar on the great balcony that night. He saw in one moment the vast chasm between the man and the princess; in the next he laughed at the puny space.

Down on the promenade he could see the figures of men and women strolling in the moonlight. To his ears came the occasional laugh of a man, the silvery gurgle of a woman. The royal military band was playing in the stand near the edge of the great circle. There were gayety, comfort, charm and security about everything that came to his eyes and ears. Where was she? He had seen her in the afternoon and had talked with her, had walked with her. Their conversation had been bright, but of the commonplace kind. She had said nothing to indicate that she remembered the hour spent beside his couch a day or so before; he had uttered none of the words that struggled to rush from his lips—the questions, the pleadings, the vows. Where was she now? Not in that gay crowd below, for he had scanned every figure with the hawk's eye; closeted again, no doubt, with her ministers, wearying her tired brain, her brave heart into fatigue without rest.

Her court still trembled with the excitement of the daring attempt of the abductors and their swift punishment. Functionaries flocked to Edelweiss to inquire after the welfare of the princess, and indignation was at the highest pitch. There were theories innumerable as to the identity of the arch conspirator. Baron Dangloss was at sea completely. He cursed himself and everybody else for the hasty and ill timed execution of the hirelings. It was quite evident that the buzzing wonder and intense feeling of the people had for the moment driven out all thought of the coming day of judgment and its bitter atonement for all Graustark. Today the castle was full of the nobility, drawn to its walls by the news that had startled them beyond all expression. The police were at work, the military trembled with rage, the people clamored for the apprehension of the man who had been the instigator of this audacity. The general belief was that some brigand chief from the south had planned the great theft for the purpose of securing a fabulous ransom. Grenfall Lorry had an astonishing theory in his mind, and the more he thought it over the more firmly it was imbedded.

The warm, blue coils from the cigar wafted away into the night, carrying with them a myriad of tangled thoughts—of her, of Axphain, of the abductor, of himself, of everything. A light step on the stone floor of the shadowy balcony attracted his attention. He turned his head and saw the Princess Yetive. She was walking slowly toward the balustrade, not aware of his presence. There was no covering for the dark hair, no wrap about the white shoulders. She wore an exquisite gown of white, shimmering with the reflections from the moon that scaled the mountain top. She stood at the balustrade, her hands clasping a bouquet of red roses, her chin lifted, her eyes gazing toward the mountain's crest, the prettiest picture he had ever seen. The strange dizziness of love overpowered him. How long he reveled in the glory of the picture he knew not, for it was as if he looked from a dream. At last he saw her look down upon the roses, lift them slowly and drop them over the rail. They fell to the ground below. He thought he understood—the gift of a prince despised.

They were not twenty feet apart. He advanced to her side, his hat in one hand, his stick—the one that felled the Viennese—trembling in the other.

"I did not know you were here," she exclaimed in half frightened amazement. "I left my ladies inside."

He was standing beside her, looking down into the eyes.

"And I am richer because of your ignorance," he said softly. "I have seen a picture that shall never leave my memory—never! Its beauty enthralled, enraptured. Then I saw the drama of the roses. Ah, your highness, the crown is not always a mask."

"The roses were—were of no consequence," she faltered.

"I have heard how you stand between two suitors and that wretched treaty. My heart has ached to tell you how I pity you."

"It is not pity I need, but courage. Pity will not aid me in my duty, Mr. Lorry. It stands plainly before me, this duty, but I have not the courage to take it up and place it about my neck forever."

"You do not, cannot love this Lorenz?" he asked.

"Love him!" she cried. "Ach, I forget! You do not know him. Yet I shall doubtless be his wife." There was an eternity of despair in that low, steady voice.

"You shall not! I swear you shall not!"

"Oh, he is a prince! I must accept the offer that means salvation to Graustark. Why do you make it harder with torture which you think is kindness? Listen to me. Next week I am to give my answer. He will be here in this castle. My father brought this calamity upon Graustark; I must lift it from the people. What has my happiness to do with it?"

Her sudden strength silenced him, crushed him with the real awakening of helplessness. He stood beside her, looking up at the cold monastery, strangely conscious that she was gazing toward the same dizzy height.

"It looks so peaceful up there," she said at last.

"But so cold and cheerless," he added drearily. There was another long silence in which two hearts communed through the medium of that faraway sentinel. "They have not discovered a clew to the chief abductor, have they?" he asked in an effort to return to his proper sphere.

"Baron Dangloss believes he has a clew—a meager and unsatisfactory one, he admits—and today sent officers to Ganlook to investigate the actions of a strange man who was there last week, a man who styled himself the Count of Arabazon and who claimed to be of Vienna. Some Austrians had been huntings stags and bears in the north, however, and it is possible he is one of them." She spoke slowly, her eyes still bent on the home of the monks.

"Your highness, I have a theory, a bold and perhaps a criminal theory, but you will allow me to tell you why I am possessed of it. I am aware that there is a Prince Gabriel. It is my opinion that no Viennese is guilty, nor are the brigands to be accused of this masterpiece in crime. Have you thought how far a man may go to obtain his heart's desire?"

She looked at him instantly, her eyes wide with growing comprehension, the solution to the mystery darting into her mind like a flash.

"You mean"— she began, stopping as if afraid to voice the suspicion.

"That Prince Gabriel is the man who bought your guards and hired Geddos and Ostrom to carry you to the place where he could own you, whether you would or no," said Lorry.

"But he could never have forced me to marry him, and I should sooner or later have exposed him," she whispered argumentatively. "He could not expect me to be silent and submit to a marriage under such circumstances. He knows that I would denounce him even at the altar."

The prettiest picture he had ever seen.

"You do not appreciate my estimate of that gentleman."

"What is to become of me?" she almost sobbed in an anguish of fear. "I see now—I see plainly! It was Gabriel, and he would have done as you say." A shudder ran through her figure, and he tenderly whispered in her ear:

"The danger is past. He can do no more, your highness. Were I positive that he is the man—and I believe he is—I would hunt him down this night."

Her eyes closed happily under his gaze, her hand dropped timidly from his arm, and a sweet sense of security filled her soul.

"I am not afraid," she murmured.

"Because I am here?" he asked, bending nearer.

"Because God can bless with the same hand that punishes," she answered enigmatically, lifting her lashes again and looking into his eyes with a love at last unmasked. "He gives me a man to love and denies me happiness. He makes of me a woman, but he does not unmake me a princess. Through you he thwarts a villain; through you he crushes the innocent. More than ever, I thank you for coming into my life. You, and you alone, guided by the God who loves and despises me, saved me from Gabriel."

"I only ask"— he began eagerly, but she interrupted.

"You should not ask anything, for I have said I cannot pay. I owe to you all I have, but cannot pay the debt."

"I shall not again forget," he murmured.

"Tomorrow, if you like, I will take you over the castle and let you see the squalor in which I exist—my throneroom, my chapel, my banquet hall, my ballroom, my conservatory, my sepulcher. You may say it is wealth, but I shall call it poverty," she said.

"Tomorrow, if you will be so kind."

"Perhaps I may be poorer after I have saved Graustark," she said.

"I would to God I could save you from that!" he said.

"I would to God you could," she said. Her manner changed suddenly. She laughed gayly, turning a light face to his. "I hear your friend's laugh out there in the darkness. It is delightfully infectious."

CHAPTER XIV.

THE EPISODE OF THE THRONEROOM.

"THIS is the throneroom. Allode!" The Princess Yetive paused before two massive doors. It was the next afternoon, and she had already shown him the palace of a queen, the hovel of a pauper!

Through the afternoon not one word other than those which might have passed between good friends escaped the lips of either. He was all interest, she all graciousness. Allode, the sturdy guard, swung open the doors, drew the curtain and stood aside for them to pass. Into the quiet hall she led him, a princess in a gown of gray, a courtier in tweeds. Inside the doors he paused.

"And I thought you were Miss Guggenslocker," he said. She laughed with the glee of a child who has charmed and delighted through surprise.

"Am I not a feeble mite to sit on that throne and rule all that comes within its reach?" She directed his attention to the throne at the opposite end of the hall. "From its seat I calmly instruct gray haired statesmen, weigh their wisdom and pass upon it as if I were Demosthenes, challenge the evils that may drive monarchs mad and wonder if my crown is on straight."

"Let me be ambassador from the United States and kneel at the throne, your highness."

"I could not engage in a jest with the crown my ancestors wore, Mr. Lorry. It is sacred, thou thoughtless American. Come, we will draw nearer that you may see the beauty of the workmanship in that great old chair."

They stood at the base of the low, velveted stage on which stood the chair, with its high back, its massive arms and legs a-shimmer in the light from the lofty windows. It was of gold, inlaid with precious stones—diamonds, rubies, emeralds, sapphires and other wondrous jewels—a relic of ancient Graustark.

"I never sit in the center. Always at one side or the other, usually leaning my elbow on the arm. You see, the discussions are generally so long and dreary that I become fatigued. One time—I am ashamed to confess it—I went to sleep on the throne. That was long ago. I manage to keep awake very well of late. Do you like my throneroom?"

"And to think that it is yours!"

"It is this room that gives me the right to be hailed with 'Long live the princess!' Not with campaign yells and 'Hurrah for Yetive!' How does that sound? 'Hurrah for Yetive!'" She was laughing merrily.

"Don't say it! It sounds sacrilegious, revolting!"

"For over three years—since I was eighteen—I have been supreme in that chair. During the years of my reign prior to that time I sat there with my Uncle Caspar standing beside me. How often I begged him to sit down with me! There was so much room, and he certainly must have grown tired of standing. One time I cried because he frowned at me when I persisted in the presence of a great assemblage of nobles from Dawsbergen. It seems that it was a most important audience that I was granting, but I thought more of my uncle's tired old legs. I remember saying through my sobs of mortification that I would have him beheaded. You are to guess whether that startling threat created consternation or mirth."

"What a whimsical little princess you must have been, weeping and pouting and going to sleep!" he laughed. "And how sedate and wise you have become!"

"Thank you. How very nice you are. I have felt all along that some one would discern my effort to be dignified and sedate. They say I am wise and good and gracious, but that is to be expected. They said that of sovereigns as far back as the deluge, I've heard. Would you really like to see me in that old chair?" she asked.

"Ah, you are still a woman," he said, smiling at her pretty vanity. "Nothing could impress me more pleasantly."

She stepped carelessly and impulsively upon the royal platform, leaned against the arm of the throne, and with the charming blush of consciousness turned to him with the quickness of a guilty conscience, eager to hear his praise, but fearful lest he secretly condemned her conceit. His eyes were burning with the admiration that knows no defining, and his breath came quick and sharp through parted lips. He involuntarily placed a foot upon the bottom step, as if to spring to her side.

"You must not come up here!" she cried, shrinking back, her hands extended in fluttering remonstrance. "I cannot permit that at all!"

"I beg your pardon," he cried. "That is all the humble plebeian can say. That I may be more completely under this fairy spell, pray cast about yourself the robe of rank and take up the scepter. Perhaps I may fall upon my face."

"And hurt your head all over again," she said, laughing nervously. She hesitated for a moment, a perplexed frown crossing her brow. Then she jerked a rich robe from the back of the throne and placed it about her shoulders as only a woman can. Taking up the scepter, she stood before the great chair and, with a smile on her lips, held it above his head, saying softly:

"Graustark welcomes the American prince."

He sank to his knee before the real princess, kissed the hem of her robe and arose with face pallid. The chasm was now endless in its immensity. The princess gingerly seated herself on the throne, placed her elbow on the broad arm, her white chin in her hand, and tranquilly surveyed the voiceless American prince.

"You have not said 'Thank you,'" she said finally, her eyes wavering beneath his steady gaze.

"I am only thinking how easy it would be to cross the gulf that lies between us. With two movements of my body I can place it before you, with a third I can be sitting at your side. It is not so difficult after all," he said, hungrily eying the broad chair.

"No man, unless a prince, ever sat upon this throne," she said.

"You have called me a prince."

"Oh, I jested," she cried quickly, comprehending his intention. "I forbid you!"

Her command came too late, for he was beside her on the throne of Graustark! She sat perfectly rigid for a moment, intense fear in her eyes.

"Do you know what you have done?" she whispered miserably.

"Usurped the throne," he replied, assuming an ease and complacence he did not feel. Truly he was guilty of unprecedented presumption.

"You have desecrated—desecrated! Do you hear?" she went on, paying no attention to his remark.

"Peccavi. Ah, your highness, I delight in my sin! For once I am a power. I speak from the throne. You will not have me abdicate in the zenith of my glory? Be kind, most gracious one. Besides, did you not once cry because your uncle refused to sit with you? Had he been the possessor of a dangerous wound, as I am, and had he found himself so weak that he could stand no longer, I am sure he would have done as I have—sat down in preference to falling limp at your feet. You do not know how badly I am wounded," he pleaded, with the subtlest double meaning.

"Why should you wound me?" she asked plaintively. "You have no right to treat the throne I occupy as a subject for pranks and indignities. I did not believe you could be so—forgetful." There was a proud and pitiful resentment in her voice that brought him to his senses at once. He had defiled her throne. In shame and humiliation he cried:

"I am a fool, an ingrate! You have been too gentle with me. For this despicable act of mine I cannot ask pardon, and it would be beneath you to grant it. I have hurt you, and I can never atone. I forgot how sacred is your throne. Let me depart in disgrace." He stood erect as if to forsake the throne he had stained, but she, swayed by a complete reversal of feeling, timidly, pleadingly touched his arm.

"Stay! It is my throne, after all. I shall divide it, as well as the sin, with you. Sit down again, I beg of you. For a brief spell I would rule beside a man who is fit to be a king, but who is a desecrator. There can be no harm, and no one shall be the wiser for this sentimental departure from royal custom. We are children anyhow, mere children."

With an exclamation of delight he resumed his position beside her. His hand trembled as he took up hers to carry it to his lips. "We are children—playing with fire," he murmured, this ingrate, this fool!

"Allode!" she cried in frantic terror

She allowed her hand to lie limply in his, her head sinking to the back of the chair. When her hand was near his feverish lips, cool and white and trusting, he checked the upward progress. Slowly he raised his eyes to study her face, finding that hers were closed, the semblance of a smile touching her lips as if they were in a happy dream.

The lips! The lips! The lips! The madness of love rushed into his heart; the expectant hand was forgotten; his every hope and every desire measured itself against his discretion as he looked upon the tempting face. Could he kiss those lips but once his life would be complete.

With a start she opened her eyes, doubtless at the command of the masterful ones above. The eyes of blue met the eyes of gray in a short, sharp struggle, and the blue went down in surrender. His lips triumphed slowly, drawing closer and closer as if restrained and impelled by the same emotion—arrogant love.

"Open your eyes, darling," he whispered, and she obeyed. Then their lips met—her first kiss of love!

She trembled from head to foot, perfectly powerless beneath the spell. Again he kissed a princess on her throne. At this second kiss her eyes grew wide with terror, and she sprang from his side, standing before him like one bereft of reason.

"Oh, my God! What have you done?" she wailed. He staggered to his feet, dizzy with joy.

"Ha!" cried a gruff voice from the doorway, and the guilty ones whirled to look upon the witness to their blissful crime. Inside the curtains, with carbine leveled at the head of the American, stood Allode, the guard, his face distorted with rage. The princess screamed and leaped between Lorry and the threatening carbine.

"Allode!" she cried in frantic terror.

He angrily cried out something in his native tongue and she breathlessly, imploringly replied. Lorry did not understand their words, but he knew that she had saved him from death at the hand of her loyal, erring guard. Allode lowered his gun, bowed low and turned his back upon the throne.

"He—he would have killed you," she said tremulously, her face the picture of combined agony and relief. She remembered the blighting kisses and then the averted disaster.

RALPH CONNOR, NOVELIST.

How the Author of "Sky Pilot" Got His Nom de Plume.

The new Canadian writer Ralph Connor, whose books, "Black Rock" and "Sky Pilot," have placed him in the very front rank of Canadian story tellers, in private life is the Rev. Charles W. Gordon, a Presbyterian minister of Winnipeg.

Ralph Connor came of stolid Scottish stock. His father, the Rev. Daniel Gordon, went to Canada in the early forties, finally settling in the village of Glengarry, in the Indian lands, and there the author was born forty-three years ago. He was educated at Toronto university, subsequently taking a three years' course in theology at Knox college.

The nom de plume of Ralph Connor came to the Rev. Mr. Gordon in a rather curious way. He was discouraged over the appropriation that had been made by a certain missionary committee for work in the mining camps of western Canada. Disheartened, he went to the editor of the Westminster, a weekly published in Toronto. This editor, an old college mate, told him to wage his campaign for mission funds through his columns.

He wrote his first sketch. It is now the first chapter of "Black Rock." The editor was delighted with it, but what should the author be called? The signing of his real name at the time might have provoked criticism from the mission board. He telegraphed to Mr. Gordon asking what name should be signed.

Mr. Gordon received the telegram late in the evening, just as he was finishing a report to the missionary society. His eye lit upon the heading of it, which was abbreviated as follows: "Brit.-Can. Nor. West. Miss. Soc." The two syllables "Can" and "Nor" struck his fancy, and he telegraphed his reply, "Sign Cannor." By some slip of the telegraph operator the message reached Toronto, "Sign Connor." The editor prefixed the name Ralph, and so Ralph Connor was found.

Ralph Connor's books have been wonderfully successful, and his work as an author, so strangely begun, has brought substantial rewards as well as fame. Besides "Black Rock" and "Sky Pilot" he has written "The Man From Glengarry," "Glengarry School Days" and "Beyond the Marshes."

HORSESHOERS' OUTING A BIG SUCCESS

A Large Gathering of the Fraternity Has An Enjoyable Day at Columbian Park.

The first annual picnic and outing of the local branches of the Master Horseshoers' National Protective association, of America, was held today at Columbian park with members in attendance from this city, Wellsville Chester, Lisbon, Beaver, Hookstown Salem and other points. The arrangements were in charge of committees from the organization in this city and were most effectually carried out, providing a day of unalloyed pleasure for all in attendance. A program of sports and other amusements was provided and there were other diversions for those who did not care to witness the contests.

While the day was given over to pure enjoyment, many matters pertaining to the welfare of the organization were discussed and there was an interchange of ideas and opinions upon pending matters that will result in much good when the time for action arrives.

The visiting members will leave for their homes this evening.

terms with several of the male members of the company. She attended the exhibitions each night, and when the engagement here was finished was well acquainted with a number of the showmen. It is thought she carried on a correspondence with some one of them after they left the city, and was to have received a letter the day before she disappeared.

Last Saturday Mabel visited her home in the country, but said never a word concerning her intention to leave East Liverpool. She told her mother that her employer had promised to raise her salary, and that she would return to her work on Monday morning. From that time until the present moment not a word has been received from her either by her own folks or at the boarding house in this city. Mrs. Geomo came to town yesterday on a matter of business, and as has been her custom always, called at the home of Mrs. Cunningham to see her daughter. She was dumbfounded and nearly fainted when informed that the girl had not been there since leaving over a week ago to visit her parents in the country. The distracted mother went directly home and reported the affair to her husband, who lost no time in acquainting the police with the circumstances.

It was thought the girl might have gone to Alliance to visit relatives named Brandon, but on account of the carnival episode the mose feasible theory was that she had deserted her family and friends and joined the show. No one seems to know where the carnival company has been exhibiting during the present week, but it is thought if this can be found out no difficulty will be encountered in locating the missing girl. A message was sent to Alliance this afternoon and an answer is expected this evening.

The entire eGomo family are heartbroken over the unforutnate occurrence, an dare leaving nothing undone with the aid of the police which will shed light upon the girl's whereabouts. The circumstanes are particularly sad when it is known that an aged uncle to whom the girl was greatly attached, is lying at the point of death at the home of her parents, and is continually calling for her. The parents are hoping that the girl will be found at Alliance.

AN INJUNCTION SUIT OVER A STAIRWAY

May Interfre With the Construction of Columbiana's New Bank Building.

Lisbon, Aug. 15.—(Special)—Mrs. C. Deemer, of Columbiana, has filed a petition in court, asking a temporary injunction to restrain the First National bank of Columbiana from removing or interfereing with an outside stairway in the construction of a new brick block on which work has been started. Mrs. Meemer owns a frame building adjoining the bank company's premises, and the stairway is partly on the lot recently purchased by the bank.

The plaintiff says that about the year 1876 the owner of the lot now held by the banking company built a two story office building near the Deemer building, leaving just room enough for the stairway between the two structures, the stairway being constructed jointly by the owners of each building, the plaintiff furnishing two feet of the space, and the owner of the adjoining premises one foot and four inches. Mrs. Deemer says the stairway was used jointly from that time and that, relying on a continuance of the arrangement, she removed a stairway for the other side and erected a brick block in such a manner that the stairway cannot be replaced. She alleges that the proposed bank building will make the present stairway useless.

Joan C. Devine, of Alliance, has the contract for the new bank building, which, it is said, will cost nearly $30,000. Work on the foundation is under way.

JOHN STOVALL RELEASED FROM JAIL

Thought Mentally Sound Once More. His Derangement Due to Drink.

John Stovall, who has been an inmate of the city jail for several days, was released from custody today, and it is thought he has entirely recovered from his recent mental derangement. Stovall has been confined in a cell ever since last Tuesday afternoon when he was taken in charge by Officer Morris, who thought his actions peculiar. He was located on lower Fourth street, where he had started a little religious revival all by himself, and was in the midst of a fervent prayer.

For several days he was entirely unbalanced, and cut up many funny capers at the jail. He was not violent at any time, however, and Dr. Ogden pronounced his mental condition due entirely to the effects of strong drink. His nervous system had given completely out, and it required the strongest kind of medicine to restore him to anything like a normal state. Yesterday he had intervals of good sound reason He would be in the midst of a conversation, and all of a sudden would become as wild as an ape. This morning, however, his reason returned, and he was as bright as ever.

The authorities interested the township trustees in the unfortunate man's case several days ago, and it had been arranged to take him to the asylum this morning, but he was so much improved that the determination was reconsidered and he was given his liberty.

CITY RECORDER'S $12,000 SHORTAGE

Case of a Sistersville Official Accused of Embezzlement Is On Trial.

Sistersville, W. Va. August 15.—The case of J. H. Pine, former city recorder, who has been in jail for some time on a charge of embezzlement, came up at Middlebourne in the circuit court yesterday morning, but was continued on account of the jury not having been properly drawn. The judy adjourned as soon as possible after the plea of abatement had been passed upon and a new panel of jurors was drawn. This morning the case came up again for trial and the selection of the jury is being made. The case will now be tried and it is likely that some time will be consumed as all the civil business for the present term has been continued and only the misdemeanors will be tried. The case against Pine promises to be an interesting one. An expert accounting of his books showed that he was over $12,000 short in his accounts.

His method of extracting the money from the city collector was a unique one. He would have a number of small bills passed through council, and later take them to the city treasurer, raised several figures higher and have the check made out to himself, saying that he desired to send money orders to the people to whom the money was due. The name of one person appeared on the books so frequently that the city treasurer became suspicious and with the mayor made a superficial examination, sufficient to tell that Pine had worked a very slick scheme and had secured a large amount of money. He was then arrested and later an examination of his books made with the result mentioned. There are several charges against Pine and it is likely that he will be tried on all of them.

Chief of Police John Wyman and his force, who have been on the lookout for two members of the Jackson family since yesterday morning, have not succeeded in locating the men. It is said that one of the parties wanted got wind of the intention of the police and has departed for Sebring. It is thought the other one is in hiding some where about the city, and the police expect to capture him soon.

The Jacksons are suspected of being implicated in a number of depredations which have been committed in and about Chester within the past few weeks, and the farmers of that section are greatly exercised at the frequency with which the thefts are committed. Chickens, sheep and even calves have been stolen, and until recently no trace of the guilty parties could be obtained. Suspicion has at last pointed in the direction of the Jacksons, and an investigation will be made. Their actions are said to have been peculiar, and so noticeable has it become that the interested parties are sure to be prosecuted if they can be apprehended.

Councilman J. C. Cunningham, who is a heavy loser at the hands of the thieves, whoever they are, was at the mayor's office early yesterday morning, and enlisted Chief Wyman and Officer Dawson in the search. Mr. Cunningham and several other farmers residing in the neighborhood of Chester, have exhausted every effort to secure some clue upon which to work. They say the thefts are becoming more numerous and of greater importance every night and the state of affairs is becoming alarming. Mr. Cunningham lost several sheep, and it is likely he will prosecute the thieves without mercy if they can be found.

THE NOBLE RED MAN.

A careful study of the history of the early days of this region of country does away with several preconceived and very commonly accepted ideas. One of these is as to the primeval excellence of the Indian character. Once the red man of Cooper's novels was supposed to be the typical savage, but now we know much better than to believe that. If ever such Indians lived they were the exception rather than the rule. Another false notion, and one which obtains even to this day in many quarters, relates to the supposed superiority of the Indian to the white man in all matters pertaining to woodcraft and the outdoor life.

We have heard much about the untiring muscles and eagle-like eyes of the red-skinned scout. His hardihood, his bravery, his superhuman skill in following a trail, his bold defiance of the elements in winter or summer, his matchless worth as a hunter, and so on. To read what some have written one is led to think that in comparison the wisest and shrewdest white man was a booby and ignoramus. Nothing could be more misleading. In the first place, the much vaunted skill of the red man has always been largely overrated. He was of necessity a wise son of the forest, but never the supernatural being he has been said to be. In the second place, the white man has never as a rule shown himself in any sense inferior to the Indian in cunning of woodcraft.

The fact is that the white man, under similar conditions, has excelled the red man in his own chosen field. Give a typical frontiersman of other days the same chance for outdoor education which fell to the lot of the Indian and he never failed to outclass him. In endurance, skill and shrewdness he excelled every time. What was true in olden days is true now. The white man has spent many summers in the last 20 years and more in the regions where the red man still lives, and he knows full well, from much experience, that the white woodsmen are far the superiors of their red rivals. In every sense do they excel. The better stuff of which they are made makes them able to meet the lower race on its own ground and vanquish it. Study and observation have driven the halo of glory away from the Indian brow, and he is seen to be what he is—an inferior being. C. L. SMITH.

20TH YEAR. NO. 192. EAST LIVERPOOL, O., SATURDAY, AUGUST 15, 1903. TWO CENTS.

Appears to Have Flourished At An Alarming Rate For 25 Years—The Old Man, Who Was the Tool of Others, in Hiding and in Terror.

Columbus, August 15.—"Old Jack" Page, the man who in his eighteenth year made a confession which not only forms a chapter of the most interesting kind of criminal history running back for a quarter of a century, but which also resulted in the indictment or 25 more or less prominent citizens of Williams and Fulton counties, on charges of arson, dares not go back to the scene of many of his own and neighbors' crimes.

His life would be snuffed out almost as quickly as would that of Captain B. J. Ewen, should the witness in the feud cases of famous Breathitt county, Ky., appear upon the streets of his home city unguarded.

Page would encounter men not desperate by nature, but men now indifferent to the fate which has sent a dozen to state's prison and which will land others there before long.

Chief Deputy Fire State Marshal H. H. Hollenbeck, who, after the most painstaking and searching investigation, worked up the cases in Williams and Fulton counties, spent many days in close contact with Page, and though accustomed to man's criminal side, the fire marshal became much attached to the old fellow, and in accord with his promises to Page, when the confession was made, has been careful at all times to guard him from assassination.

Just now Page is on a farm near Chardon, where he is watched night and day. The precaution is not taken to prevent his escape but to protect his life.

Several of the men indicted as the result of Page's confession have threatened to kill him and one or two have boasted openly to the officials that they would shoot the old man if they had half a chance.

A report has been circulated that Page was kept on the farm of the fire marshal near Chardon. Deputy Hollenbeck would not deny this yesterday.

"I won't say on whose farm he is," was his only comment.

Property worth probably $150,000 destroyed in 25 years' time is the known record of the gang in the northwestern part of the state. Farmers, merchants and stockraisers, the best known men and church workers in the community, are included among those brought to trial by Deputy Hollenbeck, with the assistance of Deputy G. Fox, of Columbus, Walter Payne, of Toledo and H. R. Patchen, of Cleveland.

Though reduced to want, without clothing and food and refused aid by the men for whom he had made thousands of dollars, Page doubtless would have remained loyal until his death but for the persistent and skillful fire marshals.

He suffered long and much, yet his lips were sealed and the men who had fired not only their own homes and business houses, but the property of others, for the insurance money, for years worked with impunity and kept their heads as high as their fellow-citizens or neighboring farmers.

It is unlikely that the criminal annals of any state can show a parallel to conditions which have been unearthed in Ohio.

Page confessed to his own implication in over a score of fires in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. One of his fires was a $35,000 affair. Most of his fires were in West Unity and Alvordtown, Williams county. But Page was only a tool. H. B. Morrison, 54 years of age, the son of a banker at West Unity, a member of one of the oldest and most respected families in that section, was the ringleader. Morrison is now serving a ten-year sentence in the penitentiary here. For years he was a cattle buyer and farmer but after drinking heavily became a saloonkeeper. His wife and children are held in the highest esteem, just as Morrison, himself, was once.

Morrison was a contractor—that is, he contracted to fire buildings. For 30 years he was in this unique business. He often sub-let his contracts, the same as legitimate work is let out, and "Old Jack" Page usually secured the work, for he was hard up most of the time, and his prices were not high.

Page made thousands for Morrison, but when he went to Morrison less than a year ago and told him he had no money, hardly any place to live and agreed to eternal silence upon their crimes, Morrison coldly rejected the proposal and dared the old man to tell anything.

Though fifty-three indictments have been returned in Williams and Fulton counties, the end is not yet in sight, for through the confessions secured, other convictions are confidently expected, especially in Toledo.

Just a few days ago, Deputy Hollenbeck secured a confession from a Toledo man that he had hired an incendiary to burn his building many years ago. If this man is indicted, as he will unquestionably be, it will cause a sensation in Toledo, for the man is very well known, having held a public office.

DEMENTED WOMEN HAS LEFT HER HOME

Mrs. Henry Ehring, of Industry, Was Last Seen Walking Toward This City.

Mrs. Luella Ehring, wife of Henry Ehring, a well-to-do citizen of Industry, disappeared from her home Thursday morning while the family were engaged in eating breakfast, and has not been found. She is slightly demented and has on prior occasions disappeared in a similar manner. Neighbors saw her walking toward East Liverpool bareheaded. Recently she hid $100 and was unable to remember where she buried it. She had about $25 with her when she disappeared.

She is 42 years of age, dark complected, wears glasses and was last seen at Riverview. This is not the first time she has left home, but previous to this she has always been found with relatives. Her mind is worse affected at the present time, owing to the fact that she has hidden in the ground somewhere near her home twenty five-dollar gold pieces and has forgotten the place of hiding.

Anyone knowing of her whereabouts is requested to send word to Henry Ehring, Industry, or Attorney W. G. Mellon, Beaver.

SALINEVILLE

Salineville, August 14.—Rev. F. E. Dean, pastor of the U. P. church, accompanied by his wife, took the train Thursday morning for a visit to the home of his parents near Xenia. They will be absent about two weeks.

Mrs. William Dodds took the train Thursday for the campmeeting near Mt. Vernon.

An enjoyable time was had last Saturday afternoon at the home of aged Mrs. Isabella Dallas, on Cemetery hill, when a number of ladies of the missionary society of the U. P. church met with well filled baskets. The aged mother was delighted and all spent a pleasant afternoon at her beautiful home.

C. A. White and family have moved with their household goods to Lisbon, where Mr. White will take charge of the recorder's office in September. Salineville loses another good citizen.

The quarantine was lifted last Tuesday from the home of Nate Ware.

A traveling medicine man, tents and equippage, has been attracting large crowds.

Miss Aretta Haverfield, of Cadiz, after spending a few days in East Liverpool, with her friends, came here Saturday evening and was the guest of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Thompson, until Tuesday, when she took the train for Youngstown to visit Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Bunn, of that city.

The ball game Wednesday on the diamond between Youngstown and the local team resulted 13 to 3 in favor of Youngstown.

The funeral of Ralph Woodward, an aged pioneer citizen of this village, took place this week.

Mrs. R. T. Robins and children arrived here Thursday for a visit to her parents and other relatives.

MOULTRIE

Moultrie, August 15.—The roads are very dusty, and the farmers are in need of rain.

GUILTY OF MURDER

A Motion for a New Trial Has Been Heard—Charges Have Been Preferred Against a Juror for Attempting to Hang the Jury.

Cynthiana, Ky., Aug. 15.—Curtis Jett and Thomas White were found guilty of the murder of J. B. Marcum at Jackson, May 4, and sentenced for life. At their trial, held in Jackson, last month, one juror hung to the last on the question of guilt, and this time one juror hung the jury for 24 hours on the question of sentence. The first ballot was 11 to 1 for conviction of both defendants and the second was unanimous for both. The first ballot on the sentence was seven for death and five for life imprisonment. The seperate ballots on Jett's case stood 11 for hanging and one for life sentence, and this result was not changed in subsequent votes, Jasper King, a former deputy sheriff, voting alone until a compromise was reached for life sentence for both.

During the afternoon Judge Osborne heard the motion of the defense for a new trial. The grounds set forth consist of objections to evidence admitted for the commonwealth and rejected for the defense, and also to the ruling out of affidavits made by the defendants saying that a fair and impartial trial could not be had on account of the military display which inflamed the public mind.

Charges have been preferred against Juror Jasper King for attempting to hang the jury. King lives in this city, and was until two years ago a deputy sheriff of the county and a man who has been highly esteemed.

County Attorney Webster stated that he would bring the charges against King to the court's attention today.

No movements have been made as yet as to the retention of the soldiers, and Colonel Williams, the officer in command, said that the matter was in the hands of himself and Judge Osborne. The prisoners are still at the jail, guarded by soldiers.

BOARD OF VISITORS REPORTS

Satisfaction Is Expressed With the Conduct of the Academy Under Captain Brownson.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Recommendations of far-reaching importance to the future of the naval academy are contained in the annual report of the board of visitors of that institution which, by order of the acting secretary of the navy, was made public. The board recommends that candidates be admitted to Annapolis on certificates from certain schools approved by the academic board; that candidates be nominated a year in advance of the entrance examination; that graduation at the end of four years be final, relieving midshipmen of the necessity of returning for two years after graduation for further examination; that graduates be commissioned as soon as graduated; that the teaching force of the academy be increased in view of the recent great increase in numbers of midshipmen, and that a department of physical training be established, thereby placing this matter under the special supervision of a highly qualified expert.

The board regrets the expedient recently adopted of graduating the first class in February instead of in June, and recommends that the first class hereafter be permitted to carry its course to the normal conclusion.

Keen satisfaction is expressed by the board with the conduct of the academy under the superintendency of Captain Brownson. The suggestion is made that some continuity of existence be given the board of visitors.

Strikers Issue a Reply.

Cripple Creek, Col., Aug. 15.—The strike committee issued a reply to the mine owners' manifesto which declared their intention to reopen their mines and called upon the men to return to work. The reply says that the miners quit work for a principle and will not go back until ordered to do so by their officers. It adds: "Regarding the offers of protection of men who desire to return to work, no protection will be necessary, because the miners are law-abiding men and no trouble is anticipated."

Captain Pershing Reports.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Captain John H. Pershing, Fifteenth cavalry, who was in command for several years in the Moro country and made the last campaign against the chiefs, reported at the war department. He is a member of the general staff.

Public Land Withdrawn from Entry.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The commissioner of the general land office withdrew from entry 150,000 acres of public land in Northwestern Colorado, to be used in connection with the White River irrigation project.

Destructive Hail Storm.

Owensboro, Ky., Aug. 15.—A section of two miles square in Davis county was visited by a destructive hail storm. The damage to crops and property is estimated at over $50,000. Many acres of tobacco were ruined.

FEARFUL SCENES IN JAMAICA

Thousands Seek Shelter in the Buildings That Have Survived the Hurricane.

Kingston, Jamaica, Aug. 15.—There are heartrending scenes all over the eastern and northern portions of the island of Jamaica. At Port Antonio thousands of homeless and starving people have sought shelter in the old prison and the few other buildings which survived the hurricane. Those who could not be accommodated are cowering in the lee of ruined walls and dismantled piazzas. The railroad sheds and waiting rooms are filled with women and children. The merchants of the place are feeding the hungry to the best of their ability, but the majority are depending upon green, unripe bananas knocked down by the storm. The bananas are boiled in kerosene tins over open fires made from the debris of the destroyed buildings. This is their sole food supply and it will be exhausted in 9 or 10 days.

Similar conditions prevail at Annotta bay, Buff bay, Orange bay, Port Maria, Manchionwal, Morant bay, Bowden and other smaller seaports.

In the interior the distress is equally acute. Scarcely a peasant's home is standing. Even the dwellings of the planters, which are built of substantial stone, have been unroofed, with few exceptions.

The misery of the peasants' families is indescribable. Their homes and belongings have been literally blown away and they are contriving rude shelters from fallen trees, palm boughs and banana leaves. Owing to the continued unsettled weather with occasional torrential rains these shelters afford practically no protection.

It is now estimated that the loss on the island will reach $15,000,000.

Special Bulletin by Weather Bureau.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The following special bulletin was issued by the weather bureau: The tropical storm is still in the gulf of Mexico and apparently near the middle of western portion. Some slight indications of its presence have been afforded by sea swells that have been reported from Pensacola to Corpus Christi. No reports have been received from Yucatan, but the director of the Mexican Central observatory reports that the storm is apparently in the center of the gulf and moving toward the coast of Tamaulipas with diminishing intensity. Tamaulipas is the state directly south of the extreme southern portion of Texas. It is still considered dangerous for vessels to sail to or from west gulf ports, but safe on the east coast for vessels sailing eastward. Hurricane warnings have been ordered displayed on the Texas coast for dangerous winds southward and high winds on the coast.

May Visit Anthracite Region.

Wilkesbarre, Aug. 15.—Louis Hammerling, a well-known Republican politician and labor leader of this city, returned from Oyster Bay, where he saw President Roosevelt relative to having the latter attend the meeting of Republican clubs which will be held in this city next month. The president consented to see a committee representing the convention committee of arrangements at Oyster Bay on Wednesday next Aug. 19. It is said that President Roosevelt is greatly interested in the anthracite coal regions and is desirous of visiting this section of the state, and the committee feel confident that he will accept their invitation and make an address to the miners.

Counterfeiters' Den Raided.

Wheeling, Aug. 15.—Constable E. M. Hall and Prosecuting Attorney Rills raided a counterfeiters' den in Ritchie county, and while the counterfeiters were able to escape their moulds, ladles and metal pots fell into the hands of the officers. The mint was situated on a high, brushy ridge between Cornwallis and the Pleasant county line. The officers believe that they have broken in on a dangerous gang and are confident that the miscreants will shortly fall into their hands. They have been plying their nefarious trade for months and Ritchie county is full of the spurious coin.

Three Men Seriously Burned.

Pittsburg, Aug. 15.—Three men were seriously burned at the Edith furnace of the American Steel and Wire company, in Preble avenue, Allegheny, through the explosion of a "tap." They are: Patrick Hare, head furnaceman, of No. 3 Cross street, burned about the head, face and arms; Daniel McCarthy, helper, of No. 17 Furnace row, burned so severely about the head that he may be blinded; Michael Onick, helper, of Deer Lyn street, burned about the head and body.

Archbishop Falconio, apostolic delegate, will perform the ceremony. The sermon will be preached by the Right Rev. William H. O'Connell, bishop of Portland, Me., formerly rector of the American college at Rome. Distinguished clergymen from all parts of the United States have signified their intention to be present.

Boodler Sentenced.

St. Louis, Aug. 15.—Harry A. Faulkner, former member of the house of delegates, who was convicted of perjury in connection with the suburban boodle deal, was sentenced in the criminal court to three years in the penitentiary. GENERAL ST. CLAIR'S DEFEAT

Attacked by Indians and His Army Suffers Terrible Loss.

SOLDIERS RESISTED BRAVELY

NEVER RECOVERED FROM BLOW

On the wall of the writer's library, in company with a number of other valuable relics, hangs an old rusty bayonet which lay for many years embedded in the soil at the site of St. Clair's ever memorable defeat at what is now known at Fort Recovery, in Darke county, O. Its browned blade is never looked upon without a thought of that terrible battle coming vividly to mind.

In 1790 General Harmar had gone out against the western Indians, but had met with a sad repulse. Then President Washington determined to send against them such an army and such a man as should insure victory, for the Ohio frontier was crowding up with settlers and they must be freed from the terror of the scalping knife. He selected his intimate friend, Major General Arthur St. Clair, a commander whose bravery and skill none could gainsay. To him the president committed this important command, taking extra pains to point out to him Harmar's mistakes and repeatedly cautioning him against their repetition.

Under these instructions St. Clair set to work on his first task, that of organizing his army, always the most difficult and disheartening of a commander's duties. In April, 1791, the general had begun this work, his headquarters being at Pittsburg. Levies of men, regular troops and militia were being forwarded to that place from several quarters, and arms and supplies were being gathered as rapidly as the slow-going officers charged with that duty could effect it. But this was far too slow to allow of the plans for the campaign being promptly carried out. The quartermaster's work was so poorly done that the army, which should have moved westward from Fort Washington, on the site of Cincinnati, whither it had moved in May, by the beginning of August, was kept waiting for several weeks. It then marched six miles to Fort Ludlow and remained till Sept. 17. As it was then 2,300 strong, not counting the militia, march was made to the Great Miami, where Fort Hamilton was built.

Then they proceeded 44 miles further, built Fort Jefferson, remained there till Oct. 24, and set out on the hard march through the forest. The object was to erect a fort on the present site of Fort Wayne, Ind., and from that as a center overawe the western tribes. The forward movement from Fort Jefferson had not gone many days when 300 militiamen, finding the life not to their liking, deserted and took the back track. Somewhere along the road were the supply trains, and St. Clair, fearing the deserters would confiscate them, halted and sent back his best organization, the First infantry, to convoy the provisions and if possible bring back the deserters. It was decided to build a fort here while waiting the return of the expedition. Nov. 4 was the day set for the beginning of this work, but the plan was never carried out, and for a good reason.

Early in the morning of that day the men were just being dismissed from parade when the Indians attacked the advanced militia post. The men gave way and ran back in confusion on the regular camp, throwing the main body into such great confusion that they never recovered from it while the conflict lasted. The hostile Indians were met with a heavy fire, which partially checked their onset, but they returned it with such terrible vigor that the whites soon saw that the field was lost. Nevertheless a brave and determined resistance was kept against the repeated and increasing effective attacks of the enemy for three hours. During this time the slaughter of St. Clair's men was awful. Especially heavy was the fatality among the officers, who were compelled by the lack of discipline among the men to expose themselves to an unusual degree in trying to save the day. Charge after charge was made, with some temporary signs of success, but the foe returned like hornets each time to the fray, and no definite advantage was gained.

At last, after three hours had elapsed, the redskins got in on two sides of the army at once and completely outflanked its position. Then a retreat was ordered. Pursuit was made by the victors for about four miles. Then the shattered little remnant of the once brave array kept up its sad flight unharrassed. The camp and the artillery were abandoned, and in the flight the despondent and terrorized troopers filled the road with their accoutrements. The retreat began at half-past 9 in the morning and at dark that evening the army reached Fort Jefferson, 27 miles away. Here was found the First regiment on its way back to the front, not having found either the deserters or the supplies.

When the news of this great disaster reached the east the chagrin and humiliation of the people were painful. Searching for a scapegoat, they fell on General St. Clair like a pack of wolves. From one end of the country to the other there arose a deafening and discordant clamor of abuse and venomous criticism. Seldom has it ever fallen to so excellent a man to be so shamefully attacked. The gross injustice of it all, added to the rankling bitterness of defeat, was a blow from which General St. Clair never rallied. From this moment his life was a darkened and sad one. Through it all he retained the confidence and esteem of Washington. Congress appointed a special committee which thoroughly investigated the disaster and fully exonorated the general from any blame. From this the secretary of war appealed and a second investigation affirmed the verdict of the first. The blame was laid on those whose delays in furnishing the army with supplies retarded its movements, and on the fault of sending out a commander on so dangerous a tour of service with so poorly disciplined and provided a force.

General St. Clair's conduct throughout the battle was brave in the extreme. He was an ideal commander, instructing, encouraging and leading his men. In everything he was alert and at his post, even though he was wasted with a painful disease. So ill was he that when all his four horses had been killed, if a poor old pack horse had not been provided for him he could not have left the stricken field unless his men had carried him.

What he did was also shared in by officers and men, but the enemy had the advantage, and they were too strong to be overcome. So defeat came—a defeat over which it is said that President Washington swore most intemperately when the disastrous news came. Owing to the lack of provisions the army left Fort Jefferson and continued the retreat back to Fort Washington. There the reports were sent in and the campaign was definitely and sadly abandoned. A brass cannon was found buried on the battlefield in 1830 and many other relics have been picked up, among them the old bayonet on my library wall.

GRAVE UNDER THEATER.

Workmen Come Across Remains of a Pioneer.

Workmen at the Grand opera house removal on Diamond street, Pittsburg, have found the headstone and grave of a pioneer buried there in 1834.

At a depth of three feet under the surface the diggers encountered a flat stone three feet long and one foot wide lying in a horizontal position and when the accumulated clay of many years had been removed from its surface it was found to be the headstone of a grave bearing the following inscription:

In Memory of
MARY M'DOWELL,
Died May 28, 1834, aged 78 years.

Previous to 1840 the present site of the Grand opera house was occupied by the Second Presbyterian church and in the rear was the cemetery of the congregation. The disastrous conflagration that swept over that section in 1845 consumed the church edifice and many of the surrounding buildings. The congregation did not rebuild, and the property was sold to Marshall Bros. The bodies were claimed by relatives or were removed by the church to Cust's cemetery, on Center avenue, near Fulton street.

PERMANENTLY CURED BY
"ORRINE"

Physicians and scientists throughout the world have long since pronounced drunkenness a disease of the nervous system, creating a morbid craving for a stimulant. Systems vary as to the kind of drink that will satisfy this craving—some want whiskey, others beer, wine, kimmel, etc., the use of which will eventually result in ruining the health and bringing on disease, in many cases ending in death.

"ORRINE" permanently removes the craving for liquor, restores the organs of the stomach to their natural condition and improves the appetite and digestion. It contains no injurious drugs of any description. "ORRINE" can be given without the patient's knowledge, if desired, in tea, coffee, water or milk. It requires no office or sanitarium treatment, but can be taken at home. We will refund the money if it fails to do all that is claimed for it.

Mr. E. T. Sims, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "Use my name as a twenty-year drunkard restored to manhood and health by 4 boxes of 'ORRINE.' It is a wonderful and marvelous cure for the drink habit."

The price of "ORRINE" is $1 per box, 6 boxes for $5. Mailed in plain, sealed wrapper, by ORRINE Co., 817 14th St., N. W., Washington, D. C. Interesting booklet (sealed) free on request. Sold and recommended by

ALCOHOL IN ALL LIQUID KIDNEY AND RHEUMATIC REMEDIES CONDEMNS THEM.

An ignorantly compounded remedy, containing alcohol, as nearly all kidney remedies do, will stimulate them so violently that an inflammation will be set up, and instead of being merely lazy the kidneys will become diseased. Alcohol congests the kidneys with blood and retards their activity.

There is no Alcohol in Nervan Tablets to interfere with the removal of all harmful sediment from the body. The Tablets soothe and heal the kidneys when they are irritated and inflamed. They cure the kidney diseases that make you dizzy, restless, sleepless and irritable; that make you pass water often during the day and night; that cause rheumatism, catarrh of the bladder, pain in the back, joints and muscles; that make your head ache and indigestion, stomach and liver trouble, and a sallow, yellow complexion.

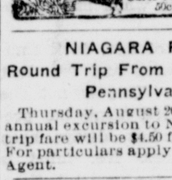

No matter how many other remedies you may have tried and found useless, remember the great modern remedy, Nervan Tablets.

Starting and Staying.

At the start in a long race, the advantage often appears to be with an outsider. But the race is won not in starting but in staying. The quality which wins is staying power. It is so in the race of life. Staying power wins and as a rule the best player is the man with the best stomach. All physical strength is derived from food which is properly digested and assimilated. When the food eaten is only partly digested and assimilated there is a loss of nutrition which means a loss of strength and the general result is physical break-down.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery gives strength and staying power, because it cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of the food eaten, and so strengthens the body naturally by the nutrition derived from food.

"I was troubled with indigestion for about two years," writes Wm. Bowker, Esq., of Juliaetta, Latah Co., Idaho. "I tried different doctors and remedies but to no avail, until I wrote to you and you told me what to do. I suffered with a pain in my stomach and left side and thought that it would kill me. Now I am glad to write this and let you know that I am all right. I can do my work now without pain and I don't have that tired feeling that I used to have. Five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets' cured me."

Accept no substitute for Golden Medical Discovery. There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are easy and pleasant to take. A most effective laxative.

EVERYBODY knows the remarkable medicinal value of cod liver oil, but few people can take the ordinary, nauseating kind.

Until Hagee's Cordial of Cod Liver Oil (with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda) was compounded, a really pleasant and palatable cod liver oil was unknown. The first taste of Hagee's Cordial will dispel all prejudice.

Especially valuable in hot weather—a time when its wonderful properties are so much needed to help nature replenish the extra consumption of vitality, caused by excessive heat. A fine tonic food for puny children. Contains no grease. Agrees with the weakest stomach.

By ANNE FITZHUGH MACLEAN

V.—The Predominance of the Love Motive.

IT is hard to speak of the methods of novelists without referring, at least by suggestion, on almost every point, to William Dean Howells, who has either said everything or contradicted everything. And so just is his mind in criticism and so admirable his achievement in novel writing that it is not possible to speak without deference of principles which have so well stood the test of practical application even when agreement with them seems impossible.

William Dean Howells.

certainly appears to the ordinary observer of life that it is Mr. Howells, and not the novelists he derides, who is mistaken. He has said many times in different ways what he long ago put into the mouth of one of his personages in "Silas Lapham," that "the whole business of love and lovemaking and marrying is painted by the novelists in monstrous disproportion to life," meaning, in effect, that love is one of many equal interests in a man's life or is itself a subordinate interest. I believe that we might leave fiction out of the question and consider only authentic biography and yet easily refute this doctrine. Whether or not love and marriage ought to be of unsurpassed importance in adult life up to this time, they have so proved. The extravagances of imaginary lovers have never exceeded the extravagances of real lovers and are just as extreme with the highest type of man as with the lowest. Indeed, it might be proved that, in spite of exceptional cases, the finer the intellect the deeper the affections and that men of destiny are those most vitally influenced by passion.

The tragedies of the heart—crime, suicide, the throwing away of a career—darken the course of history, not so much as they darken the course of fiction, but they do so as undeniably. Against the fact that their dramatic value has overemphasized them in literature we may set the fact that but a small proportion of such occurrences in real life reaches our knowledge. We may have a lifetime's acquaintance with a man without being able to gauge the effect of his love experience upon his fate or character.

So, too, the current of a happy love, a fitting mating, decides the channel of the life of many a one without the outsider perceiving that the current

William Makepeace Thackeray.

has been diverted from its course. Marriage alone cannot make, but it may aid in making and can most surely mar, a man's career.

With regard to women this is universally admitted, and it is true of the other sex frequently enough to justify novelists in making love the dominant note. Besides, what fundamentally affects all wives and mothers can be of hardly less fundamental importance to those whose lives are inextricably interwoven with theirs. Often in tradition has the world's history been changed by the charms of a woman. How much oftener than comes to common knowledge is a nation's ruler himself ruled by a wife or mistress? It is out reasonable that that upon which depends the perpetuation of the human race—the attraction of man for woman and woman for man—should be divinely created a force second to none in impelling power. Such a force once operating must alter the destiny of him whom it impels. He who lacks it lacks a vital element; he who resists or overcomes it by his will has by that very effort modified his character.

The novelist's further justification in this matter is the persistency of interest that the world shows in this most ancient of themes. In the face of the innumerable love stories already existing the writer who can tell a new one, if only fairly, has as eager an audience as if his were the first love story ever told. All the world loves a lover as much as ever, and there are no signs of diminution in this love.

Subjects for novels have multiplied exceedingly. We have the "novel of manners," depicting ordinary social life, with love only incidental, as it usually appears to us in the lives of others; the controversial, the socialistic, the humorous, the historical, where love is merely decorative; we have Wall street as a topic, industrial conditions and every phase of modern complex life. Of all these none has supplanted the pure romance in popular affection or weakened the power of the story of loyal love. A modern of the moderns, a man of affairs in the forefront of practical life, found he had touched a common and responsive chord in the apparent extravagance of these four little lines:

Not from the whole wide world I chose thee,
Sweetheart, light of the land and sea;
The whole wide world could not inclose thee,
For thou art the whole wide world to me.

The excellent things said by the masters of literature on the subject of love alone would indeed make a considerable library. Few are even the prose writers who have not touched upon it. Of the harm that has been wrought by low and immoral presentations of this most important subject and by false and morbid treatment, not less than by the intentionally licentious, no estimate could approach the truth. In this, as in all other ethical aspects of fiction, there must come an elevation in the public mind before any but the greatest masters can, lacking the seer's foresight, place love in its right relation to the other elements of character.

Already the love story has taken one long step in the recognition of wedded love as the ideal and highest type. No more does it break off abruptly at the altar, for of necessity no more is love after marriage regarded as less interesting and less dramatic than the frenzied ardor of immature youths and maidens.

Thackeray reached no higher point in his art than in one little scene between a pair—John Sedley and his wife—whose love had endured through a lifetime. The old man is in anguished fear of the effect upon his wife of the announcement that he has brought her in her age to poverty. "As he spoke he trembled in every limb and almost fell. He thought the news would have overpowered his wife—his wife, to whom he had never said a hard word. But it was he that was the most moved, sudden as the shock was to her.

"When he sank back into his seat, it was his wife that took the office of consoler. She took his trembling hand and kissed it and put it around her neck. She called him her John, her dear John, her old man, her kind old man. She poured out a hundred words of incoherent love and tenderness. Her faithful voice and simple caresses wrought this sad heart up to an inexpressible delight and anguish and cheered and solaced his overburdened soul."

One such wife in fiction means many such wives in real life, and can it be thought that John Sedley ever in his life made a more important decision than between marrying or not marrying that woman?

The love letters of Victor Hugo afford an interesting instance of how a man full of the consciousness of genius, burning to his finger tips with the vital force that was to spend itself in achievement, felt this and all else within him subordinated to his love.

"I am often told," he says, to quote one of many similar passages, "that I am to achieve a dazzling reputation. [I repeat this hyperbole in its exact words.] For my own part I care only for domestic happiness. I have no hope or desire to give to anything but you. * * * Love is the only feeling that cannot be exaggerated. * * * If to obtain you sooner all that was necessary was to abandon the projects and dreams of my whole life, I should undertake it joyfully, my Adele."

Whether or not he would have repented later had he been taken at his word might well be inquired into. The sacrifice was not demanded. Both the wife of his choice and the career of his appointed destiny were his. But no reader of his letters can doubt his sincerity in all that he professed.

Love predominates in fiction because it predominates in life. Evanescent passion, unrequited affection, the piteous, self blinded devotion that worships at a shrine whose idol inevitably falls to dust and ruin, immortal love—alas, too rare—in one form or another the master passion comes to all and to each, whether he recognizes it or not, and "life is never the same again."

DUN'S TRADE REVIEW

There Is Hesitation in Certain Branches of the Iron and Steel Industry, Incident to the Season and Labor Controversies.

New York, Aug. 15.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Earnings of railways for August thus far show an average gain of 7.7 per cent over last year's figures and 16.3 per cent compared with 1901. Distribution of merchandise is very heavy, more interruption to traffic being recorded, and in staple lines prices are steady. Preparations for fall trade are vigorous, many manufacturers working overtime to fill important orders. Collections are fully as prompt as usual for the season, although in some lines there is less inclination to discount bills. Crop news is reassuring. Foreign trade at this port for the last week showed a loss of $1,461,049 in exports as compared with the same week last year, and imports decreased $2,127,575.

Hesitation in certain branches of the iron and steel industry, incident to the season and aggravated by labor controversies, is indicated with some degree of definiteness by the monthly statistics just published by the Iron Age. A vast amount of business is being done, but there is no indication to anticipate requirements of the future beyond contracts already placed. The week has brought no developments in the price situation, but there is a steady gain in purchases of pig iron, although the meeting of the leading concern's committee to fail to decide upon placing new contracts was a disappointment to some prospective sellers.

Agricultural implements and machinery manufacturers have secured a further large tonnage of material. Merchant steel and pipe show improved demand, but in plates and structural material the waiting tendency is still dominant.

Failures this week numbered 174 in the United States, against 196 last year, and in Canada 22, compared with 21 a year ago.

Terrible Mine Disaster.

Rome, Aug. 15.—A horrible disaster has occurred in the sulphur mine near Caltanissetta, Sicily. Gas in the mine became ignited and obstructed the exit of a hundred miners. The mine boss directed all the employes to save themselves if they could, while he with five others bravely remained on the spot in order to try to extinguish the fire. Three of the miners have died and many others, although they succeeded in reaching the open air, are horribly burned and maimed. The mine boss and his five companions found an unused exit and escaped, but their condition is desperate.

GOVERNOR'S VETO.

Be it resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio:

SECTION 1. That a proposition shall be submitted to the electors of this state, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, A. D. 1903, to amend section 16, of article II, of the constitution of the state of Ohio, so that it shall read as follows:

ARTICLE II.

Sec. 16. Every bill shall be fully and distinctly read three different days, unless in case of urgency three-fourths of the house in which it shall be pending, shall dispense with the rule. No bill shall contain more than one subject, which shall be clearly expressed in its title, and no law shall be revived, or amended unless the new act contains the entire act revived, or the section or sections amended, and the section or sections so amended shall be repealed.

Every bill passed by both houses of the general assembly shall, before said bill can become law, be presented to the governor. If he approves he shall sign said bill and thereupon said bill shall be law. If he object he shall not sign and shall return said bill, together with his objections thereto in writing, to the house wherein said bill originated, which house shall enter at large upon its journal said objection and shall proceed to reconsider said bill. If, after said reconsideration, at least two-thirds of the members elect of that house vote to repass said bill it shall be sent, together with said objection, to the other house, which shall enter at large upon its journal said objection and shall proceed to reconsider said bill. If, after said reconsideration, at least two-thirds of the members elect of that house vote to pass said bill it shall be law, otherwise it shall not be law. The votes for the repassage of said bill shall in each house respectively be no less than those given on the original passage. If any bill passed by both houses of the general assembly and presented to the governor is not signed and is not returned to the house wherein it originated and within ten days after being so presented, exclusive of Sunday and the day said bill was presented, said bill shall be law as in like manner as if signed, unless final adjournment of the general assembly prevents such return, in which case shall be law, unless objected to by the governor and filed, together with his objection thereto in writing, by him in the office of the secretary of state within the prescribed ten days; and the secretary of state shall at once make public said fact and shall return said bill, together with said objection, upon the opening of the next following session of the general assembly, to the house wherein said bill originated, where it shall be treated in like manner as if returned within the prescribed ten days.

If any bill passed by both houses of the general assembly and presented to the governor contains two or more sections, or two or more items of appropriation of money, he may object to one or more of said sections or to one or more of said items of appropriation of money, and approve the other portion of said bill, in which case said approved portion may be signed and then shall be law; and such section or sections, item or items of appropriation of money objected to shall be returned within the time and in the manner prescribed for, and shall be separately reconsidered as in the case of, a whole bill; but if final adjournment of the general assembly prevents such return the governor shall file said section or sections, item or items of appropriation of money, together with his objection thereto in writing, with the secretary of state as in the case of a whole bill, and the secretary of state shall then make public said fact, but shall not further act as in the case of a whole bill."

SECTION 2. At such election those electors desiring to vote for such amendment shall have placed upon their ballots the words "Constitutional amendment—governor's veto—yes;" and those opposed to such amendment shall have placed upon their ballots the words, "Constitutional amendment—governor's veto—no."

The King Snake's Prowess.

The most relentless exterminator of reptiles is a member of the family itself—the beautiful, lithe, yellow and black king snake, the friend of man and the avowed enemy of anything that creeps or crawls regardless of size or poison fang. A native of our own south, the king snake is between five and eight feet long and no thicker around than a man's thumb. Built in every muscle and bone for speed and tremendous constricting power, there is not another snake on earth that can withstand his assault. He is immune to the poison of the cobra and of the rattler alike and the strength of a thirty foot python has no terrors for him. Within five minutes from the opening of the fight the king snake could kill the biggest python that ever lived. Ferocious as the little constrictor is toward his own kind, toward man he is friendly and rarely tries to escape when met afield.—A. W. Roker in McClure's.

Wounds of the Heart.

In wounds of the heart itself the escape of blood is never in large quantity, and the lethal consequences are due to the fact that the escape of blood from within its cavity or cavities into the surrounding sac of the pericardium mechanically interrupts the alternate contraction and expansion by which its pumping action is maintained. Accordingly the results of the wound of the heart are usually identical with those of gradual suffocation.—American Medicine.

JEFFRIES THE WINNER

The End Came Shortly After the Beginning of the Tenth Round, When Jeffries Planted One of His Terrific Swings on Corbett's Stomach.

Mechanics' Pavilion, San Francisco, Aug. 15.—James J. Jeffries, champion heavyweight of the world, played with Jim Corbett for nine rounds and a half and then Corbett's seconds motioned to Referee Graney to stop the fight in order to save their man from needless punishment. The end came shortly after the beginning of the tenth round, when Jeffries planted one of his terrific left swings on Corbett's stomach. The man who conquered John L. Sullican dropped to the floor in agony and the memorable scene at Carson City, when Bob Fitzsimmons landed his solar plexus blow was almost duplicated. This time, however, Corbett struggled to his feet and again faced his gigantic adversary. With hardly a moment's hesitation Jeffries swung his right and again landed on Corbett's stomach. Jim dropped to the floor, and then it was that Tommy Ryan, seeing that it was all over, motioned to Referee Graney to stop the punishment.

The fight demonstrated beyond all doubt that Jeffries stands alone in his class. He showed remarkable improvement in both speed and skill. Corbett, during the first part of the fight, was almost outpointed and the few blows he landed on Jeffries were apparently without sting. Jeffries was never in better condition. He looked lighter than usual and the way he moved about on his feet and the frequency with which he countered Corbett's leads astonished everybody. Corbett, in comparison with the big man opposed to him, looked very light but was really heavier than ever before. He seemed to have lost some of his old-time speed and skill during the early part of the fight, but this may have been due to Jeffries' marvelous improvement. Corbett's physical condition appeared to be all that he claimed for it. He stood many of Jeffries' terrific blows without wincing and came back swinging left and right and landing frequently, but his blows hardly stung Jeffries. Jeffries was not only stronger, faster and cleverer than ever before, but he used his head to better purpose, and although Corbett hit him hard enough to hurt an ordinary man, Jeffries bored right in without noticing the blows and delivered telling hits that materially helped in deciding the result of the fight.

At first Corbett was very cautious and apparently was outpointed by Jeffries, but later in the fight he warmed up and showed some of his old-time cleverness. From the first, however, it was generally regarded as a hopeless case for Corbett. He made a gallant fight, but he never stood a show to win.

After the fight was over Corbett quickly recovered, walked over to Jeffries and shook him warmly by the hand. He said:

Two General Orders Will Be Issued by General Young as Chief of Staff of the Army.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Two general orders will be issued by General Young as chief of staff of the army under the new law. The first states that in compliance with the instructions of the president, he, General Young, relinquishes command of the army and assumes the duties of chief of staff.

The second order announces the assignment of officers of the general staff as follows: Assistants to the chief of staff, Major General Henry C. Corbin, adjutant general; Brigadier General William H. Carter; Brigadier General Wallace F. Randolph, chief of artillery. The officers named will perform such duties as may be assigned them under the law by the chief of staff.

War college board: Brigadier General Tasker H. Bliss, president; Colonel Alexander Mackenzie, corps of engineers, general staff, and Major William D. Beach, Tenth cavalry, general staff, directors.

Colonel William P. Hall, assistant adjutant general, is designated acting adjutant general of the assembly.

Heretofore all army orders have been issued from the headquarters of the army adjutant general's office, by command of lieutenant general, but signed by the adjutant general. Hereafter orders will be issued direct from the war department, signed by the chief of staff and inscribed, "Official, W. P. Hall, acting adjutant general."

As assistant chief of staff General Corbin will perform much the same duties that have come under his direction hertofore.

Head-on Collision.

Wheeling, Aug. 15.—The accommodation passenger train from Pittsburg, on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, due here at 1:30 p. m., and a freight train met in a head-on collision near the Peninsular tunnel. The engine of the freight was almost completely demolished and the front of the passenger engine smashed in. Three freight cars were hurled over an embankment. Engineer Davis, of the freight, sustained a broken leg, while the two firemen had arms broken in the jump for safety. Several passengers were considerably shaken up and bruised, but were not otherwise injured. A serious wreck occurred on the Ohio River division of the Baltimore and Ohio at Glendale, when a freight train and an engine met in a rear-end collision, caused by a confusion of orders. Two cars and a caboose were demolished. No one was injured.

Body Identified.

New York, Aug. 15.—Simon Kuhn and William H. McGuire, members of the Royal Arcanum, of Allegheny City, Pa., called at the morgue and identified the body of the man found in the Hudson river Wednesday morning as that of Adolph J. Gerl, the missing treasurer of the Royal Arcanum lodge in Allegheny City. Gerl's body was found in the river with a knotted handkerchief tightly bound about the neck. There were two deep abrasions over the eyes and a wound in the back of the head, which was at first thought to be a bullet wound.

Shot His Wife.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 15.—Frank J. Conway, a prominent young man of Cumberland, went to Westernport, and, meeting his wife, Gertrude Conway, in front of the Lutheran church with another man, shot her through the heart, death being instantaneous.

World's Record Broken.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Dick Welles broke the world's record for a mile on a circular track at Harlem, going the distance in 1:37 in a match race against Grand Opera.

Three Curious Epitaphs.

In a cemetery near Dublin the following words appear on a tombstone:

The following epitaph adorns the tomb of a gravedigger in the Taibach cemetery in the south of Wales:

"Hurrah, comrades, parson is dead! If he had lived he would have buried all of us."

Here is another curious epitaph which was recently discovered; it marks the grave of an indefatigable smoker and contains only the following four words:

"My pipe is out."

Some were at death's door when put on the compounds, but many such recovered. That many were in extremis may be learned from this. Some recovered who had been tapped dozens of times; others were already in the twitchings of uraemic poisoning; many had from four to six physicians confirm the fatal diagnosis; several left standard hospitals in extremis; several had relatives called in for last interviews, and a few recovered who were in a state of absolute coma.

In a word about 87% of all cases of Bright's Disease and Diabetes, heretofore positively incurable, are now curable under the new Fulton Compounds. The Renal Compound for Bright's and Kidney Disease is $1; for Diabetes, $1.50. Pamphlet free. We have just established a depot in your city where you will find the Compounds and pamphlets, viz:

THE OLD-TIME STAGE COACH

Its Coming in Colonial Days an Event of Much Moment.

GENERALLY GREETED BY CROWD

In the old colonial days the chief event of the day at the wayside inn or country village tavern was the arrival of the coach. This lumbering but vastly important vehicle was the shuttle in the loom of colonial life, which by its ceaseless going to and fro wove the many different threads into a harmonious whole. It usually was pulled by four or six horses, and there were some difficult roads, or some extra vain coachman, who plied the lines over the backs of four pairs of finely matched steeds. In the country tavern a crowd always gathered as the time drew near for the coach to arrive. As time was the most plentiful and least costly article these old colonists had, they generally got to the tavern early. The time was easily spent in such gossip as is usually the rule in the rural assembly place. After a while some urchin or overwatchful lounger, who had kept his eye on the long brown ribbon of road running in from the forest on the hill yonder, would with great importance cry out:

Then a cloud of dust would be seen, a rumbling sound heard and the occasional blare of a horn. At length the dust clouds would give up the outlines of galloping steeds, a charioteer using his whip with pistol-like snaps, a trumpeter blowing like the warder of an ancient castle, a heavy, clumsy coach with passengers and baggage. On this great vehicle would roll till, with a skill of which he was justly proud, the driver would bring it to a stop just where mine host could with many words and bows welcome his prospective customers. The driver would throw down the lines and leisurely descend, too great a personage by far to give any attention to the care of the teams or the changing of them. His was as high a place in the scale as is that of the captain of a modern ocean greyhound.

The coach always brought the letters and the papers. These were few, but relatively of so much the greater importance. Immediately a group of eager idlers would surround one who had the latest paper in the tavern taproom, and that paper would furnish the occasion for many a wise and solemn, and sometimes boisterous, discussion over topics of grave public import. Meanwhile mine host was doing everything in his power to make his guests feel at home. He was always striving to build up the reputation of his hostelry. In those days quality counted much. If from the coach descended those whom the quick eye of the landlord discerned as being of the "quality," his face always beamed the brighter and his bow was the more profound. There were then in America distinctions which in this industrial domestic age go for nothing at all. To the ladies and gentlemen the finest the tavern could afford was always offered.

While all this was going on the axles had been greased, the horses watered, or perhaps a new set of animals had been provided, the mails had been changed, the transient guests had been fed and had finished their cups of toddy. When all was in readiness that grand mogul of all, the driver, came out calmly and with conscious dignity, the center of all observing, took his place on the box. Then away, amid cheers and dust, passed the coach, and the village settled down again to its wonted quiet and neighborhood gossip. The great event of the day was over. And gone now forever are those days. C. L. SMITH.

TOMAHAWK RIGHTS.

In different ages and countries the laws relating to the acquiring and holding of land vary to an astonishing degree. In the same country the customs change very much, according to the exigencies of the generation. The purchaser of a tract of land in this region today who cares to trace back to the beginning the title by which he is to hold the property will often run across some very curious facts. The original settlers got possession of their lands in a variety of ways, more or less able to stand close scrutiny.

But those first years were times of rough and unusual methods of living, and often the law which prevailed was the law of possession and the might requisite to hold on undisturbed.

Many of the most valuable lands today were originally taken by what was known as "tomahawk rights." An immigrant, finding a piece of good land on which he would like to settle, would find the best spring of water on his intended tract. He would blaze the trees around this spring and then on various notable trees over the whole tract he would cut his initials. This did not definitely mark out his intended farm, but it gave him possession, a right which was rarely violated except by murder or some equally heinous method, a rare occurrence. New settlers coming to the spring would see the blazing and after drinking would pass on. Once improved, the title was perfect, and stands today. C. L. SMITH.

NO SENTIMENT FOR JOHNSON

The Cleveland Mayor Won't Get Much Comfort Down in Montgomery.

THE FRIENDS OF ZIMMERMAN

Fear That an Attempt Will Be Made to Steal the Convention.

DEMOCRATS MUCH WORRIED

Columbus, Aug. 15.—(Special)—Former Representative Chapman, of Montgomery county, and who is now the candidate of the party for state senator in the Montgomery-Preble district, was in the city last evening. In speaking of the situation in his county, he said:

"We are having no exciting times in Montgomery county politics now that we did in former days, when the Dowling and anti-Dowlingites engaged in their annual contest for supremacy in that county. Dowling won year after year in those contests, and it was not until after Tom Johnson began to show his hand in the politics of the state that a decision was given against Dowling, which, temporarily, at least, has put him out of the business.

"So far as I have been able to discover, there is no sentiment among the Democrats down our way for Johnson for governor. Geographically their sympathies ought to be with Zimmerman, and, I believe are, but, of course, no one can tell what a Democratic convention will do. The unexpected happens oftener than the expected."

Much interest centers in the outcome of the Montgomery county convention in so far as it concerns Johnson and Zimmerman, as to which will secure the assurance of its support in the state convention.

Zimmerman's friends are suspicious that Johnson's tactics of putting up contesting delegations in counties of sufficient importance, where he is unable to control the situation, means that he will attempt to "steal" the convention outright when it meets it this city a week from next Wednesday.

ZIMMERMAN'S FRIENDS ARE VERY ANXIOUS

The Springfield Man Credited With a Scheme to Put Johnson In the Hole.

Columbus, Aug. 15.—The announcement that Tom L. Johnson is boosting the candidacy of John W. Bookwalter for the United States senate, and that all the power of his machine in Ohio will be exerted to that end, has caused the friends of John L. Zimmerman to look for some plan to block the Johnson game.

The one scheme that is receiving the most attention is for the backers of Zimmerman to assist in the endorsement of John J. Lentz for the senate. On first blush this would seem to be an impossible thing, but when it is understood that the Zimmerman people in Franklin county at least have consented that Lentz shall head the delegation to the state convention, the arrangement is not so improbable.

Such an arrangement, if agreed to, would put Mr. Johnson in the hole. He could not go back on Lentz who has been one of his closest political friends.

CHEAPER NATURAL GAS FOR THE OHIO VALLEY

A Virginia Company Proposes to Compete With Companies Now Supplying Fuel.

Wheeling, August 15.—The announcement that the Virginia Oil & Gas company, with backing to the extent of a million or more, will apply to the Ohio county commissioners and city councils for franchises to give Wheeling and surrounding towns on each side of the river competitive natural gas and at rates lower than those charged by the Wheeling and West Virginia companies has been received with great pleasure, both by domestic and manufacturing consumers.

The company has developed a great natural gas territory almost at the doors of the city in Marshall county and across the line in Pennsylvania, and should by all means be given the franchises which it is asking. Competition in gas would bring immeasurable results to the people, especially to manufacturers. In some quarters it is declared that the natural gas company of West Virginia has an exclusive franchise in the domestic field, but the Virginia people declare the conditions of the grant have been repeatedly broken, and that it will not hold water for a minute if tested in the courts. If they get the franchise they are willing and anxious to make the legal test.

INFIRMARY INMATE WHO HAS PROPERTY

Lisbon, Agust 15.—(Special)—John Duncan, of Wellsville, an insane inmate of the county infirmary, has been represented to be the owner of property in Wellsville and the infirmary directors are now investigating with the intention of applying to his support any income that may arise from the property.

Duncan was received at the infirmary last spring from the Massillon asylum. About 10 years ago he was sent to an asylum at Columbus, whence he was transferred to Massillon.

THE RETURNS COMING IN

The Different Propositions On Points Affecting Potters' Wage Scale.

FINAL MEETINGS OF LOCALS

The result of the referendum vote of the National Brotherhood upon the proposed settlement of the wage scale will be known at headquarters either Monday night or Tuesday. Already returns from a large majority of the locals are in the hands of President Duffy and Secretary Menge. The locals in this city have been meeting during the week and only the printers and the kiln drawers have not voted. These locals will meet tonight for that purpose. Last night the kilnmen and the packers held meetings and meeting of the kilnmen lasttemfwypp the result of the balloting was handed in at headquarters this morning. The meeting of the kilnmen lasted until a late hour and was largely attended.

Nearly every mail brings to headquarters an official document containing the vote of out-of-town locals. It is expected that all of them will be heard from by Monday night.

The propositions upon which the locals have been voting were submitted as a result of the conferences between the Brotherhood and manufacturers' committees and are as follows:

1. Pressers working day wage shall receive $3 per day.

2. Nine (9) hours shall constitute a day for all day wage earners excepting engineers, engineers' helpers, kiln firemen, watchmen, odd men and such others as from necessity must put in longer hours.

3. Lunch time shall be abolished for all day workers.

4. No apprentice printer shall be put on the press as long as a competent journeyman can be secured.

5. Ware dressers, ware brushers, drawing girls and dipping girls shall receive 10 per cent increase in wages when such increase does not bring the total wage above one ($1.00) dollar and no extra is to be paid on account of location of factory.

6. Kilndrawers shall receive twenty-five (25c) cents per hour, with a maximum of seven (7) hours for any kiln (which does not change present conditions materially); boss drawer to receive twenty-five (25c) cents extra per kiln.

7. All plain edge plates to be increased one-quarter cent per dozen.

8. All plain edge saucers, fruits and ice creams to be increased one-eighth cent per dozen.

9. All plain edge hotel plates, roll edge, double thick and half thick, shall be increased one-half cent per dozen.

10. That 205 feet shall constitute a day's work on bisque kiln, 200 feet having been asked for.

These reductions have been asked for by the manufacturers to offset the above concessions: Oat meals to be reduced one-half cent per dozen; coupe soups, to be reduced one-half cent per dozen; 5, 6, 7 and 8 inch nappies (outside), one cent per dozen; combinets making only, 5 cents per dozen; C. C. roll edge basins, 5 cents per dozen.

The present conditions under the uniform price list are as follows: Day wage of pressers, per day, $2.75; day wage workers' day, 10 hours per day; lunch time for day wage workers, from 9:30 to 9:45 a. m.; apprentice printers ratio in each shop.

Ware dressers, $1.00 per day; ware brushers, drawing girls and dipping girls, 87½ cents per day.

Kilndrawers, $1.50 per kiln; boss drawer, $1.75 per kiln; takes five to seven hours to draw kiln; plain edge plates, 3 inch, 3 cents; 4 inch, 3 cents; 5 inch, 3½ cents; 6 inch, 4 cents; 7 inch, 4½ cents; and 8 inch, 5¼ cents per dozen. Plain edge saucers, fruits and ice creams, 2¾ cents per dozen. 212 cubic feet constitute one day in bisque kiln.

Following are the prices of goods on which reduction was offered: Oat meals, 5 cents per dozen; coupe soups, 6 cents per dozen; 5, 6, 7 and 8 inch (outside) nappies, 10 cents per dozen; combinets, 50 cents per dozen; figured cups, turned, 3½ cents per dozen; basins, 35 cents per dozen.

Should the propositions be rejected it is likely that the two committees will get together again and prepare a new basis of settlement.

President Duffy will leave the city tomorrow for Trenton to participate in the sanitary conference, which is to begin Monday. The members of these committees are given elsewhere in this issue. President Duffy will be one of the conferees.

Both Arms and Leg Broken, Besides Other Injuries

An unfortunate accident that may cost the life of a young boy occurred at Rock Springs park at a late hour this afternoon. Willie Hunter, one of the excursionists at the park today from the delegation of Pittsburg bridge workers, fell from a car on the roller coaster and sustained the facture of both arms and the right leg, and it is feared, is internally injured. At the hour of going to press the physicians had not determined the exact extent of his hurts. They are, however, of a very dangerous character.

Young Hunter fell from the car while it was at one of the very highest points. It is stated that he very imprudently tried to make the trip standing and was thrown out as the car swept around a curve. The awful accident was witnessed by a large number of horror-stricken spectators.

GIRL MISSING FROM HERE A WEEK

Well Known Young Lady Thought to Have Gone With the Carnival Company.

The aid of the police was invoked today in an effort to ascertain the whereabouts of a 17-year-old girl who, it is thought, eloped with an attache of the carnival company which recently exhibited in this city. The circumstances surrounding the girl's strange disappearance are so mysterious that her own relatives have been completely baffled in their efforts to locate the missing girl.

Mabel Geomo, whose parents reside in Hancock county, about seven miles south of Chester, came to this city nearly a year ago, and securing employment in one of the potteries, learned the decorating trade. She was a good worker, and was known among her associates as a well behaved and very sensible young lady, and intelligent beyond her years. The father, John Geomo, is a well-to-do farmer and though the father of seven children of whom Mabel is the oldest, he was amply able to care for them all. The daughter, however, was of an independent turn and determined to make her own way.

She secured board with Mrs. Rowena Cunningham, at 255 Third street, and at the time of her disappearance was employed at the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles pottery.

When the carnival visited the city a few weeks ago, the girl became fascinated with the life of a wandering showman, and was soon upon intimate

New Jersey's Governor and Factory Inspector Will Apply Law Rigidly.

A TECHNICALITY IS FOUND

By Which the Glass Manufacturers Expect to Escape Its Provisions.

TRENTON POTTERY TOPICS

From a Staff Correspondent.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 15.—Governor Murphy has marked with the stamp of disapproval the efforts of the South Jersey manufacturers to disregard the child labor law which becomes operative September 1. He has assured the factory inspecting department that he will provide every means for protection and has instructed Attorney General McCarter to proceed against any of the violators of the new law. Governor Murphy in conversation with a News Review reporter yesterday said:

"I shall insist upon its rigid enforcement and if the case is taken into the courts I will direct the attorney general to defend it. The complaint of the glass men that they cannot make their business pay without child labor seems incredible, but if it is true, it will not change the enforcement of this necessary law. The wrong of such employment is too grievous to be palliated upon any consideration."

The glass interests of South Jersey have banded together and this week sent out circulars to the manufacturers throughout the state asking for their assistance in defeating the law. Copies of the circular were received by the manufacturing potters of this city and the matter has been the subject for much discussion at the meetings of the locals of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters. The manufacturers are prepared to defeat the enforcement of the law upon a technicality. They claim that the law does not state the September of what year it shall become operative and propose to bring the matter to the attention of the supreme court. Chief Factory Inspector John T. Ward has instructed all his employes as follows:

"You are to see positively that there are no violations of the child labor laws of New Jersey, no equivocations on terms of speech. You will be held strictly to account for any failure to detect anything at variance with this law which is reported to this department."

The new law makes the willful employment of children in workshops below the age of fourteen a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $200 or the imprisonment of the offending manufacturer for one year in state prison.

In accordance with the instructions sent out last week from the headquarters of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters at East Liverpool, the Trenton locals this week voted on the propositions submitted by the Western Manufacturers' Association for the government of the general ware trade.

C. Sidney Smith who is widely known here in potting circles, left this week for Sebring, O., where he has accepted a position as foreman in the decorating department of the plant of the Sebring Pottery company. Mr. Smith was connected with the decorating department of the Trenton Potteries company for seven years and previous to his employment there he was with the Maddock Pottery company. He was superintendent of the Walnut avenue Presbyterian Sunday school and was actively engaged in Y. M. C. A. work. Abraham Hays and W. F. Ellison have gone out with the Cook Pottery company's line of dinners, toilets and specialties. Hays is penetrating the New England market and Ellison is expounding the merits of the goods in the west. Both have several new lines this season. There is an unusualy large variety of jardineres in which department of production the local concern has been pressing forward with astounding rapidity in recent years.

PROMINENT MILL MAN COMMITTED SUICIDE

William Everson, Who Had Relatives in Wellsville, Took His Life in Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, August 15.—William Everson, prominent for many years in the iron and steel industry in Pittsburg and at various times superintendent of several of the largest plants in the city, committed suicide yesterday afternoon at Thirty-fifth street and the Allegheny Valley railroad. He left no word as to the cause of his action, but it is supposed he took his life in a fit of despondency over his inability to obtain a position at Clarke's mill, within a stone's throw of the place where he drank the contents of a bottle of carbolic acid.

He was 59 years old and has been identified with the steel and iron works of the city for most of his life. He was formerly superintendent of the Ft. Pitt works and afterward manager of the Keystone mill.

Mr. Everson is survived by two brothers and two sisters: Richard Everson, of Wellsville, O., formerly manager of the Wellsville Iron and Steel company, and Walter Everson; Miss Lillian Everson and Mrs. A. S. Livengood, of Everson, Pa. He left two sons and two daughters, Ralph Everson, employed at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company works; Reese Everson, a clerk; Mrs Mildred Maxwell and Mrs. Stella Westerfield, of Kelly street, East End.

Chris McTaggart Now in the Hospital Being Treated for His Injuries.

No new features have developed as the outcome of the attack made by William Bridge on Chris McTaggart a few days ago. The men were brought into court after the fight, but McTaggart was in such a pitiable condition that the proceedings were stayed pending his recovery. He was placed in Dr. Taylor's hospital, where he is now undergoing treatment for his injuries. It is likely McTaggart will make some sort of a charge against Bridge as soon as he is able to be about, as he denies the accusation made by the latter, and says he was treated in a most brutal manner.

The way the men explained the occurrence at the mayor's office the evening of the fight, the impression was given out that the trouble occurred at the saloon of John Robinson, on Second street. This was an error, and Mr. Bridge states he has not been in Robinson's place in 14 years.

No adjustment has been made of the new wage scale of local union No. 169, International Union of Steam Engineers, and the officials of the local having exhausted every effort toward its adoption, will submit the matter to trades council at the next regular meeting Wednesday night. It is hoped in this way to effect a settlement without further delay.

Just what steps will be taken by the council is to be determined at the meeting. Several plans have been proposed but it is likely that a committee will be appointed to confer with the Western Manufacturers' association, which has been holding out against granting the advance provided for in the scale submitted.

TAKEN ILL ON THE STEEET

Thomas Cooke, a Hookstown Farmer Seized With Heart Disease In This City.

Thomas Cooke, a prosperous and well-known farmer, residing near Hookstown, was last evening overtaken with a serious attack of neuralgia of heart, while in the vicinity of the power house.

Cooke was seen staggering along the railroad tracks and was about ready to fall when reached by assistance and was taken into the brick works nearby where for two hours he could not be moved owing to his precarious condition. Dr. G. P. Ikirt was summoned, and after relieving the sufferer, had him removed in the ambulance to the home of friends in Chester where today he is much improved.

THE SIDEWALKS IN BAD SHAPE

Public Service Board Determines to Have Them Inspected and Improved.

JETHRO BRIDGE REPAIRS

The condition of some of East Liverpool's pavements has been the subject of a great deal of unfavorable comment within the past two years. The city council has been criticised and censured for neglecting so important a matter, and the men in charge of the street department have been condemned in no uncertain terms. When the service board took charge of the public works it was one of the first questions taken up by that body. For several weeks past plans have been discussed to be followed in the execution of the work, and at the meeting of the board held last night the first move was made. It was determined to take up the work at once, and it will be pushed to completion just as fast as the city's facilities will permit.

Engineer Kelly and City Commissioner Frank Dickey will begin at once a systematic inspection and upon their report will depend the extent of the work. The task will be a difficult one, since there is scarcely a street in the city upon which repairs of some kind are not needed. The men have been instructed to have the report ready by Monday evening at which time the board of public service will hold another meeting.

The action of the board will be commended by a large number of property owners, and was the result of continued effort on the part of Commissioner Dickey. This official reported to the board last night that the condition of some of the streets was very bad, and unless they were given attention soon the city would surely become involved in damage suits. The pavements on Fourth street were reported as being particularly bad. It will be the purpose of the commissioner and engineer to make their inspection in a thorough manner, and when they have finished none of the sidewalks needing attention will have been overlooked. It is hoped the work of repairing can be completed before the rough weather sets in.

The condition of the Jethro bridge was reported on by Mr. Dickey. He said that several planks were loose and the danger to people who daily use the structure was great. The matter was discussed at some length and it was finally decided to refer the matter to the county commissioners who were thought to be responsible. The bridge was built by the East Liverpool railway corporation and the county commissioners, each contributing a certain amount to the expense of constructing the trestle. The board was not certain that the city would be exempt from damage in case an accident resulted from the bad condition of the structure, and concluded, in order to make sure, that it would be the proper course to refer the matter to the county commissioners. It may be that the railway company is responsible for the repairs, and if it is, the commissioners, with whom the deal for its construction was originally made, are thought to be the proper parties to call it to the attention of the management. Clerk J. W. Gipner will notify the commissioners at once that the bridge is in a dangerous condition and in need of immediate attention. The Jethro bridge was built several years after the East Liverpool railway line was constructed, and was only substituted for the old wooden structure after the latter was considered dangerous. An arrangement was made whereby the county commissioners were to share the expense of construction, and though the bridge was well built and the very best materials were used, but little attention has been given to its care since that time. All of the farmers from the northwestern part of the county come into the city from the campground road and use this bridge, and in addition to that the heavy traffic from Wellsville by road is all done from thatdirection. It is considered no wonder that the bridge is in need of repairs at this time, and it will be the

WITH THE WORKMEN IN THE CLAY PLANTS

THE SANITARY CONFERENCE.

Arrangements are being made for the holding of the Sanitary conference in the east, says this week's Potters' Herald. The manufacturers held a meeting on the fourth inst. and it is decided to leave the arrangements of the date of meeting to the two committees. This leaves no doubt but what an early date will be set for the considering of the propositions asked by the operatives.

The committees will be composed as follows: That of the manufacturers will be John A. Campbell, general manager of the Trenton Potteries company, and John Maddock, of the Maddock company, John Moore, and the selection of one of the following three: A. Maddock, Fred Conradt or D. K. Willet.

The National Brotherhood of Operative Potters will be represented by First Vice President F. H. Hutchins, Sixth Vice President Joseph T. Cotton, Eighth Vice President George Dix, William Wooten, Thomas Walklett, David Moore, William Harney and Edward Taylor. There is also a possible chance of National President Duffy also being present, as no doubt but what the western conference will have been closed by the time of the Sanitary meeting.

The questions that will come before the two committees are of a very reasonable nature and will in all probability be granted without any serious difficulty. Among them are the following:

The establishing of a regualtion governing the rights of the presser to pay the carrier-out. This arose over some of the firms, instead of allowing the men to pay the carrier-out, deducting it from their pay and paying the carrier, thereby making it so the men would not have any control over him, and it is to abolish this and permit the men to pay and control their own carriers-out, that the adopting of the above regulation is asked for.

Another thing that will be of great benefit to the operatives, both in being just and a help in the day's wages, is the abolishing of the charging of the workman to pay for ware broken by kilnhands, or in the green room. Also the neglect of anyone who may handle the ware. Heretofore the workmen have been responsible for ware broken in this way, a feature that will appeal to all as being a great hindrance to the workman making the average day.

A uniform list for the making of sanitary saggers will also be up for action. Heretofore there has been no uniform list in general use for the making of saggers for sanitary use. Also a uniform list for sanitary jiggering; uniform list for placing sanitary kilns. There will also be a strenuous effort put forth to adopt a rule which will govern the working of an apprentice kilnman in the sanitary trade, the same to be similar to the rule governing ... class in the placing of the general ware kilns. The establishing of a uniform list to govern the wages of a sanitary presser when working day wage. Also the establishing of a price for local seat, hub, and trap vents, and a uniform price to be paid for the packing of sanitary ware.

The meeting of the two committees is to be expected within the course of a few days, when the exact date of the conference will be known.

CARROLLTON NOTES.

EAGLES' FLIGHT WELL BEGUN

New Aerie Starts With a Charter Roll of 100 Members.

INITIATION CEREMONIES

Impressively Conducted and the Officers Installed by the State President—An Elaborate Banquet Follows the Ceremonies.

East Liverpool is a great secret order town. If this fact had not impressed itself upon the average citizen before they will be convinced after last night's demonstration upon the occasion of the institution of the new aerie of the fraternal order of Eagles. The charter list is made up of over 100 young men, and the new lodge starts off under the most favorable circumstances.

Col. C. H. Voute, state president of the organization, had charge of the ceremonies, and he was assisted in the ritualistic work by the Steubenville degree team. The latter arrived in the city on the evening train, two extra coaches having been added to the regular train. They were met at the passenger station by a large delegation of the prospective brothers, and headed by Manley's band, marched to Turner hall, where the aerie was to be instituted.

The charter list was a large one, and the officers went to work at once with a determination to finish the task by midnight. After the balloting had been finished the entire membership received the obligation, and then the men in charge were ready for the enjoyable portion of the program. The Steubenville brethren had made all arrangements to exemplify the secret work and though a young aerie itself went through the work in a manner which indicated careful study and a perfect conception of the ritual. The following officers were elected:

Worthy President—Henry Bullock.

Worthy Vice President—John C. Walsh.

Worthy Chaplain—Criss McConnell.

Worthy Secretary—D. A. Devine.

Worthy Treasurer—Thomas O'Brien.

Worthy Conductor—George Parry.

Worthy Inside Guard—Samuel Whittenberger.

Worthy Outside Guard—Pat I. Quinn.

Trustes—Alex Stevenson, Dick Bell, Clifford Dawson.

Physician—O. P. Andrews.

Upon the completion of the initiatory ceremonies the assemblage adjourned to the banquet hall, where a sumptuous repast had been prepared. This was one of the most enjoyable features of the entire evening. Toasts were responded to by a large number of out-of-town brothers, and speeches were made by members of the East Liverpool aerie. The banquet was enjoyed by nearly 200 people, and all voted it the most successful ever attended.

The East Liverpool aerie begins its career with flattering prospects, and will begin at once on the formation of a degree team. There are a large number of persons whose names are on the charter list who were not present for initiation last night, and it will be the duty of the members to initiate them. The ritualistic work is fine, and the initiation most impressive. It will be the aim of the new lodge to perfect the work promptly and in a thorough manner.

Bank Failure.

Duluth, Minn., Aug. 15.—The alleged embezzlement of $45,000 of the funds of the Commercial Banking company, for which E. E. Johnson, the trusted clerk of the bank, is under arrest, has brought about the failure of the Merchants' bank of Duluth. President Smith said that the failure was due to a run on the bank, resulting from the closing of the Commercial Banking company's institution. He said that he could not anticipate the extent of the withdrawals and closed to protect all depositors as much as possible. This is the fourth bank suspending business as a result of the alleged embezzlement.

The "United Tailors."

New York, Aug. 15.—The latest thing in trade combinations is to be known as the "United Tailors." Charles M. Schwab's millions are said to be behind the scheme, which, it is understood, will be launched in this city in one week. Five branch stores have already been leased in various parts of Manhattan and the projectors say that within 30 days their stores will be in operation in large cities all over the country.

Heroic Measures.

"I'm after a servant girl," said Hausekeep; "one with a good, big appetite preferred."

"That's rather an unusual request," began the employment agent.

"Well, I've got to put a stop to this business of having things warmed over the next day."—Philadelphia Press.

The Lamp of a Man's Life.

Dr. Holmes said the lamp of a man's life has three wicks—brain, blood and breath—and to turn down any one of them makes the other two go out. The wounds a man will survive and even disregard so long as his head, heart and lungs are unhurt have long been one of the wonders of war history.

The Russian Bride.

A Russian bride has a very much more trying time on her wedding day than has her American sister, for she must fast until after the ceremony is over and that after enduring the trials of a "farewell party" the day before. As the wedding, to be fashionable, must not take place till the evening, it is easy to imagine in what an exhausted state the bride often enters on her new life. Besides bridesmaids there are also bridesmen, who have to provide the bridesmaids with sweetmeats. The number of bridesmaids is unlimited, and they are not dressed alike. Following the bridal procession is carried a picture in gold and silver of Christ, which is stationed against the altar. The bride's old nurse is intrusted with the removal of the bride's dowry from her father's house to that of her future husband.

A Million For Advice.

Sometimes repressing a client pays a lawyer well. There is a persistent story, which probably will never be printed as to names and details, that a famous trust magnate paid a lawyer a million dollars in cash for simply saying to him: "Don't fight. If you insist on fighting I will take your case. But if you fight remember all your books will be opened and all your methods disclosed." The bewildering munificence of that instant fee of a million was a record for wise philanthropy which showed the genius of the philanthropist. Never was a fee better earned if the tale is true.—Everybody's Magazine.

FREEDRICKTOWN WON

The East End Grays Defeated By Just One Run in Yesterday's Game.

The East End Grays went up against the real thing yesterday afternoon at Columbian park when they tackled the Fredericktown boys. The game of ball was played in excellent manner throughout and had Bolton and Herbert, the Grays' battery, been given better assistance, they would have won the game. It resulted Fredericktown 13, Grays 12.

The Grays are scheduled to play a game on the same grounds with the Eclipse today.

A REMARKABLE WELL

It Produces Both Water and Gas and Both Are Utilized.

The flow of gas which U. E. Price struck some time ago in his back yard on Pennsylvania avenue still keeps up and Mr. Price has just finished piping the gas through his house for light and fuel. The gas keeps up its early test of 4½ pounds pressure, which is more than enough to supply the building Mr. Price lives in. The well, which had been drilled for water, now supplies both water and gas, the gas having been cased off so as not to affect the taste or smell of the water.

Neville Institute Repairs.

Those in charge of the Neville Institute have determined to make extensive and much needed repairs at the school building within the next few weeks. Contractors have been over the work, and figures are now in the hands of the trustees. It is the intention to begin the work next week.

Lost

Could Not Eat, Sleep or Walk.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure Cured Entirely.

"If it hadn't been for Dr. Miles' Remedies I would not be here to write this letter. Two years ago last June I lost the use of my left arm, could not use it and could only move it with the help of my right hand. My heart was so weak I could not sleep nights for smothering spells. I was out of sorts all over and could eat nothing. I grew so weak that I could not walk without staggering like a drunken man and my home doctor said he could do nothing for me. I was in so much pain I was almost wild. I could not take morphine nor opium as they made me worse. So I got to thinking about Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine and the more I thought about it the more I wanted to try them. I wrote to the Dr. Miles Medical Co. for advice which I followed to the letter. I can say today that I am glad I did as I am a well woman now; can work and can walk two or three miles and not mind it. I can also use my arm again as well as ever. You do not know how thankful I am for those grand medicines Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and Nervine. I think Dr. Miles' Remedies are the best in the world, and if I should get sick again I should take the same course. The remedies also helped my daughter Vida so wonderfully that I should have written you before to thank you, but I wanted to be sure that the cure was permanent, which I now know to be the case."—Mrs. Frank Loomis, Allen, Mich.

Mammoth Concern Formed in Cleveland to Control Eastern Ohio Cities.

Cleveland, Aug. 15.—Calvary Morris of this city, is at the head of a new $10,000,000 combine, formed for the purpose of acquiring the title to mineral lands in Ohio.

A telegram from Wheeling says the men interested in the venture have perfected plans and that articles of incorporation will be filed shortly.

At the office of Morris it was said that he was in the east and that until his return next Monday it would be impossible to give details of the combine. It was said by other coal men that he was there for the purpose of financing the corporation.

Options have already been secured on the coal fields of Harrison, Jefferson and Belmont counties and agents are reaching out for more territory. The purchase a few days ago of the property of the Postill Coal Co., at Hoosac, O., for $500,000 by the Morris syndicate was the first step in the big deal. Until that time the matter had not been given publicity. It is said that there is great wealth behind the combine and that it will develop into the biggest concern of the kind in Ohio.

C. L. Poston, who recently sold his Hocking Valley coal lands to J. P. Morgan's syndicate for $3,000,000, is interested with Morris in the promotion of the new corporation.

DISGUISED CATARRH

A Stealthy, Insidious, Weakening Enemy to Women---Many Thousand Women Suffer Needlessly From This Cause.

There are a multitude of women, especially housewives, and all other women obliged to be on their feet constantly, who are wretched beyond description, simply because their strength and vitality is sapped away by catarrhal discharges from the pelvic organs. These women get up in the morning tired, drag themselves through their daily duties tired, only to go to bed at night as tired as before.

Mrs. Eva Bartho, 133 East 12th Street, N. Y. City, N. Y., writes:—"I suffered for three years with what is generally known as leucorrhea, in connection with ulceration of the womb. The doctors advocated an operation which I dreaded very much, and strongly objected to go under it. Reading of the value of Peruna, I thought it best to give this well-known remedy a trial, so I bought three bottles of it at once. Now I am a changed woman. Peruna cured me; it took nine bottles, but I felt so much improved I kept taking it, as I dreaded an operation so much. I am to-day in perfect health, and have not felt so well for fifteen years."—Mrs. Eva Bartho.

Miss Louise Mahon, 3 Glen Baillie Street, Toronto, Ont. Can., Secretary of the King's Daughters and Secretary of Lady Maccabees, writes:—"If all women knew of the benefits to be derived from taking Peruna we would have many happier and more healthful women. My health has never been too robust, and I am easily fatigued and can not stand much. About a year ago I was so run down that I had to take to my bed, and became weaker and weaker. A friend advised me to try Peruna, and I have great reason to be grateful, for in two weeks I was out of bed and in a month I was perfectly well, and I now find that my health is much more robust than formerly, so that I take Peruna once or twice a month and keep well."—Louise Mahon

Peruna is such a perfect specific for each case that when patients have once used it they can never be induced to quit it until they are permantly cured. It begins to relieve the disagreeable symptoms at once. The backache ceases, the trembling knees are strengthened, the appetite restored, the digestion made perfect, the dull headache is stopped and the weakening drains are gradually cured. These results certainly follow a course of treatment with Peruna.

Barbara Alberty, corner Seventh and Walnut streets, Appleton, Wis., writes as follows in regard to Peruna:

"For years I have suffered with backache and severe pains in the side. I doctored so much that I became discouraged. A school friend told me how very much Peruna had benefited her and I sent out for a bottle, which did more to relieve me than all the other medicine I have ever taken. I used it faithfully for two weeks and it completely cured me. I have not had any pains since, anywhere, but feel like a new woman. I am truly thankful for what Peruna has done for me."—Barbara Alberty.

Mrs. Kate Mann, 306 Bathurst Street, Toronto, Ont. Can., Vice President of the Ladies Aid Society, writes:—"I am pleased to give praise to Peruna for the blessed relief I found through its use. I suffered for years with backache and dragging down pains and often had to go to bed and stay there when I was so busy that I could illy be spared. It was therefore a simple godsend to me when Peruna was brought to my notice. Every drop seemed to give me new life, and every dose made me feel much better, and I promised myself that if I found that it cured me I would advocate it so that other suffering women should know of it. I have been in perfect health for one year, I enjoy work and pleasure because in such fine health, and no trouble seems too heavy to bear when you are in good health. Peruna has simply been a household blessing, and I never will be without it again."—Mrs. Kate Mann.

Mrs. Anna Martin, 47 Hoyt St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:—"Peruna did so much for me that I feel it my duty to recommend it to others who may be similarly afflicted. About a year ago my health was completely broken down, had backache, dizziness and irregularities, and life seemed dark indeed. We had used Peruna in our home as a tonic, and for colds and catarrh, and I decided to try it for my trouble. In less than three months I became regular, my pains had entirely disappeared, and I am now perfectly well."—Mrs. Anna Martin.

Mrs. Wm. Hetrick, Kennard, Washington county, Neb., writes:

"I am fifty-six years old and have not felt well since the Change of Life began ten years age. I was in misery somewhere most of the time. My back was very weak, and my flesh so tender it hurt me to lean against the back of a chair. I had pain under my shoulder-blades, in the small of my back and hips. I sometimes wished myself out of this world. Had hot and cold spells, dizziness and trembling of the limbs, and was losing flesh all the time. After following your directions and taking Peruna I now feel like a different person."—Mrs. Wm. Hetrick.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Peruna can be purchased for $1 per bottle at all first class drug stores.

The board of public service, in devoting attention to neglected sidewalks, is undertaking a very necessary and important work. The inspection about to be undertaken should be thorough and immediate steps should be taken to repair the numerous walks which will be found in a dangerous and dilapidated condition. Bad sidewalks, besides being an eyesore and a disgrace to a city of the size of East Liverpool, are unprofitable and undesirable in other ways. They are quite likely to result in damage suits and prove far more expensive in the long run than good walks. Unfortunately this city is no stranger to this sort of litigation. A little labor and effort will put the sidewalks in good condition at a cost which is small in comparison with that entailed by damage suits and damage verdicts. The old theory regarding an ounce of prevention is particularly applicable to this matter. East Liverpool has a great number of well paved streets, and much to the satisfaction of the public, they are now being kept reasonably clean. The sidewalks should be kept in a correspondingly good condition. The public service board will do the public genuine good service by keeping at the work it has initiated until the sidewalks of the city are in all respects what a city's sidewalks ought to be.

A scarcity of school teachers is reported in several Ohio and West Virginia counties. Such a condition would not exist if living wages were paid, but nothing else can be expected as long as men can make more money at digging ditches than the instructors of many a rural school receive. Cheap wages will never secure the sort of talent that ought to be employed in the school room. If there is any servant of the people who earns and ought to receive good pay it is the country school teacher who tries to do his duty. Such a teacher works harder than many a man who draws a salary twenty times as large and thinks he earns it.

Cheap automobiles will soon be with us if Thomas A. Edison's latest invention is what he claims for it. Mr. Edison says he has invented a storage battery for autos which can be charged at a cost of thirty cents, which will take the machine a hundred miles. Mr. Edison also states that his experiments at this time are being directed to a reduction of cost in the production of his battery, but that his invention has been tested in running automobiles for five hundred miles, and has proven very satisfactory

The universal verdict is that, in the conviction of Jett and White, justice for once has triumphed in Kentucky. When all assassins in the Blue Grass State come to be treated as murderers should be, that old commonwealth will prosper and grow strong. Kentucky is a great state and would quickly become much greater but for her reputation for lawlessness.

Mobs are cowardly. One Indiapapolis policeman with a revolver prevented a lynching by holding the crowd at bay until help arrived. Courageous officers who will do their duty are often successful in like emergencies. Even a crowd thirsting for the blood of a victim will pause before defying the law as personified by an officer with a weapon which he is not afraid to use

It is nonsense to talk of war with Canada because the crew of an American fishing boat got into a dispute with the crew of a Canadian government vessel. All the same, steps ought to be taken to prevent the recurrence of such unpleasant episodes before they become more serious.

The latest about C. M. Schwab is that he is backing a taliors' trust. Probably the first thing he will do is to establish a "no trust" rule.

Corbett was not as badly damaged as the Ohio Democracy will be next November.

THE HERMIT'S REVENGE.

General Braddock Slain in Retaliation for Abuse of Brother.

When the writer was a youth he spent much time, especially during his vacation periods, in Fayette county, Pennsylvania. There he often took short trips into the mountains known as Chestnut Ridge and Laurel Hill, where were enacted so many famous scenes during the days of the colonial wars. In these trips he was told many times of a noted hermit, Thomas Faucett by name, who lived in a secluded cabin among the mountains. The tales which came to the ears of the awestruck lad were so gaily decorated that they wore the aspect of the legends of a dim and misty past, but were all readily accepted with youthful credulity. Mature years have robbed them of their Arabian Nights' splendor, but I must confess that I got much more pleasure out of mountain legends than I now get out of the truth.

Thomas Faucett was reputed to be a mountain hermit of gigantic size and fierce demeanor. He had been a soldier in General Braddock's army in 1755, and had helped to cut the fatal path across the mountains which came to such a sudden and tragic end on that terrible July day by the Monongahela fords. During the march, or during the earlier part of the battle, General Braddock had in some way affronted this rude man. One of the tales says that he had punished Faucett's brother for some offense. This was not unlikely, for Braddock was a severe disciplinarian. Another story is that during the battle the general drove Faucett's brother out from behind a tree, beating him with his sword.

Anyhow, in some such fashion as this, it is not important just how, he had incurred the wrath of the gigantic trooper, who determined on a revenge of which all his life he boasted, but which was cowardly. When the fight was about lost, Faucett, according to his lifelong claim, procured a silver button, and ramming it down into his musket, shot the already wounded and broken-hearted general. This course he followed because of the superstition then prevalent among ignorant soldiers that a general officer could be killed only with a silver bullet. Such is the tale which lived for generations among the Fayette county mountains. Once in a while one may hear it there even now in some far removed mountain cabin, and there are some who religiously believe it just as it had been handed down.

It has been often investigated. Many years ago, while the old hermit was still living, there were serious doubts in the minds of thoughtful men as to the truth of the story. So eminent a historian as the Hon. Winthrop Sargent half a century ago investigated Faucett's claim and pronounced it entirely incredible. This is the general opinion of historical students. There was never one bit of contemporary evidence, even hint, to support Faucett's claim, and his story was always somewhat confused and misleading. But the adherents of the Faucett cult were ever zealous believers of the tale that made their rough hero the assassin of the unfortunate Braddock. C. L. SMITH purpose of the board of public service to see that the work is done without delay.

The much-discussed question of a sewer on Bradshaw avenue, was up for an inning at the meeting of the board last night, and it is likely something will be done for the relief of the residents of that vicinity before the bad weather comes. It will be remembered that the property owners along Bradshaw avenue were before council at its last meeting with a request that the work be started. It was found at that time that there had been no appropriation for the purpose, and the council could not legally begin the work. It was that the lot owners advance the money necessary to go ahead with the contract and the city would pledge itself to pay its share when the money was forthcoming. The service board rather favored the plan, and it is likely will give instructions for its execution within a short time. No action was taken at the meeting last night.

John Logan, who was assessed for the improvement of Ravine street objected to the amount, saying he had not been given value received. In fact, no improvements whatever were in evidence, and he objected strenuously to paying for something he did not get.

Engineer John A. George was in office at the time the work was supposed to have been performed, and Mr. Kelly, the present engineer was instructed to confer with Mr. George with a view of straightening the matter out.

Cheap Cigars Sold for Good Ones.

The arrest of Henry Silberstone, a cigar dealer at No. 283 Bowery, New York, charged with having refilled cigar boxes, marked the beginning of a war that will be waged against dealers who have been engaged in similar practices. Siberstone is alleged to have bought several boxes of "Cremo" cigars, and after selling the genuine article at the regular price (five cents) refilled the boxes with a cheaper article, which he sold at eight for 25 cents, explaining to his customers that the only difference in the cigars was in the matter of the bands. Substitution of cigars or refilling of boxes has been going on for some time. The bands were placed upon the goods to protect customers. The federal authorities expect more arrests. There are federal and state penalties.

A MISSION OF VENGEANCE.

Captain Jack Devotes Balance of His Days to Extermination of Redskins.

One of the most famous characters of colonial times in Pennsylvania was Captain Jack, the scout. Much is known of his history and about him has gathered a nebulous cloud of mystery which makes enchanting reading, even if we cannot accept it all as gospel truth. The home of this noted ranger was in the Juniata valley, and he was known variously as the Black Hunter, the Wild Hunter of the Juniata, the Black Rifle, La Carabine Noir, or Captain Jack. His early life has always been shrouded in impenetrable darkness. Even in his own days the stories of his origin and of his presence on the frontier as an Indian fighter was mere conjecture. The commonly received tradition, which has passed current among the mountains of Pennsylvania for a century and a half is that Jack was a prosperous settler who took out his family to the frontier to make a home amid the newer and wilder scenes there prevailing. One evening he came back from a day's hunting to find his cabin in ruins and the charred bones of his wife and children smoldering in the ashes. Bitterness filled his heart, and over those loved relics of his dear ones he swore to devote his whole life to the taking of a bloody revenge on the red devils who had so cruelly treated him. According to all stories of his subsequent career the grief-stricken frontiersman carried out his vow in full measure and to the very letter.

He became the relentless foe of the Indians and never lost an opportunity to exact dire vengeance for the evil done him that fatal day. It was his custom to lie in wait along the trails most frequented by the Indian maraunding parties, and the vicious crack of his long, black rifle was the only warning of the leaden messenger in its searching flight to brain or heart.

Captain Jack was one of those unerring riflemen whose deeds made the story of the days of American settlement so heroic a narrative. His vow of vengeance was to prove in after years the salvation of many a settler's home which would otherwise have been doomed to destruction, for Jack was always ranging the mountain trails in search of his foes, and many a party of Indians, sneaking stealthily on an unsuspecting foe, was discovered by him and his ranger companions and slain. Settlers frequently found the decomposing bodies of Jack's victims lying where his fatal bullet had tumbled them in the deep forest. And the traveler generally knew who had been that way on his mission of revenge. Jack became a well-known character in the life of the time, his name appearing frequently in the public records of Pennsylvania as a man who rendered great public service to the endangered frontier. His last days are shrouded in the same mystery as his early life. Some say that he went west as the tide of immigration drove both game and Indians on ahead.

In the Juniata valley it is currently said that he lived to old age and at his death was buried near a large spring by the foot of Jack's mountain. If he lies there, there is no definite knowledge of the fact at this day, though this is likely the case. It is said that Captain Jack was the portotype of Cooper's Natty Bumppo.

C. L. SMITH.

The First Rumor of the Ohio.

The Ohio river occupies today so important a place in the geography and commerce of this country that it is very difficult to realize that there was ever a time in which its existence was not known to the white man. It is now the stream on whose broad and swelling bosom float southward the millions of bushels of coal from Pittsburg on which the southern markets rely for their fuel supply. It is also the subject of constant discussion, and the several plans for making it a regular water highway, independent of freshets and rises, occupy a large share in the public attention. Yet there was a time when to the settlers along the Atlantic coast there was not known any such mighty and majestic river. Its great watershed was only the hunting ground of savages and its valley was the home of myriads of wild game, both large and small. In those days the banks of the Ohio were the tramping grounds for countless herds of buffaloes. It was along about the latter part of the seventeenth century that the first rumors of which we have any definite record of this noble stream in the wilderness began to filter through to the French Canadian settlers. In 1669 the Sieur de La Salle sold all his landed property and set out westward from the head of the St. Lawrence on an extensive exploring expedition in what was then the great western wilderness. First he visited the Senecas for guides. Then he skirted the southern shore of Lake Ontario to Irondequoit bay to a Jesuit mission. There he found an interpreter who told with enthusiasm of a great prairie land to the southwest—a fair and fertile region—where flowed a great river in such a direction that it must reach the Vermilion sea or the gulf of Mexico. The stream thus vaguely hinted at was none other than the now world-famous Ohio, then as yet undiscovered and unknown. La Salle proceeded on his long and remarkable journey and came back in safety from this first search for new marvels. It is said that in 1670, the summer following his talk with the interpreter at the mission, he discovered the Ohio and traveled some distance on its waters, but this claim is something like a Scotch verdict, not proven. NEW ICE PLANT

The Manufactory of Judge P. M. Smith Expected to Be Completed in November.

Work on the new P. M. Smith artificial ice plant, which is being erected along the new C. & P. belt line switch in the vicinity of Second street and Broadway, has not been progressing as rapidly as heretofore during the past few days. It was at first stated that the plant would be completed about the middle of September, but it is now feared that the contractors will not finish their work before the first of November, when it will at once be put in operation.

This plant is to have a capacity of 40 tons of ice per day. The building of the plant is to be 150x125 feet. It is to be two stories in height. The west and south ends of the building are to be of brick and the balance framework.

The two large 150-horse-power boilers which were received a week or so ago have been placed on their foundation. This work was completed by Contractor W. M. Wooster. The foundation has not been completed for the large tank which was also recently received, but it is now being laid and will be completed within a few days. Work on the building proper has not yet been started.

This factory will no doubt be one of the best paying institutions of the city. It has the best of backing and is a concern which has been much needed here for several years.

HEALTH BOARD MET

And Discussed the Abatement of Nuisances—Suspicious Flour to Be Analyzed.

An adjourned meeting of the board of health was held last evening in the private office of Mayor Fogo, president of the board. Only a short session was held which lasted about 45 minutes. Mayor Fogo presided. Others present were G. P. Ashley, John F. McQueen, E. C. Taylor and Health Officer Tarr.

The matter of cesspools was the first taken up by the board. They talked over the different cases which were heard at a previous meeting, particularly that of the one located on Thirteenth street on property owned by Ross Noble and McLean Bros. This case was to have been decided by City Engineer Leita, who was to examine the property and report as to whether the property owners or the city were at fault. It was reported at this meeting that the city engineers had not yet made an examination of the property, and the matter was deferred until the next meeting.

Daniel McIntosh, a farmer residing near Irondale, appeared at the board meeting and presented a sample of flour which he had purchased here and which tended to raise bread quickly and said the substance was a menace to health. Different members of the board examined the flour, but were unable to discover any foreign substance. They finally decided to have the flour sent to the secretary of the state board of health and have the same analyzed. The board adjourned to meet in regular session Tuesday evening, Aug. 25.

REMEDY FOR HAY FEVER

After Trying Other Treatments Hyomei Was Used With Perfect Success.

Prior to the discovery of Hyomei, the only advice a physician could give to a hay fever patient was to go away from home but now any one who expects the disease, can, if Hyomei is used, stay at home without fear of the annual attack of sneezing, watery eyes, and other discomfort.

J. F. Forbes, a well known western railroad man, whose home is at McCook, Neb., writes: "I have never had relief from any other remedy for hay fever, even temporarily, until I discovered the merits of Hyomei. I will always reccommend it whenever occasion requires."

There is no offensive stomach dosing when Hyomei is used. It is a reliable remedy for the cure of all diseases of the respiratory organs and is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, so that the air taken into the throat and lungs is like that of the White Mountains or other health resorts where hay fever is unknown.

Will Reed, who has the local agency for Hyomei, advises all who are subject to hay fever to begin its use two or three weeks before the time of the annual appearance of this disease and thus prevent the attack. If, however, Hyomei is not used until the sneezing and other disagreeable symptoms have shown themselves, it is necessary to use the treatment more frequently, at least half a dozen times daily, and Hyomei Balm should be rubbed into the nostrils both morning and night.

The fact that Will Reed agrees to refund the money to any hay fever sufferer who uses Hyomei without success, should inspire confidence in its power to effect a cure.

Ready to Begin Work.

Reduction of Railroad Men.

The order is effective beginning this week, and the only known reason for the reduction is a curtailment of expenses."

A STRONG BILL

Numerous Attractions of Merit at Rock Springs Theatre the Coming Week.

The bill at the Rock Springs theatre the coming week is one of the strongest of the season, and the artists will doubtless be welcomed by large crowds throughout the engagement. Manager Franklin has made an especial effort to secure a good bill for this week and he has succeeded.

A novel feature of the bill will be given by Rose Traynon and her intelligent troupe of birds. The pack contains 50 birds, and the feats performed by them is nothing short of wonderful.

Levina & Gray as the tramp juggler and the soubrette, have been engaged for the week, and their act is one of the best on the vaudeville stage. Their audiences have been delighted everywhere, and they will surely be appreciated in East Liverpool.

A paper tearing turn will be given by Kitty Gray, one of the cleverest women who ever faced an audience here. The act is a catchy piece of work, and is entirely new to a majority of the theatre goers.

"On the Golf Links" is the subject of a very funny sketch created and played by Warren and Howard. This team is noted for the novelty of its acts, and the industry of the members. They are sure to please.

The bill will be concluded by a Kinctograph exhibition which has won the admiration and applause of audiences all over the country, and will be among the most pleasing features of the evening's vaudevine performance.

LED THE PLOTTERS.

Colonel Maschin and His Part In Servia's Tragedy.

One odd phase of the recent Servian tragedy is the fact that the leader of the assassins of King Alexander and Queen Draga was a brother-in-law of the ill fated queen, whose insatiable ambition finally led her on to her doom. The name of this chief conspirator against the Obrenovitch dynasty is Alexander Maschin, who became the implacable enemy of Queen Draga when she was still plain Draga Maschin, wife of his brother. As soon as Draga, after years of scheming, captured the affections of the young king and became his queen in defiance of public sentiment in Servia, she speedily brought about the downfall of her old enemy. Colonel Maschin lost all his appointments, was looked upon with suspicion and disfavor by King Alexander and was in disgrace despite the fact that he still held rank in the Servian army.

Queen Draga was a good hater and a dangerous enemy, but she seems to have more than met her match in the person of Maschin. In revenge for the slights that had been put upon him he seems to have used all his influence to inflame his brother officers against the royal couple, who were none too popular already, and when the conspiracy against them was organized he was its chief. On the night of June 10 he gave his final instructions to the plotters at a tavern named the Servian Crown and then led them to the palace, where, it is said, he even took a personal part in the butchery of the king and queen. When the couple concealed themselves it was Colonel Maschin who searched for them with such persistence that they were finally discovered and dispatched in the secret room to which they had fled.

Colonel Maschin is a veteran of both the Servian army and diplomatic corps. He served with distinction in the army, was military attache at Vienna and also served as Servian minister at an unimportant post. He is now minister of public works under King Peter Karageorgevitch and was a conspicuous figure at the welcome accorded the new king when he reached Belgrade recently.

Living, Yet Dead.

In a German law journal may be found a curious account of a woman who, though actually living, is legally dead. Some years ago she disappeared from her home, and after three years had elapsed the court formally pronounced her dead and turned over her property to her next of kin. Soon afterward she returned to her native place, and as there was no question as to her identity she naturally thought that she would have no difficulty in recovering her property. The court, however, flatly refused to comply with her request.

"You have been declared dead," it virtually said, "and it is impossible for us to regard you as living."

Thereupon the woman appealed to a higher court, but her labor was in vain, for the verdict of the lower court was upheld, and, moreover, an official notice was issued to the effect that the plaintiff, having formally been declared dead, could not now be restored to life, as the law understands that word, and must remain dead until doomsday.

Bullets and Botany.

A correspondent tells the London News that being at Palling, in Norfolk, he asked permission of a local marsh owner to walk over his meadows. "What for?" he wanted to know. "Oh, to do a little botanizing," was the reply. There was a pause while the landowner scratched his head. Then, slowly and suspiciously, "Not with a gun?"

John Wesley's Shrewish Wife.

One of his biographers declares that if he had searched the whole kingdom the evangelist John Wesley would hardly have found a woman more unsuitable than she whom he married. She did not even confine herself to her tongue in her attacks. More than once she laid violent hands on him. "Jack," said John Hampson to his son, "I was once on the point of committing murder. It was when I was in the north of Ireland and I went into a room and found Mrs. Wesley foaming with fury. Her husband was on the floor, where she had been trailing him by the hair of his head, and she herself was still holding in her hand venerable locks which she had plucked out by the roots. I felt," continued Hampson, who was a giant of a man, though not one of Wesley's warmest friends—"I felt as though I could have knocked the soul out of her."—Everybody's Magazine.

Moorish Baths.

In Spain, while the Moors were in the ascendency, luxurious hot baths were established. They were used in connection with the religious rites of Islam. The Islamites were required to bathe frequently. The manner of bathing was as follows:

After undressing, the bather is wrapped in a woolen coat, sandals are put on and he walks to the hot bath. After a thorough hot bath all parts of the body are rubbed. The soles of the feet are rubbed with pumice stone, then the body is anointed with oil and sprinkled with perfumed powders.

When the Moors were driven out of Spain the first thing the people did was to destroy the Moorish bath houses. This was done because of religious prejudice against the Moors.

WINTERS PUZZLED NILES SWATTERS

The Locals Took a Brace in Fielding and Played Brilliant Ball, Reark Being the Star—Houser Had Great Luck.

Talk about Deacon Philippe, Pedagogue Leever, Rube Waddell and the rest of the slab stars of the league, but it must be remembered that our own Morg. Winters scintillates a little himself. Morg. added so much to the laurels he has previously won this season that he had to borrow the wheelbarrow in the club house to cart them home. Holding the hard hitting Niles bunch to seven hits, with only two of them in any one round, giving but one free pass and beating them to the tune of 5 to 4, is a feat, the record of which Morg. ought to paste in his scrap book to pore over in the years to come. It was his masterly pitching that made yesterday's victory possible.

Morg. made the premier swatters from Niles town look like a string of sausages and had it not been for a couple of wobbles in the opener, would have held them until the ninth without a run. That tally in the hoodoo inning was earned on two clean hits. Outside of Gibby's two messes in the first the only other miscue was a wild throw by Houser of Patterson's grounder in the third—quite a reversal of fielding from Thursday.

Manager Reark carried off the honors with a couple of sensational catches in middle field. After Glassburner had doubled in the second, with two down, Kommer hit a short liner to right center. It looked goood for a safety but the fleet footed Reark nailed it on a dead run. In the eighth he spoiled a long hit for Glassburner by taking his terrific line drive. Both of Reark's hits were timely, the first starting the batting rally in the fifth and the second scoring Heckathorn, who had found his old friend, Charley Crowe, for a terrific smash the first time he faced him. Big Heck failed to connect with Kommer's speedy ones.

Houser was also a star both with the willow and in the field. That smash of his in the fifth was as hard a center shot as has been seen here this season and with a fair amount of luck it would have been good for a homer. The leather traveled to left on a line, about 3 feet over Glassburner's head and struck the fence on the first bound. Glassburner's quick return held Houser at third and he was left there.

There was a noticeable difference in the fielding of the visitors their two bungles coming in rapid succession in the third, helping the locals to their first tally. Kommel, who did the twirling until his "baby act" and quit, had terrific speed and the best command of any south paw here this season. That drubbing he got in the fifth started his ill humor and when Umpire Davis' judgment on balls and strikes while Webb was up failed to please him, he took his marbles and sulked to the bench. This settled Kommer with the fans and when the veteran Charley Crowe went to the slab to finish the game he was lustily cheered.

Gibby made a mess of things in the opener and after it was over he was switched to left garden, Webb going to second and Houser to short, a wise move. Porter fanned for a starter but DeMoss hit safely. Patterson's grounder was foozled and DeMoss scooted on to third. Brown threw Patterson out at second on Ortlieb's grounder, while DeMoss was crossing the pan for the first tally of the game. Gibby made another fozzle on Murphy's bounder, a difficult chance, and recovered the sphere too late to nail him at first. Ortlieb tried for home and made it when Big Heck's throw to catch him got away. Murphy was caught napping off first for the third out.

The locals went out in order in their half and the second was unproductive of runs although Glassburner doubled with two hands down. Reark's great catch of Kommer's short liner spoiled their chances for a run.

Houser gave them another in the third on his wild throw of Patterson's grounder. He made a great stop but did not have time to straighten up for an accurate throw and the ball rolled past Heckathorn to the fence. Ortlieb's safety scored him.

Webb made the circuit in the third, getting a start when Nagel failed on his grounder. Webb tried to steal and Kreuger failed to hold Ortlieb's throw. Gibby placed a nice safety, good for two sacks, and Webb scored. Kommer fanned three men in this round.

There was an old time batting bee in the fifth that delighted the hearts of the fans, who were beginning to fear that Kommel was too deep a mystery to be solved. Reark led off with a clean one and Webb advanced, him with a sacrifice. Winters came to the rescue with a hit and Reark counted. Gibby helped Winters along with another clean rap and Houser met one squarely on the nose. The leather shot to left on a line and Houser sprinted around to third while Glassburner was pulling it out of the grass at the fence. Bennett could not bring him in.

When Webb came to the bat in the seventh Kommel showed himself to be a rank quitter, leaving the game after Umpire Davis had called four bad ones. He was roasted by his fellow players for showing the white feather but the small amount of coaxing he got failed to induce him to resume the game. Charley Crowe, who twirled Thursday's trying contest gamely went to the rubber. Emmerling helped Webb to second with a single but he was nailed at third on Gibby's grounder. Houser ended the round with a fly to Patterson.

Morg gave Porter a free pass in the eighth but he was caught off first and run down by Emmeruing, Winters, Houser and Heck. DeMoss followed with a hit but it went for naught as Patterson went out to Heck.

Heck faced Crowe for the first time in the eighth and found him just as easy as he did in the opener. He cracked out a pretty double and scored on Reark's two sacker.

That hoodoo inning, the ninth, looked dangerous again for a brief time. Ortlieb opened with a screecher and stopped at second. Murphy fanned out but Kreuger scored him with a shot good for two. The best Nagel could do was a grounder to Houser. A hit would have tied the score but Glassburner failed, popping up to Houser.

CURRENCY LEGISLATION NEEDED

Going to Be a Difficult Task to Frame a Financial Measure That Will Be Reasonably Satisfactory.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 15.—Senator Cullom and Comptroller Ridgely discussed the financial situation with the president with special reference to the necessity of currency legislation. Comptroller Ridgely talked over with the president some of the features of his annual report to congress. The opinion is expressed frankly that it is going to be a difficult task to frame a financial measure that will be reasonably satisfactory to the exponents of the various schemes for improving the currency system. Thus far practically the only proposition upon which nearly all seem to be agreed is that the proposed legislation should include a provision for the depositing of customs receipts in national banks.

Comptroller Ridgely is going to Pittsfield, Mass., for a few days' rest, while Senator Cullom will start for Chicago.

Secretary Hitchcock talked with the president about the Littauer-Lyon glove contract case, among other things, but said, before leaving for Washington that it would not be proper for him to discuss the matter for publication at this time.

Former Secretary of the Treasury John G. Carlisle, Dennis T. Flynn, for several years delegate from Oklahoma in the house of representatives; Bishop Frederick Z. Rooker, who until recently was secretary of the papal delegation in Washington and Edward Lauterbach of New York, called on the president.

General Robert Shaw Oliver, recently appointed assistant secretary of war, will take luncheon with the President. The visit will afford the president and Secretary Oliver opportunity to discuss some important details of the departmental work.

Go Prepared.

In preparing for your summer outing a little forethought may save you no end of trouble. Mr. John H. Manly, a dry goods merchant, of Bellville, R. I., while packing an outfit for camping a few weeks on Narragansett Bay, put in a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for emergency use. The second day in camp his little boy was taken with cramp colic. The first dose of this remedy gave relief and the second dose effected a cure. Think of the pain and suffering this boy would have had to endure without this remedy at hand to relieve him. Such cases often result fatally. For sale by Alvin H. Bulger.

The Ways of Boston.

The crooked streets of Boston are said to follow the old paths along which the early settlers of the place drove their cows to and from their pasture on the common. However true this may be, it is certain that many of the main streets of the old city proper mark geographic features, formerly of importance, but now almost entirely forgotten. Atlantic avenue follows closely the original shore line; Washington street preserves in its curves the old road along the narrow neck of land which was the only connection for a long time between the mainland and Boston peninsula, with its three hills, which gave the name Tremont; Causeway street represents the dam to the earliest tidal mill pond, and Beacon street, the "mill dam," was built later to hold back the waters of Back bay at high tide to be used for power at low tide; the curve of Park square gives the shore line of this Back bay, where the fathers and grandfathers of the present generation used to put on their skates to glide over the area now occupied by Trinity church and the Public library.—F. P. Gulliver in Journal of Geography.

GRAUSTARK

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

CHAPTER I.—Grenfall Lorry, a wealthy American globe trotter, stumbles into acquaintance with a charming foreign girl on the train from Denver to Washington. The pair are left behind when the fier stops for repairs in West Virginia. II.—Lorry wires ahead to hold the train. He and the unknown girl ride twenty miles at a tearing pace in a mountain coach. Lorry knows it is a dangerous ride. There is no love-making, but a near approach to it as the rolling stage tumbles the passengers about. III.—Lorry dines with the foreign party, consisting of Miss Guggenslocker, Uncle Caspar and Aunt Yvonne. They are natives of Graustark, a country Lorry had never heard of before. IV.—Lorry shows the foreigners the sights of Washington. They leave for New York to sail on the Kaiser Wilhelm. Miss Guggenslocker naively calls Lorry her "Ideal American" and invites him to come and see her at Edelweiss. V.—Wildly infatuated, Lorry hurries to New York. The name Guggenslocker is not on the steamer list. He sees the steamer off. Miss G. waves him a kiss from the deck. VI.—Lorry joins his old friend, Harry Anguish, an American artist in Paris. Graustark and its capital Edelweiss, are located by a guide book. The Americans get no trace of the Guggenslockers there. VII.—Lorry sees his charmer driving in a carriage with a beautiful companion of her own sex. He gets a glance of recognition, but the carriage rolls on, leaving the mystery unsolved. Later he receives a note at his hotel signed Sophia Guggenslocker, inviting him to visit her next day. VIII.—In the evening Lorry and Anguish ramble about the grounds of the castle where dwells the court of the princess of Graustark. They overhear a plot to abduct the princess and resolve to capture the plotters red handed. IX.—Following the conspirators, Lorry finds himself in a room he heard them designate as that of the princess. X.—Lorry tells the princess of the plot. Mutual recognition; she is Miss Guggenslocker. Dannox, the guard, is in the abduction plot. He fells Lorry with a terrible blow. Anguish to the rescue. XI.—Lorry quartered in the castle. The princess visits him, but forbids all talk of love. XII.—Graustark is bankrupt and owes the neighboring princedom of Axphain $30,000,000. The creditor demands cash or the cession of the richest districts of Graustark.

"Has she chosen the course she will pursue?" asked Lorry as the countess concluded her story. His face was turned away.

"She cannot decide. We have wept together over this dreadful, this horrible thing. You do not know what it means to all of us, Mr. Lorry. We love her, and there is not one in our land who would sacrifice her to save this territory. As for Gabriel, Graustark would kill her before she should go to him. Still she cannot let herself sacrifice those northern subjects when by a single act she can save them. You see, the princess has not forgotten that her father brought this war upon the people, and she feels it her duty to pay the penalty of his error, whatever the cost."

"Is there no other to whom she can turn—no other course?" asked Lorry.

"There is none who would assist us, bankrupt as we are. There is a question I want to ask, Mr. Lorry. Please look at me. Do not stare at the fountain all the time. Why have you come to Edelweiss?" She asked the question so boldly that his startled embarrassment was an unspoken confession. He calmed himself and hesitated long before answering, weighing his reply. She sat close beside him, her clear gray eyes reading him like a book.

"I came to see a Miss Guggenslocker," he answered at last.

"For what purpose? There must have been an urgent cause to bring you so far. You are not an American banker?"

"I had intended to ask her to be my wife," he said, knowing that secrecy was useless and seeing a faint hope.

"You did not find Miss Guggenslocker?"

"No; I have not found her."

"And are you going home disappointed, Mr. Lorry, because she is not here?"

"I leave the answer to your tender imagination."

There was a long pause.

"May I ask when you expect to leave Graustark?" she asked somewhat timidly.

"Why do you wish to know?" he asked in turn.

"Because I know how hopeless your quest has been. You have found Miss Guggenslocker, but she is held behind a wall so strong and impregnable that you cannot reach her with the question you came to ask. You have come to that wall, and now you must turn back. I have asked how soon?"

"Not until your princess bids me take up my load and go. You see, my lady, I love to sit beneath the shadow of the wall you describe. It will require a royal edict to compel me to abandon my position."

"You cannot expect the princess to drive you from her country, you who have done so much for her. You must go, Mr. Lorry, without her bidding."

"I must?"

"Yes, for your presence outside that wall may make the imprisonment all the more unendurable for the one your love cannot reach. Do you understand me?"

"Has the one behind the wall instructed you to say this to me?" he asked miserably.

"She has not. I do not know her heart, but I am a woman and have a woman's foresight. If you wish to be kind and good to her, go."

"You will not be so selfish and so cruel as to increase the horror of the wreck that is sure to come," she said, drawing back.

"You know, countess, of the life saving crews who draw from the wrecks of ships lives that were hopelessly lost. There is to be a wreck here. Is there to be a life saver? When the night is darkest, the sea wildest, when hope is gone, is not that the time when rescue is most precious? Tell me, you who know all there is of this approaching disaster."

"I cannot command you to leave Edelweiss. I can only tell you that you will have something to answer for if you stay," said the countess.

"Will you help me if I show to you that I can reach the wreck and save the one who clings to it despairingly?" he asked, smiling, suddenly calm and confident.

"Willingly, for I love the one who is going down in the sea. I have spoken to you seriously, though, and I trust you will not misunderstand me. I like you, and I like Mr. Anguish. You could stay here forever so far as I am concerned."

He thought long and intently over what she had said as he smoked his cigar on the great balcony that night. He saw in one moment the vast chasm between the man and the princess; in the next he laughed at the puny space.

Down on the promenade he could see the figures of men and women strolling in the moonlight. To his ears came the occasional laugh of a man, the silvery gurgle of a woman. The royal military band was playing in the stand near the edge of the great circle. There were gayety, comfort, charm and security about everything that came to his eyes and ears. Where was she? He had seen her in the afternoon and had talked with her, had walked with her. Their conversation had been bright, but of the commonplace kind. She had said nothing to indicate that she remembered the hour spent beside his couch a day or so before; he had uttered none of the words that struggled to rush from his lips—the questions, the pleadings, the vows. Where was she now? Not in that gay crowd below, for he had scanned every figure with the hawk's eye; closeted again, no doubt, with her ministers, wearying her tired brain, her brave heart into fatigue without rest.

Her court still trembled with the excitement of the daring attempt of the abductors and their swift punishment. Functionaries flocked to Edelweiss to inquire after the welfare of the princess, and indignation was at the highest pitch. There were theories innumerable as to the identity of the arch conspirator. Baron Dangloss was at sea completely. He cursed himself and everybody else for the hasty and ill timed execution of the hirelings. It was quite evident that the buzzing wonder and intense feeling of the people had for the moment driven out all thought of the coming day of judgment and its bitter atonement for all Graustark. Today the castle was full of the nobility, drawn to its walls by the news that had startled them beyond all expression. The police were at work, the military trembled with rage, the people clamored for the apprehension of the man who had been the instigator of this audacity. The general belief was that some brigand chief from the south had planned the great theft for the purpose of securing a fabulous ransom. Grenfall Lorry had an astonishing theory in his mind, and the more he thought it over the more firmly it was imbedded.

The warm, blue coils from the cigar wafted away into the night, carrying with them a myriad of tangled thoughts—of her, of Axphain, of the abductor, of himself, of everything. A light step on the stone floor of the shadowy balcony attracted his attention. He turned his head and saw the Princess Yetive. She was walking slowly toward the balustrade, not aware of his presence. There was no covering for the dark hair, no wrap about the white shoulders. She wore an exquisite gown of white, shimmering with the reflections from the moon that scaled the mountain top. She stood at the balustrade, her hands clasping a bouquet of red roses, her chin lifted, her eyes gazing toward the mountain's crest, the prettiest picture he had ever seen. The strange dizziness of love overpowered him. How long he reveled in the glory of the picture he knew not, for it was as if he looked from a dream. At last he saw her look down upon the roses, lift them slowly and drop them over the rail. They fell to the ground below. He thought he understood—the gift of a prince despised.

They were not twenty feet apart. He advanced to her side, his hat in one hand, his stick—the one that felled the Viennese—trembling in the other.

"I did not know you were here," she exclaimed in half frightened amazement. "I left my ladies inside."

He was standing beside her, looking down into the eyes.

"And I am richer because of your ignorance," he said softly. "I have seen a picture that shall never leave my memory—never! Its beauty enthralled, enraptured. Then I saw the drama of the roses. Ah, your highness, the crown is not always a mask."

"The roses were—were of no consequence," she faltered.

"I have heard how you stand between two suitors and that wretched treaty. My heart has ached to tell you how I pity you."

"It is not pity I need, but courage. Pity will not aid me in my duty, Mr. Lorry. It stands plainly before me, this duty, but I have not the courage to take it up and place it about my neck forever."

"You do not, cannot love this Lorenz?" he asked.

"Love him!" she cried. "Ach, I forget! You do not know him. Yet I shall doubtless be his wife." There was an eternity of despair in that low, steady voice.

"You shall not! I swear you shall not!"

"Oh, he is a prince! I must accept the offer that means salvation to Graustark. Why do you make it harder with torture which you think is kindness? Listen to me. Next week I am to give my answer. He will be here in this castle. My father brought this calamity upon Graustark; I must lift it from the people. What has my happiness to do with it?"

Her sudden strength silenced him, crushed him with the real awakening of helplessness. He stood beside her, looking up at the cold monastery, strangely conscious that she was gazing toward the same dizzy height.

"It looks so peaceful up there," she said at last.

"But so cold and cheerless," he added drearily. There was another long silence in which two hearts communed through the medium of that faraway sentinel. "They have not discovered a clew to the chief abductor, have they?" he asked in an effort to return to his proper sphere.

"Baron Dangloss believes he has a clew—a meager and unsatisfactory one, he admits—and today sent officers to Ganlook to investigate the actions of a strange man who was there last week, a man who styled himself the Count of Arabazon and who claimed to be of Vienna. Some Austrians had been hunting stags and bears in the north, however, and it is possible he is one of them." She spoke slowly, her eyes still bent on the home of the monks.

"Your highness, I have a theory, a bold and perhaps a criminal theory, but you will allow me to tell you why I am possessed of it. I am aware that there is a Prince Gabriel. It is my opinion that no Viennese is guilty, nor are the brigands to be accused of this masterpiece in crime. Have you thought how far a man may go to obtain his heart's desire?"

She looked at him instantly, her eyes wide with growing comprehension, the solution to the mystery darting into her mind like a flash.

"You mean"— she began, stopping as if afraid to voice the suspicion.

"That Prince Gabriel is the man who bought your guards and hired Geddos and Ostrom to carry you to the place where he could own you, whether you would or no," said Lorry.

"But he could never have forced me to marry him, and I should sooner or later have exposed him," she whispered argumentatively. "He could not expect me to be silent and submit to a marriage under such circumstances. He knows that I would denounce him even at the altar."

The prettiest picture he had ever seen.

"You do not appreciate my estimate of that gentleman."

"What is to become of me?" she almost sobbed in an anguish of fear. "I see now—I see plainly! It was Gabriel, and he would have done as you say." A shudder ran through her figure, and he tenderly whispered in her ear:

"The danger is past. He can do no more, your highness. Were I positive that he is the man—and I believe he is—I would hunt him down this night."

Her eyes closed happily under his gaze, her hand dropped timidly from his arm, and a sweet sense of security filled her soul.

"I am not afraid," she murmured.

"Because I am here?" he asked, bending nearer.

"Because God can bless with the same hand that punishes," she answered enigmatically, lifting her lashes again and looking into his eyes with a love at last unmasked. "He gives me a man to love and denies me happiness. He makes of me a woman, but he does not unmake me a princess. Through you he thwarts a villain; through you he crushes the innocent. More than ever, I thank you for coming into my life. You, and you alone, guided by the God who loves and despises me, saved me from Gabriel."

"I only ask"— he began eagerly, but she interrupted.

"You should not ask anything, for I have said I cannot pay. I owe to you all I have, but cannot pay the debt."

"I shall not again forget," he murmured.

"Tomorrow, if you like, I will take you over the castle and let you see the squalor in which I exist—my throneroom, my chapel, my banquet hall, my ballroom, my conservatory, my sepulcher. You may say it is wealth, but I shall call it poverty," she said.

"Tomorrow, if you will be so kind."

"Perhaps I may be poorer after I have saved Graustark," she said.

"I would to God I could save you from that!" he said.

"I would to God you could," she said. Her manner changed suddenly. She laughed gayly, turning a light face to his. "I hear your friend's laugh out there in the darkness. It is delightfully infectious."

CHAPTER XIV.

THE EPISODE OF THE THRONEROOM.

"THIS is the throneroom. Allode!" The Princess Yetive paused before two massive doors. It was the next afternoon, and she had already shown him the palace of a queen, the hovel of a pauper!

Through the afternoon not one word other than those which might have passed between good friends escaped the lips of either. He was all interest, she all graciousness. Allode, the sturdy guard, swung open the doors, drew the curtain and stood aside for them to pass. Into the quiet hall she led him, a princess in a gown of gray, a courtier in tweeds. Inside the doors he paused.

"And I thought you were Miss Guggenslocker," he said. She laughed with the glee of a child who has charmed and delighted through surprise.

"Am I not a feeble mite to sit on that throne and rule all that comes within its reach?" She directed his attention to the throne at the opposite end of the hall. "From its seat I calmly instruct gray haired statesmen, weigh their wisdom and pass upon it as if I were Demosthenes, challenge the evils that may drive monarchs mad and wonder if my crown is on straight."

"Let me be ambassador from the United States and kneel at the throne, your highness."

"I could not engage in a jest with the crown my ancestors wore, Mr. Lorry. It is sacred, thou thoughtless American. Come, we will draw nearer that you may see the beauty of the workmanship in that great old chair."

They stood at the base of the low, velveted stage on which stood the chair, with its high back, its massive arms and legs a-shimmer in the light from the lofty windows. It was of gold, inlaid with precious stones—diamonds, rubies, emeralds, sapphires and other wondrous jewels—a relic of ancient Graustark.

"I never sit in the center. Always at one side or the other, usually leaning my elbow on the arm. You see, the discussions are generally so long and dreary that I become fatigued. One time—I am ashamed to confess it—I went to sleep on the throne. That was long ago. I manage to keep awake very well of late. Do you like my throneroom?"

"And to think that it is yours!"

"It is this room that gives me the right to be hailed with 'Long live the princess!' Not with campaign yells and 'Hurrah for Yetive!' How does that sound? 'Hurrah for Yetive!'" She was laughing merrily.

"Don't say it! It sounds sacrilegious, revolting!"

"For over three years—since I was eighteen—I have been supreme in that chair. During the years of my reign prior to that time I sat there with my Uncle Caspar standing beside me. How often I begged him to sit down with me! There was so much room, and he certainly must have grown tired of standing. One time I cried because he frowned at me when I persisted in the presence of a great assemblage of nobles from Dawsbergen. It seems that it was a most important audience that I was granting, but I thought more of my uncle's tired old legs. I remember saying through my sobs of mortification that I would have him beheaded. You are to guess whether that startling threat created consternation or mirth."

"What a whimsical little princess you must have been, weeping and pouting and going to sleep!" he laughed. "And how sedate and wise you have become!"

"Thank you. How very nice you are. I have felt all along that some one would discern my effort to be dignified and sedate. They say I am wise and good and gracious, but that is to be expected. They said that of sovereigns as far back as the deluge, I've heard. Would you really like to see me in that old chair?" she asked.

"Ah, you are still a woman," he said, smiling at her pretty vanity. "Nothing could impress me more pleasantly."

She stepped carelessly and impulsively upon the royal platform, leaned against the arm of the throne, and with the charming blush of consciousness turned to him with the quickness of a guilty conscience, eager to hear his praise, but fearful lest he secretly condemned her conceit. His eyes were burning with the admiration that knows no defining, and his breath came quick and sharp through parted lips. He involuntarily placed a foot upon the bottom step, as if to spring to her side.

"You must not come up here!" she cried, shrinking back, her hands extended in fluttering remonstrance. "I cannot permit that at all!"

"I beg your pardon," he cried. "That is all the humble plebeian can say. That I may be more completely under this fairy spell, pray cast about yourself the robe of rank and take up the scepter. Perhaps I may fall upon my face."

"And hurt your head all over again," she said, laughing nervously. She hesitated for a moment, a perplexed frown crossing her brow. Then she jerked a rich robe from the back of the throne and placed it about her shoulders as only a woman can. Taking up the scepter, she stood before the great chair and, with a smile on her lips, held it above his head, saying softly:

"Graustark welcomes the American prince."

He sank to his knee before the real princess, kissed the hem of her robe and arose with face pallid. The chasm was now endless in its immensity. The princess gingerly seated herself on the throne, placed her elbow on the broad arm, her white chin in her hand, and tranquilly surveyed the voiceless American prince.

"You have not said 'Thank you,'" she said finally, her eyes wavering beneath his steady gaze.

"I am only thinking how easy it would be to cross the gulf that lies between us. With two movements of my body I can place it before you, with a third I can be sitting at your side. It is not so difficult after all," he said, hungrily eying the broad chair.

"No man, unless a prince, ever sat upon this throne," she said.

"You have called me a prince."

"Oh, I jested," she cried quickly, comprehending his intention. "I forbid you!"

Her command came too late, for he was beside her on the throne of Graustark! She sat perfectly rigid for a moment, intense fear in her eyes.

"Do you know what you have done?" she whispered miserably.

"Usurped the throne," he replied, assuming an ease and complacence he did not feel. Truly he was guilty of unprecedented presumption.

"You have desecrated—desecrated! Do you hear?" she went on, paying no attention to his remark.

"Peccavi. Ah, your highness, I delight in my sin! For once I am a power. I speak from the throne. You will not have me abdicate in the zenith of my glory? Be kind, most gracious one. Besides, did you not once cry because your uncle refused to sit with you? Had he been the possessor of a dangerous wound, as I am, and had he found himself so weak that he could stand no longer, I am sure he would have done as I have—sat down in preference to falling limp at your feet. You do not know how badly I am wounded," he pleaded, with the subtlest double meaning.

"Why should you wound me?" she asked plaintively. "You have no right to treat the throne I occupy as a subject for pranks and indignities. I did not believe you could be so—forgetful." There was a proud and pitiful resentment in her voice that brought him to his senses at once. He had defiled her throne. In shame and humiliation he cried:

"I am a fool, an ingrate! You have been too gentle with me. For this despicable act of mine I cannot ask pardon, and it would be beneath you to grant it. I have hurt you, and I can never atone. I forgot how sacred is your throne. Let me depart in disgrace." He stood erect as if to forsake the throne he had stained, but she, swayed by a complete reversal of feeling, timidly, pleadingly touched his arm.

"Stay! It is my throne, after all. I shall divide it, as well as the sin, with you. Sit down again, I beg of you. For a brief spell I would rule beside a man who is fit to be a king, but who is a desecrator. There can be no harm, and no one shall be the wiser for this sentimental departure from royal custom. We are children anyhow, mere children."

With an exclamation of delight he resumed his position beside her. His hand trembled as he took up hers to carry it to his lips. "We are children—playing with fire," he murmured, this ingrate, this fool!

She allowed her hand to lie limply in his, her head sinking to the back of the chair. When her hand was near his feverish lips, cool and white and trusting, he checked the upward progress. Slowly he raised his eyes to study her face, finding that hers were closed, the semblance of a smile touching her lips as if they were in a happy dream.

The lips! The lips! The lips! The madness of love rushed into his heart; the expectant hand was forgotten; his every hope and every desire measured itself against his discretion as he looked upon the tempting face. Could he kiss those lips but once his life would be complete.

With a start she opened her eyes, doubtless at the command of the masterful ones above. The eyes of blue met the eyes of gray in a short, sharp struggle, and the blue went down in surrender. His lips triumphed slowly, drawing closer and closer as if restrained and impelled by the same emotion—arrogant love.

"Open your eyes, darling," he whispered, and she obeyed. Then their lips met—her first kiss of love!

She trembled from head to foot, perfectly powerless beneath the spell. Again he kissed a princess on her throne. At this second kiss her eyes grew wide with terror, and she sprang from his side, standing before him like one bereft of reason.

"Oh, my God! What have you done?" she wailed. He staggered to his feet, dizzy with joy.

"Ha!" cried a gruff voice from the doorway, and the guilty ones whirled to look upon the witness to their blissful crime. Inside the curtains, with carbine leveled at the head of the American, stood Allode, the guard, his face distorted with rage. The princess screamed and leaped between Lorry and the threatening carbine.

"Allode!" she cried in frantic terror.

He angrily cried out something in his native tongue and she breathlessly, imploringly replied. Lorry did not understand their words, but he knew that she had saved him from death at the hand of her loyal, erring guard. Allode lowered his gun, bowed low and turned his back upon the throne.

"He—he would have killed you," she said tremulously, her face the picture of combined agony and relief. She remembered the blighting kisses and then the averted disaster.

RALPH CONNOR, NOVELIST.

How the Author of "Sky Pilot" Got His Nom de Plume.

The new Canadian writer Ralph Connor, whose books, "Black Rock" and "Sky Pilot," have placed him in the very front rank of Canadian story tellers, in private life is the Rev. Charles W. Gordon, a Presbyterian minister of Winnipeg.

Ralph Connor came of stolid Scottish stock. His father, the Rev. Daniel Gordon, went to Canada in the early forties, finally settling in the village of Glengarry, in the Indian lands, and there the author was born forty-three years ago. He was educated at Toronto university, subsequently taking a three years' course in theology at Knox college.

The nom de plume of Ralph Connor came to the Rev. Mr. Gordon in a rather curious way. He was discouraged over the appropriation that had been made by a certain missionary committee for work in the mining camps of western Canada. Disheartened, he went to the editor of the Westminster, a weekly published in Toronto. This editor, an old college mate, told him to wage his campaign for mission funds through his columns.

He wrote his first sketch. It is now the first chapter of "Black Rock." The editor was delighted with it, but what should the author be called? The signing of his real name at the time might have provoked criticism from the mission board. He telegraphed to Mr. Gordon asking what name should be signed.

Mr. Gordon received the telegram late in the evening, just as he was finishing a report to the missionary society. His eye lit upon the heading of it, which was abbreviated as follows: "Brit.-Can. Nor. West. Miss. Soc." The two syllables "Can" and "Nor" struck his fancy, and he telegraphed his reply, "Sign Cannor." By some slip of the telegraph operator the message reached Toronto, "Sign Connor." The editor prefixed the name Ralph, and so Ralph Connor was found.

Ralph Connor's books have been wonderfully successful, and his work as an author, so strangely begun, has brought substantial rewards as well as fame. Besides "Black Rock" and "Sky Pilot" he has written "The Man From Glengarry," "Glengarry School Days" and "Beyond the Marshes."

terms with several of the male members of the company. She attended the exhibitions each night, and when the engagement here was finished was well acquainted with a number of the showmen. It is thought she carried on a correspondence with some one of them after they left the city, and was to have received a letter the day before she disappeared.

Last Saturday Mabel visited her home in the country, but said never a word concerning her intention to leave East Liverpool. She told her mother that her employer had promised to raise her salary, and that she would return to her work on Monday morning. From that time until the present moment not a word has been received from her either by her own folks or at the boarding house in this city. Mrs. Geomo came to town yesterday on a matter of business, and as has been her custom always, called at the home of Mrs. Cunningham to see her daughter. She was dumbfounded and nearly fainted when informed that the girl had not been there since leaving over a week ago to visit her parents in the country. The distracted mother went directly home and reported the affair to her husband, who lost no time in acquainting the police with the circumstances.

It was thought the girl might have gone to Alliance to visit relatives named Brandon, but on account of the carnival episode the mose feasible theory was that she had deserted her family and friends and joined the show. No one seems to know where the carnival company has been exhibiting during the present week, but it is thought if this can be found out no difficulty will be encountered in locating the missing girl. A message was sent to Alliance this afternoon and an answer is expected this evening.

The entire eGomo family are heartbroken over the unforutnate occurrence, an dare leaving nothing undone with the aid of the police which will shed light upon the girl's whereabouts. The circumstances are particularly sad when it is known that an aged uncle to whom the girl was greatly attached, is lying at the point of death at the home of her parents, and is continually calling for her. The parents are hoping that the girl will be found at Alliance.

AN INJUNCTION SUIT OVER A STAIRWAY

May Interfre With the Construction of Columbiana's New Bank Building.

Lisbon, Aug. 15.—(Special)—Mrs. C. Deemer, of Columbiana, has filed a petition in court, asking a temporary injunction to restrain the First National bank of Columbiana from removing or interfereing with an outside stairway in the construction of a new brick block on which work has been started. Mrs. Meemer owns a frame building adjoining the bank company's premises, and the stairway is partly on the lot recently purchased by the bank.

The plaintiff says that about the year 1876 the owner of the lot now held by the banking company built a two story office building near the Deemer building, leaving just room enough for the stairway between the two structures, the stairway being constructed jointly by the owners of each building, the plaintiff furnishing two feet of the space, and the owner of the adjoining premises one foot and four inches. Mrs. Deemer says the stairway was used jointly from that time and that, relying on a continuance of the arrangement, she removed a stairway for the other side and erected a brick block in such a manner that the stairway cannot be replaced. She alleges that the proposed bank building will make the present stairway useless.

Joan C. Devine, of Alliance, has the contract for the new bank building, which, it is said, will cost nearly $30,000. Work on the foundation is under way.

JOHN STOVALL RELEASED FROM JAIL

Thought Mentally Sound Once More. His Derangement Due to Drink.

John Stovall, who has been an inmate of the city jail for several days, was released from custody today, and it is thought he has entirely recovered from his recent mental derangement. Stovall has been confined in a cell ever since last Tuesday afternoon when he was taken in charge by Officer Morris, who thought his actions peculiar. He was located on lower Fourth street, where he had started a little religious revival all by himself, and was in the midst of a fervent prayer.

For several days he was entirely unbalanced, and cut up many funny capers at the jail. He was not violent at any time, however, and Dr. Ogden pronounced his mental condition due entirely to the effects of strong drink. His nervous system had given completely out, and it required the strongest kind of medicine to restore him to anything like a normal state. Yesterday he had intervals of good sound reason He would be in the midst of a conversation, and all of a sudden would become as wild as an ape. This morning, however, his reason returned, and he was as bright as ever.

The authorities interested the township trustees in the unfortunate man's case several days ago, and it had been arranged to take him to the asylum this morning, but he was so much improved that the determination was reconsidered and he was given his liberty.

CITY RECORDER'S $12,000 SHORTAGE

Case of a Sistersville Official Accused of Embezzlement Is On Trial.

Sistersville, W. Va. August 15.—The case of J. H. Pine, former city recorder, who has been in jail for some time on a charge of embezzlement, came up at Middlebourne in the circuit court yesterday morning, but was continued on account of the jury not having been properly drawn. The judy adjourned as soon as possible after the plea of abatement had been passed upon and a new panel of jurors was drawn. This morning the case came up again for trial and the selection of the jury is being made. The case will now be tried and it is likely that some time will be consumed as all the civil business for the present term has been continued and only the misdemeanors will be tried. The case against Pine promises to be an interesting one. An expert accounting of his books showed that he was over $12,000 short in his accounts.

His method of extracting the money from the city collector was a unique one. He would have a number of small bills passed through council, and later take them to the city treasurer, raised several figures higher and have the check made out to himself, saying that he desired to send money orders to the people to whom the money was due. The name of one person appeared on the books so frequently that the city treasurer became suspicious and with the mayor made a superficial examination, sufficient to tell that Pine had worked a very slick scheme and had secured a large amount of money. He was then arrested and later an examination of his books made with the result mentioned. There are several charges against Pine and it is likely that he will be tried on all of them.

Chief of Police John Wyman and his force, who have been on the lookout for two members of the Jackson family since yesterday morning, have not succeeded in locating the men. It is said that one of the parties wanted got wind of the intention of the police and has departed for Sebring. It is thought the other one is in hiding some where about the city, and the police expect to capture him soon.

The Jacksons are suspected of being implicated in a number of depredations which have been committed in and about Chester within the past few weeks, and the farmers of that section are greatly exercised at the frequency with which the thefts are committed. Chickens, sheep and even calves have been stolen, and until recently no trace of the guilty parties could be obtained. Suspicion has at last pointed in the direction of the Jacksons, and an investigation will be made. Their actions are said to have been peculiar, and so noticeable has it become that the interested parties are sure to be prosecuted if they can be apprehended.

Councilman J. C. Cunningham, who is a heavy loser at the hands of the thieves, whoever they are, was at the mayor's office early yesterday morning, and enlisted Chief Wyman and Officer Dawson in the search. Mr. Cunningham and several other farmers residing in the neighborhood of Chester, have exhausted every effort to secure some clue upon which to work. They say the thefts are becoming more numerous and of greater importance every night and the state of affairs is becoming alarming. Mr. Cunningham lost several sheep, and it is likely he will prosecute the thieves without mercy if they can be found.

THE NOBLE RED MAN.

A careful study of the history of the early days of this region of country does away with several preconceived and very commonly accepted ideas. One of these is as to the primeval excellence of the Indian character. Once the red man of Cooper's novels was supposed to be the typical savage, but now we know much better than to believe that. If ever such Indians lived they were the exception rather than the rule. Another false notion, and one which obtains even to this day in many quarters, relates to the supposed superiority of the Indian to the white man in all matters pertaining to woodcraft and the outdoor life.

We have heard much about the untiring muscles and eagle-like eyes of the red-skinned scout. His hardihood, his bravery, his superhuman skill in following a trail, his bold defiance of the elements in winter or summer, his matchless worth as a hunter, and so on. To read what some have written one is led to think that in comparison the wisest and shrewdest white man was a booby and ignoramus. Nothing could be more misleading. In the first place, the much vaunted skill of the red man has always been largely overrated. He was of necessity a wise son of the forest, but never the supernatural being he has been said to be. In the second place, the white man has never as a rule shown himself in any sense inferior to the Indian in cunning of woodcraft.

The fact is that the white man, under similar conditions, has excelled the red man in his own chosen field. Give a typical frontiersman of other days the same chance for outdoor education which fell to the lot of the Indian and he never failed to outclass him. In endurance, skill and shrewdness he excelled every time. What was true in olden days is true now. The white man has spent many summers in the last 20 years and more in the regions where the red man still lives, and he knows full well, from much experience, that the white woodsmen are far the superiors of their red rivals. In every sense do they excel. The better stuff of which they are made makes them able to meet the lower race on its own ground and vanquish it. Study and observation have driven the halo of glory away from the Indian brow, and he is seen to be what he is—an inferior being. C. L. SMITH.

Appears to Have Flourished At An Alarming Rate For 25 Years—The Old Man, Who Was the Tool of Others, in Hiding and in Terror.

Columbus, August 15.—"Old Jack" Page, the man who in his eighteenth year made a confession which not only forms a chapter of the most interesting kind of criminal history running back for a quarter of a century, but which also resulted in the indictment of 25 more or less prominent citizens of Williams and Fulton counties, on charges of arson, dares not go back to the scene of many of his own and neighbors' crimes.

His life would be snuffed out almost as quickly as would that of Captain B. J. Ewen, should the witness in the feud cases of famous Breathitt county, Ky., appear upon the streets of his home city unguarded.

Page would encounter men not desperate by nature, but men now indifferent to the fate which has sent a dozen to state's prison and which will land others there before long.

Chief Deputy Fire State Marshal H. H. Hollenbeck, who, after the most painstaking and searching investigation, worked up the cases in Williams and Fulton counties, spent many days in close contact with Page, and though accustomed to man's criminal side, the fire marshal became much attached to the old fellow, and in accord with his promises to Page, when the confession was made, has been careful at all times to guard him from assassination.

Just now Page is on a farm near Chardon, where he is watched night and day. The precaution is not taken to prevent his escape but to protect his life.

Several of the men indicted as the result of Page's confession have threatened to kill him and one or two have boasted openly to the officials that they would shoot the old man if they had half a chance.

A report has been circulated that Page was kept on the farm of the fire marshal near Chardon. Deputy Hollenbeck would not deny this yesterday.

"I won't say on whose farm he is," was his only comment.

Property worth probably $150,000 destroyed in 25 years' time is the known record of the gang in the northwestern part of the state. Farmers, merchants and stockraisers, the best known men and church workers in the community, are included among those brought to trial by Deputy Hollenbeck, with the assistance of Deputy G. Fox, of Columbus, Walter Payne, of Toledo and H. R. Patchen, of Cleveland.

Though reduced to want, without clothing and food and refused aid by the men for whom he had made thousands of dollars, Page doubtless would have remained loyal until his death but for the persistent and skillful fire marshals.

He suffered long and much, yet his lips were sealed and the men who had fired not only their own homes and business houses, but the property of others, for the insurance money, for years worked with impunity and kept their heads as high as their fellow-citizens or neighboring farmers.

It is unlikely that the criminal annals of any state can show a parallel to conditions which have been unearthed in Ohio.

Page confessed to his own implication in over a score of fires in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. One of his fires was a $35,000 affair. Most of his fires were in West Unity and Alvordtown, Williams county. But Page was only a tool. H. B. Morrison, 54 years of age, the son of a banker at West Unity, a member of one of the oldest and most respected families in that section, was the ringleader. Morrison is now serving a ten-year sentence in the penitentiary here. For years he was a cattle buyer and farmer but after drinking heavily became a saloonkeeper. His wife and chillren are held in the highest esteem, just as Morrison, himself, was once.

Morrison was a contractor—that is, he contracted to fire buildings. For 30 years he was in this unique business. He often sub-let his contracts, the same as legitimate work is let out, and "Old Jack" Page usually secured the work, for he was hard up most of the time, and his prices were not high.

Page made thousands for Morrison, but when he went to Morrison less than a year ago and told him he had no money, hardly any place to live and agreed to eternal silence upon their crimes, Morrison coldly rejected the proposal and dared the old man to tell anything.

Though fifty-three indictments have been returned in Williams and Fulton counties, the end is not yet in sight, for through the confessions secured, other convictions are confidently expected, especially in Toledo.

Just a few days ago, Deputy Hollenbeck secured a confession from a Toledo man that he had hired an incendiary to burn his building many years ago. If this man is indicted, as he will unquestionably be, it will cause a sensation in Toledo, for the man is very well known, having held a public office.

DEMENTED WOMEN HAS LEFT HER HOME

Mrs. Henry Ehring, of Industry, Was Last Seen Walking Toward This City.

Mrs. Luella Ehring, wife of Henry Ehring, a well-to-do citizen of Industry, disappeared from her home Thursday morning while the family were engaged in eating breakfast, and has not been found. She is slightly demented and has on prior occasions disappeared in a similar manner. Neighbors saw her walking toward East Liverpool bareheaded. Recently she hid $100 and was unable to remember where she buried it. She had about $25 with her when she disappeared.

She is 42 years of age, dark complected, wears glasses and was last seen at Riverview. This is not the first time she has left home, but previous to this she has always been found with relatives. Her mind is worse affected at the present time, owing to the fact that she has hidden in the ground somewhere near her home twenty five-dollar gold pieces and has forgotten the place of hiding.

Anyone knowing of her whereabouts is requested to send word to Henry Ehring, Industry, or Attorney W. G. Mellon, Beaver.

SALINEVILLE

Salineville, August 14.—Rev. F. E. Dean, pastor of the U. P. church, accompanied by his wife, took the train Thursday morning for a visit to the home of his parents near Xenia. They will be absent about two weeks.

Mrs. William Dodds took the train Thursday for the campmeeting near Mt. Vernon.

An enjoyable time was had last Saturday afternoon at the home of aged Mrs. Isabella Dallas, on Cemetery hill, when a number of ladies of the missionary society of the U. P. church met with well filled baskets. The aged mother was delighted and all spent a pleasant afternoon at her beautiful home.

C. A. White and family have moved with their household goods to Lisbon, where Mr. White will take charge of the recorder's office in September. Salineville loses another good citizen.

The quarantine was lifted last Tuesday from the home of Nate Ware.

A traveling medicine man, tents and equippage, has been attracting large crowds.

Miss Aretta Haverfield, of Cadiz, after spending a few days in East Liverpool, with her friends, came here Saturday evening and was the guest of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Thompson, until Tuesday, when she took the train for Youngstown to visit Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Bunn, of that city.

The ball game Wednesday on the diamond between Youngstown and the local team resulted 13 to 3 in favor of Youngstown.

The funeral of Ralph Woodward, an aged pioneer citizen of this village, took place this week.

Mrs. R. T. Robins and children arrived here Thursday for a visit to her parents and other relatives.

MOULTRIE

Moultrie, August 15.—The roads are very dusty, and the farmers are in need of rain.

Quite a large crowd at the picnic held in Brooks' grove. The Minerva band deserves congratulations for the music furnished.

Prof. D. W. Crist intends threshing today.

Mrs. Etta Cool, daughter and son, of Alexandr, visited Mrs. Frank Willis Thursday.

Charles Edwards is still ill.

GUILTY OF MURDER

A Motion for a New Trial Has Been Heard—Charges Have Been Preferred Against a Juror for Attempting to Hang the Jury.

Cynthiana, Ky., Aug. 15.—Curtis Jett and Thomas White were found guilty of the murder of J. B. Marcum at Jackson, May 4, and sentenced for life. At their trial, held in Jackson, last month, one juror hung to the last on the question of guilt, and this time one juror hung the jury for 24 hours on the question of sentence. The first ballot was 11 to 1 for conviction of both defendants and the second was unanimous for both. The first ballot on the sentence was seven for death and five for life imprisonment. The seperate ballots on Jett's case stood 11 for hanging and one for life sentence, and this result was not changed in subsequent votes, Jasper King, a former deputy sheriff, voting alone until a compromise was reached for life sentence for both.

During the afternoon Judge Osborne heard the motion of the defense for a new trial. The grounds set forth consist of objections to evidence admitted for the commonwealth and rejected for the defense, and also to the ruling out of affidavits made by the defendants saying that a fair and impartial trial could not be had on account of the military display which inflamed the public mind.

Charges have been preferred against Juror Jasper King for attempting to hang the jury. King lives in this city, and was until two years ago a deputy sheriff of the county and a man who has been highly esteemed.

County Attorney Webster stated that he would bring the charges against King to the court's attention today.

No movements have been made as yet as to the retention of the soldiers, and Colonel Williams, the officer in command, said that the matter was in the hands of himself and Judge Osborne. The prisoners are still at the jail, guarded by soldiers.

BOARD OF VISITORS REPORTS

Satisfaction Is Expressed With the Conduct of the Academy Under Captain Brownson.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Recommendations of far-reaching importance to the future of the naval academy are contained in the annual report of the board of visitors of that institution which, by order of the acting secretary of the navy, was made public. The board recommends that candidates be admitted to Annapolis on certificates from certain schools approved by the academic board; that candidates be nominated a year in advance of the entrance examination; that graduation at the end of four years be final, relieving midshipmen of the necessity of returning for two years after graduation for further examination; that graduates be commissioned as soon as graduated; that the teaching force of the academy be increased in view of the recent great increase in numbers of midshipmen, and that a department of physical training be established, thereby placing this matter under the special supervision of a highly qualified expert.

The board regrets the expedient recently adopted of graduating the first class in February instead of in June, and recommends that the first class hereafter be permitted to carry its course to the normal conclusion.

Keen satisfaction is expressed by the board with the conduct of the academy under the superintendency of Captain Brownson. The suggestion is made that some continuity of existence be given the board of visitors.

Strikers Issue a Reply.

Cripple Creek, Col., Aug. 15.—The strike committee issued a reply to the mine owners' manifesto which declared their intention to reopen their mines and called upon the men to return to work. The reply says that the miners quit work for a principle and will not go back until ordered to do so by their officers. It adds: "Regarding the offers of protection of men who desire to return to work, no protection will be necessary, because the miners are law-abiding men and no trouble is anticipated."

Captain Pershing Reports.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Captain John H. Pershing, Fifteenth cavalry, who was in command for several years in the Moro country and made the last campaign against the chiefs, reported at the war department. He is a member of the general staff.

Public Land Withdrawn from Entry.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The commissioner of the general land office withdrew from entry 150,000 acres of public land in Northwestern Colorado, to be used in connection with the White River irrigation project.

Destructive Hail Storm.

Owensboro, Ky., Aug. 15.—A section of two miles square in Davis county was visited by a destructive hail storm. The damage to crops and property is estimated at over $50,000. Many acres of tobacco were ruined.

FEARFUL SCENES IN JAMAICA

Thousands Seek Shelter in the Buildings That Have Survived the Hurricane.

Kingston, Jamaica, Aug. 15.—There are heartrending scenes all over the eastern and northern portions of the island of Jamaica. At Port Antonio thousands of homeless and starving people have sought shelter in the old prison and the few other buildings which survived the hurricane. Those who could not be accommodated are cowering in the lee of ruined walls and dismantled piazzas. The railroad sheds and waiting rooms are filled with women and children. The merchants of the place are feeding the hungry to the best of their ability, but the majority are depending upon green, unripe bananas knocked down by the storm. The bananas are boiled in kerosene tins over open fires made from the debris of the destroyed buildings. This is their sole food supply and it will be exhausted in 9 or 10 days.

Similar conditions prevail at Annotta bay, Buff bay, Orange bay, Port Maria, Manchionwal, Morant bay, Bowden and other smaller seaports.

In the interior the distress is equally acute. Scarcely a peasant's home is standing. Even the dwellings of the planters, which are built of substantial stone, have been unroofed, with few exceptions.

The misery of the peasants' families is indescribable. Their homes and belongings have been literally blown away and they are contriving rude shelters from fallen trees, palm boughs and banana leaves. Owing to the continued unsettled weather with occasional torrential rains these shelters afford practically no protection.

It is now estimated that the loss on the island will reach $15,000,000.

Special Bulletin by Weather Bureau.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The following special bulletin was issued by the weather bureau: The tropical storm is still in the gulf of Mexico and apparently near the middle of western portion. Some slight indications of its presence have been afforded by sea swells that have been reported from Pensacola to Corpus Christi. No reports have been received from Yucatan, but the director of the Mexican Central observatory reports that the storm is apparently in the center of the gulf and moving toward the coast of Tamaulipas with diminishing intensity. Tamaulipas is the state directly south of the extreme southern portion of Texas. It is still considered dangerous for vessels to sail to or from west gulf ports, but safe on the east coast for vessels sailing eastward. Hurricane warnings have been ordered displayed on the Texas coast for dangerous winds southward and high winds on the coast.

May Visit Anthracite Region.

Wilkesbarre, Aug. 15.—Louis Hammerling, a well-known Republican politician and labor leader of this city, returned from Oyster Bay, where he saw President Roosevelt relative to having the latter attend the meeting of Republican clubs which will be held in this city next month. The president consented to see a committee representing the convention committee of arrangements at Oyster Bay on Wednesday next Aug. 19. It is said that President Roosevelt is greatly interested in the anthracite coal regions and is desirous of visiting this section of the state, and the committee feel confident that he will accept their invitation and make an address to the miners.

Counterfeiters' Den Raided.

Wheeling, Aug. 15.—Constable E. M. Hall and Prosecuting Attorney Rills raided a counterfeiters' den in Ritchie county, and while the counterfeiters were able to escape their moulds, ladles and metal pots fell into the hands of the officers. The mint was situated on a high, brushy ridge between Cornwallis and the Pleasant county line. The officers believe that they have broken in on a dangerous gang and are confident that the miscreants will shortly fall into their hands. They have been plying their nefarious trade for months and Ritchie county is full of the spurious coin.

Three Men Seriously Burned.

Pittsburg, Aug. 15.—Three men were seriously burned at the Edith furnace of the American Steel and Wire company, in Preble avenue, Allegheny, through the explosion of a "tap." They are: Patrick Hare, head furnaceman, of No. 3 Cross street, burned about the head, face and arms; Daniel McCarthy, helper, of No. 17 Furnace row, burned so severely about the head that he may be blinded; Michael Onick, helper, of Deer Lyn street, burned about the head and body.

Cornerstone to Be Blessed

Washington, Aug. 15.—The cornerstone of the new Dominican monastery on Bunker Hill road, in the suburbs of this city, is to be blessed on Sunday. The Most Rev. Archbishop Falconio, apostolic delegate, will perform the ceremony. The sermon will be preached by the Right Rev. William H. O'Connell, bishop of Portland, Me., formerly rector of the American college at Rome. Distinguished clergymen from all parts of the United States have signified their intention to be present.

Boodler Sentenced.

St. Louis, Aug. 15.—Harry A. Faulkner, former member of the house of delegates, who was convicted of perjury in connection with the suburban boodle deal, was sentenced in the criminal court to three years in the penitentiary. Immediately after Faulkner's attorneys took an appeal to the supreme court and Faulkner furnished bond in the sum of $10,000.

GENERAL ST. CLAIR'S DEFEAT

Attacked by Indians and His Army Suffers Terrible Loss.

SOLDIERS RESISTED BRAVELY

NEVER RECOVERED FROM BLOW

On the wall of the writer's library, in company with a number of other valuable relics, hangs an old rusty bayonet which lay for many years embedded in the soil at the site of St. Clair's ever memorable defeat at what is now known at Fort Recovery, in Darke county, O. Its browned blade is never looked upon without a thought of that terrible battle coming vividly to mind.

In 1790 General Harmar had gone out against the western Indians, but had met with a sad repulse. Then President Washington determined to send against them such an army and such a man as should insure victory, for the Ohio frontier was crowding up with settlers and they must be freed from the terror of the scalping knife. He selected his intimate friend, Major General Arthur St. Clair, a commander whose bravery and skill none could gainsay. To him the president committed this important command, taking extra pains to point out to him Harmar's mistakes and repeatedly cautioning him against their repetition.

Under these instructions St. Clair set to work on his first task, that of organizing his army, always the most difficult and disheartening of a commander's duties. In April, 1791, the general had begun this work, his headquarters being at Pittsburg. Levies of men, regular troops and militia were being forwarded to that place from several quarters, and arms and supplies were being gathered as rapidly as the slow-going officers charged with that duty could effect it. But this was far too slow to allow of the plans for the campaign being promptly carried out. The quartermaster's work was so poorly done that the army, which should have moved westward from Fort Washington, on the site of Cincinnati, whither it had moved in May, by the beginning of August, was kept waiting for several weeks. It then marched six miles to Fort Ludlow and remained till Sept. 17. As it was then 2,300 strong, not counting the militia, march was made to the Great Miami, where Fort Hamilton was built.

Then they proceeded 44 miles further, built Fort Jefferson, remained there till Oct. 24, and set out on the hard march through the forest. The object was to erect a fort on the present site of Fort Wayne, Ind., and from that as a center overawe the western tribes. The forward movement from Fort Jefferson had not gone many days when 300 militiamen, finding the life not to their liking, deserted and took the back track. Somewhere along the road were the supply trains, and St. Clair, fearing the deserters would confiscate them, halted and sent back his best organization, the First infantry, to convoy the provisions and if possible bring back the deserters. It was decided to build a fort here while waiting the return of the expedition. Nov. 4 was the day set for the beginning of this work, but the plan was never carried out, and for a good reason.

Early in the morning of that day the men were just being dismissed from parade when the Indians attacked the advanced militia post. The men gave way and ran back in confusion on the regular camp, throwing the main body into such great confusion that they never recovered from it while the conflict lasted. The hostile Indians were met with a heavy fire, which partially checked their onset, but they returned it with such terrible vigor that the whites soon saw that the field was lost. Nevertheless a brave and determined resistance was kept against the repeated and increasing effective attacks of the enemy for three hours. During this time the slaughter of St. Clair's men was awful. Especially heavy was the fatality among the officers, who were compelled by the lack of discipline among the men to expose themselves to an unusual degree in trying to save the day. Charge after charge was made, with some temporary signs of success, but the foe returned like horrets each time to the fray, and no definite advantage was gained.

At last, after three hours had elapsed, the redskins got in on two sides of the army at once and completely outflanked its position. Then a retreat was ordered. Pursuit was made by the victors for about four miles. Then the shattered little remnant of the once brave array kept up its sad flight unharrassed. The camp and the artillery were abandoned, and in the flight the despondent and terrorized troopers filled the road with their accoutrements. The retreat began at half-past 9 in the morning and at dark that evening the army reached Fort Jefferson, 27 miles away. Here was found the First regiment on its way back to the front, not having found either the deserters or the supplies.

When the news of this great disaster reached the east the chagrin and humiliation of the people were painful. Searching for a scapegoat, they fell on General St. Clair like a pack of wolves. From one end of the country to the other there arose a deafening and discordant clamor of abuse and venomous criticism. Seldom has it ever fallen to so excellent a man to be so shamefully attacked. The gross injustice of it all, added to the rankling bitterness of defeat, was a blow from which General St. Clair never rallied. From this moment his life was a darkened and sad one. Through it all he retained the confidence and esteem of Washington. Congress appointed a special committee which thoroughly investigated the disaster and fully exonorated the general from any blame. From this the secretary of war appealed and a second investigation affirmed the verdict of the first. The blame was laid on those whose delays in furnishing the army with supplies retarded its movements, and on the fault of sending out a commander on so dangerous a tour of service with so poorly disciplined and provided a force.

General St. Clair's conduct throughout the battle was brave in the extreme. He was an ideal commander, instructing, encouraging and leading his men. In everything he was alert and at his post, even though he was wasted with a painful disease. So ill was he that when all his four horses had been killed, if a poor old pack horse had not been provided for him he could not have left the stricken field unless his men had carried him.

What he did was also shared in by officers and men, but the enemy had the advantage, and they were too strong to be overcome. So defeat came—a defeat over which it is said that President Washington swore most intemperately when the disastrous news came. Owing to the lack of provisions the army left Fort Jefferson and continued the retreat back to Fort Washington. There the reports were sent in and the campaign was definitely and sadly abandoned. A brass cannon was found buried on the battlefield in 1830 and many other relics have been picked up, among them the old bayonet on my library wall.

GRAVE UNDER THEATER.

Workmen Come Across Remains of a Pioneer.

Workmen at the Grand opera house removal on Diamond street, Pittsburg, have found the headstone and grave of a pioneer buried there in 1834.

At a depth of three feet under the surface the diggers encountered a flat stone three feet long and one foot wide lying in a horizontal position and when the accumulated clay of many years had been removed from its surface it was found to be the headstone of a grave bearing the following inscription:

In Memory of
MARY M'DOWELL,
Died May 28, 1834, aged 78 years.

Previous to 1840 the present site of the Grand opera house was occupied by the Second Presbyterian church and in the rear was the cemetery of the congregation. The disastrous conflagration that swept over that section in 1845 consumed the church edifice and many of the surrounding buildings. The congregation did not rebuild, and the property was sold to Marshall Bros. The bodies were claimed by relatives or were removed by the church to Cust's cemetery, on Center avenue, near Fulton street.

PERMANENTLY CURED BY

Physicians and scientists throughout the world have long since pronounced drunkenness a disease of the nervous system, creating a morbid craving for a stimulant. Systems vary as to the kind of drink that will satisfy this craving—some want whiskey, others beer, wine, kimmel, etc., the use of which will eventually result in ruining the health and bringing on disease, in many cases ending in death.

"ORRINE" permanently removes the craving for liquor, restores the organs of the stomach to their natural condition and improves the appetite and digestion. It contains no injurious drugs of any description. "ORRINE" can be given without the patient's knowledge, if desired, in tea, coffee, water or milk. It requires no office or sanitarium treatment, but can be taken at home. We will refund the money if it fails to do all that is claimed for it.

Mr. E. T. Sims, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "Use my name as a twenty-year drunkard restored to manhood and health by 4 boxes of 'ORRINE.' It is a wonderful and marvelous cure for the drink habit."

The price of "ORRINE" is $1 per box, 6 boxes for $5. Mailed in plain, sealed wrapper, by ORRINE Co., 817 14th St., N. W., Washington, D. C. Interesting booklet (sealed) free on request. Sold and recommended by

ALCOHOL IN ALL LIQUID KIDNEY AND RHEUMATIC REMEDIES CONDEMNS THEM.

An ignorantly compounded remedy, containing alcohol, as nearly all kidney remedies do, will stimulate them so violently that an inflammation will be set up, and instead of being merely lazy the kidneys will become diseased. Alcohol congests the kidneys with blood and retards their activity.

There is no Alcohol in Nervan Tablets to interfere with the removal of all harmful sediment from the body. The Tablets soothe and heal the kidneys when they are irritated and inflamed. They cure the kidney diseases that make you dizzy, restless, sleepless and irritable; that make you pass water often during the day and night; that cause rheumatism, catarrh of the bladder, pain in the back, joints and muscles; that make your head ache and indigestion, stomach and liver trouble, and a sallow, yellow complexion.

Staying and Staging.

At the start in a long race, the advantage often appears to be with an outsider. But the race is won not in starting but in staying. The quality which wins is the staying power. It is so in the race of life.

Staying power, and the best of it, is the man with the best stomach. All physical strength is derived from food which is properly digested and assimilated. When the food eaten is only partly digested and assimilated there is a loss of nutrition which means a loss of strength and the general result is physical breakdown.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery gives strength and staying power, because it cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of the food eaten, and so strengthens the body naturally by the nutrition derived from food.

"I was troubled with indigestion for about two years," writes Wm. Bowker, Esq., of Juliaetta, Latah Co., Idaho. "I tried different doctors and remedies but to no avail, until I wrote to you and you told me what to do. I suffered with a pain in my stomach and left side and thought that it would kill me. Now I am glad to write this and let you know that I am all right. I can do my work now without pain and I don't have that tired feeling that I used to have. Five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets' cured me."

Accept no substitute for Golden Medical Discovery. There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are easy and pleasant to take. A most effective laxative.

EVERYBODY knows the remarkable medicinal value of cod liver oil, but few people can take the ordinary, nauseating kind.

Until Hagee's Cordial of Cod Liver Oil (with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda) was compounded, a really pleasant and palatable cod liver oil was unknown. The first taste of Hagee's Cordial will dispel all prejudice.

The Ethics of Fiction

By ANNE FITZHUGH MACLEAN

V.—The Predominance of the Love Motive.

It is hard to speak of the methods of novelists without referring, at least by suggestion, on almost every point, to William Dean Howells, who has either said everything or contradicted everything. And so just is his mind in criticism and so admirable his achievement in novel writing that it is not possible to speak without deference of principles which have so well stood the test of practical application even when agreement with them seems impossible.

William Dean Howells.

certainly appears to the ordinary observer of life that it is Mr. Howells, and not the novelists he derides, who is mistaken. He has said many times in different ways what he long ago put into the mouth of one of his personages in "Silas Lapham," that "the whole business of love and lovemaking and marrying is painted by the novelists in monstrous disproportion to life," meaning, in effect, that love is one of many equal interests in a man's life or is itself a subordinate interest. I believe that we might leave fiction out of the question and consider only authentic biography and yet easily refute this doctrine. Whether or not love and marriage ought to be of unsurpassed importance in adult life up to this time, they have so proved. The extravagances of imaginary lovers have never exceeded the extravagances of real lovers and are just as extreme with the highest type of man as with the lowest. Indeed, it might be proved that, in spite of exceptional cases, the finer the intellect the deeper the affections and that men of destiny are those most vitally influenced by passion.

The tragedies of the heart—crime, suicide, the throwing away of a career—darken the course of history, not so much as they darken the course of fiction, but they do so as undeniably. Against the fact that their dramatic value has overemphasized them in literature we may set the fact that but a small proportion of such occurrences in real life reaches our knowledge. We may have a lifetime's acquaintance with a man without being able to gauge the effect of his love experience upon his fate or character.

So, too, the current of a happy love, a fitting mating, decides the channel of the life of many a one without the outsider perceiving that the current

William Makepeace Thackeray.

has been diverted from its course. Marriage alone cannot make, but it may aid in making and can most surely mar, a man's career.

With regard to women this is universally admitted, and it is true of the other sex frequently enough to justify novelists in making love the dominant note. Besides, what fundamentally affects all wives and mothers can be of hardly less fundamental importance to those whose lives are inextricably interwoven with theirs. Often in tradition has the world's history been changed by the charms of a woman. How much oftener than comes to common knowledge is a nation's ruler himself ruled by a wife or mistress? It is out reasonable that that upon which depends the perpetuation of the human race—the attraction of man for woman and woman for man—should be divinely created a force second to none in impelling power. Such a force once operating must alter the destiny of him whom it impels. He who lacks it lacks a vital element; he who resists or overcomes it by his will has by that very effort modified his character.

The novelist's further justification in this matter is the persistency of interest that the world shows in this most ancient of themes. In the face of the innumerable love stories already existing the writer who can tell a new one, if only fairly, has as eager an audience as if his were the first love story ever told. All the world loves a lover as much as ever, and there are no signs of diminution in this love.

Subjects for novels have multiplied exceedingly. We have the "novel of manners," depicting ordinary social life, with love only incidental, as it usually appears to us in the lives of others; the controversial, the socialistic, the humorous, the historical, where love is merely decorative; we have Wall street as a topic, industrial conditions and every phase of modern complex life. Of all these none has supplanted the pure romance in popular affection or weakened the power of the story of loyal love. A modern of the moderns, a man of affairs in the forefront of practical life, found he had touched a common and responsive chord in the apparent extravagance of these four little lines:

Not from the whole wide world I chose thee,
Sweetheart, light of the land and sea;
The whole wide world could not inclose thee,
For thou art the whole wide world to me.

The excellent things said by the masters of literature on the subject of love alone would indeed make a considerable library. Few are even the prose writers who have not touched upon it. Of the harm that has been wrought by low and immoral presentations of this most important subject and by false and morbid treatment, not less than by the intentionally licentious, no estimate could approach the truth. In this, as in all other ethical aspects of fiction, there must come an elevation in the public mind before any but the greatest masters can, lacking the seer's foresight, place love in its right relation to the other elements of character.

Already the love story has taken one long step in the recognition of wedded love as the ideal and highest type. No more does it break off abruptly at the altar, for of necessity no more is love after marriage regarded as less interesting and less dramatic than the frenzied ardor of immature youths and maidens.

Thackeray reached no higher point in his art than in one little scene between a pair—John Sedley and his wife—whose love had endured through a lifetime. The old man is in anguished fear of the effect upon his wife of the announcement that he has brought her in her age to poverty. "As he spoke he trembled in every limb and almost fell. He thought the news would have overpowered his wife—his wife, to whom he had never said a hard word. But it was he that was the most moved, sudden as the shock was to her.

"When he sank back into his seat, it was his wife that took the office of consoler. She took his trembling hand and kissed it and put it around her neck. She called him her John, her dear John, her old man, her kind old man. She poured out a hundred words of incoherent love and tenderness. Her faithful voice and simple caresses wrought this sad heart up to an inexpressible delight and anguish and cheered and solaced his overburdened soul."

One such wife in fiction means many such wives in real life, and can it be thought that John Sedley ever in his life made a more important decision than between marrying or not marrying that woman?

The love letters of Victor Hugo afford an interesting instance of how a man full of the consciousness of genius, burning to his finger tips with the vital force that was to spend itself in achievement, felt this and all else within him subordinated to his love.

"I am often told," he says, to quote one of many similar passages, "that I am to achieve a dazzling reputation. [I repeat this hyperbole in its exact words.] For my own part I care only for domestic happiness. I have no hope or desire to give to anything but you. * * * Love is the only feeling that cannot be exaggerated. * * * If to obtain you sooner all that was necessary was to abandon the projects and dreams of my whole life, I should undertake it joyfully, my Adele."

Whether or not he would have repented later had he been taken at his word might well be inquired into. The sacrifice was not demanded. Both the wife of his choice and the career of his appointed destiny were his. But no reader of his letters can doubt his sincerity in all that he professed.

Love predominates in fiction because it predominates in life. Evanescent passion, unrequited affection, the piteous, self blinded devotion that worships at a shrine whose idol inevitably falls to dust and ruin, immortal love—alas, too rare—in one form or another the master passion comes to all and to each, whether he recognizes it or not, and "life is never the same again."

Miss Paine's Experience.

"I want to thank you for what you have done for me, and recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all girls whose work keeps them standing on their feet in the store. The doctor said I must stop work; he did not seem to realize that a girl cannot afford to stop working. My back ached, my appetite was poor, I could not sleep, and menstruation was scanty and very painful. One day when suffering I commenced to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and found that it helped me. I continued its use, and soon found that my menstrual periods were free from pain and natural; everyone is surprised at the change in me, and I am well, and cannot be too grateful for what you have done for me."—MISS JANET PAINE, 530 West 125th St., New York City.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

DUN'S TRADE REVIEW

There Is Hesitation In Certain Branches of the Iron and Steel Industry, Incident to the Season and Labor Controversies.

New York, Aug. 15.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Earnings of railways for August thus far show an average gain of 7.7 per cent over last year's figures and 16.3 per cent compared with 1901. Distribution of merchandise is very heavy, more interruption to traffic being recorded, and in staple lines prices are steady. Preparations for fall trade are vigorous, many manufacturers working overtime to fill important orders. Collections are fully as prompt as usual for the season, although in some lines there is less inclination to discount bills. Crop news is reassuring. Foreign trade at this port for the last week showed a loss of $1,461,049 in exports as compared with the same week last year, and imports decreased $2,127,575.

Hesitation in certain branches of the iron and steel industry, incident to the season and aggravated by labor controversies, is indicated with some degree of definiteness by the monthly statistics just published by the Iron Age. A vast amount of business is being done, but there is no indication to anticipate requirements of the future beyond contracts already placed. The week has brought no developments in the price situation, but there is a steady gain in purchases of pig iron, although the meeting of the leading concern's committee to fail to decide upon placing new contracts was a disappointment to some prospective sellers.

Agricultural implements and machinery manufacturers have secured a further large tonnage of material. Merchant steel and pipe show improved demand, but in plates and structural material the waiting tendency is still dominant.

Failures this week numbered 174 in the United States, against 196 last year, and in Canada 22, compared with 21 a year ago.

Terrible Mine Disaster.

Rome, Aug. 15.—A horrible disaster has occurred in the sulphur mine near Caltanissetta, Sicily. Gas in the mine became ignited and obstructed the exit of a hundred miners. The mine boss directed all the employes to save themselves if they could, while he with five others bravely remained on the spot in order to try to extinguish the fire. Three of the miners have died and many others, although they succeeded in reaching the open air, are horribly burned and maimed. The mine boss and his five companions found an unused exit and escaped, but their condition is desperate.

Be it resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio:

SECTION 1. That a proposition shall be submitted to the electors of this state, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, A. D. 1903, to amend section 16, of article II, of the constitution of the state of Ohio, so that it shall read as follows:

If he object he shall not sign and shall return said bill, together with his objections thereto in writing, to the house wherein said bill originated, which house shall enter at large upon its journal said objection and shall proceed to reconsider said bill. If, after said reconsideration, at least two-thirds of the members elect of that house vote to repass said bill it shall be sent, together with said objection, to the other house, which shall enter at large upon its journal said objection and shall proceed to reconsider said bill. If, after said reconsideration, at least two-thirds of the members-elect of that house vote to pass said bill it shall be law, otherwise it shall not be law. If any bill passed by both houses of the general assembly and presented to the governor is not signed and is not returned to the house wherein it originated and within ten days after being so presented, exclusive of Sunday and the day said bill was presented, said bill shall be law as in like manner as if signed, unless final adjournment of the general assembly prevents such return in which case shall be law, unless objected to by the governor and filed, together with his objection thereto in writing, by him in the office of the secretary of state within the prescribed ten days; and the secretary of state shall at once make public said fact and shall return said bill, together with said objection, upon the opening of the next following session of the general assembly, to the house wherein said bill originated, where it shall be treated in like manner as if returned within the prescribed ten days.

If any bill passed by both houses of the general assembly and presented to the governor contains two or more sections, or two or more items of appropriation of money, he may object to one or more of said sections or to one or more of said items of appropriation of money, and approve the other portion of said bill, in which case said approved portion may be signed and then shall be law; and such section or sections item or items of appropriation of money objected to shall be returned within the time and in the manner prescribed for, and shall be separately reconsidered as in the case of, a whole bill; but if final adjournment of the general assembly prevents such return the governor shall file said section or sections, item or items of appropriation of money, together with his objection thereto in writing, with the secretary of state as in the case of a whole bill, and the secretary of state shall then make public said fact, but shall not further act as in the case of a whole bill."

The King Snake's Prowess.

The most relentless exterminator of reptiles is a member of the family itself—the beautiful, lithe, yellow and black king snake, the friend of man and the avowed enemy of anything that creeps or crawls regardless of size or poison fang. A native of our own south, the king snake is between five and eight feet long and no thicker around than a man's thumb. Built in every muscle and bone for speed and tremendous constricting power, there is not another snake on earth that can withstand his assault. He is immune to the poison of the cobra and of the rattler alike, and the strength of a thirty foot python has no terrors for him. Within five minutes from the opening of the fight the king snake could kill the biggest python that ever lived. Ferocious as the little constrictor is toward his own kind, toward man he is friendly and rarely tries to escape when met afield.—A. W. Roker in McClure's.

Wounds of the Heart.

In wounds of the heart itself the escape of blood is never in large quantity, and the lethal consequences are due to the fact that the escape of blood from within its cavity or cavities into the surrounding sac of the pericardium mechanically interrupts the alternate contraction and expansion by which its pumping action is maintained. Accordingly the results of the wound of the heart are usually identical with those of gradual suffocation.—American Medicine.

JEFFRIES THE WINNER

The End Came Shortly After the Beginning of the Tenth Round, When Jeffries Planted One of His Terrific Swings on Corbett's Stomach.

Mechanics' Pavilion, San Francisco, Aug. 15.—James J. Jeffries, champion heavyweight of the world, played with Jim Corbett for nine rounds and a half and then Corbett's seconds motioned to Referee Graney to stop the fight in order to save their man from needless punishment. The end came shortly after the beginning of the tenth round, when Jeffries planted one of his terrific left swings on Corbett's stomach. The man who conquered John L. Sullivan dropped to the floor in agony and the memorable scene at Carson City, when Bob Fitzsimmons landed his solar plexus blow was almost duplicated. This time, however, Corbett struggled to his feet and again faced his gigantic adversary. With hardly a moment's hesitation Jeffries swung his right and again landed on Corbett's stomach. Jim dropped to the floor, and then it was that Tommy Ryan, seeing that it was all over, motioned to Referee Graney to stop the punishment.

The fight demonstrated beyond all doubt that Jeffries stands alone in his class. He showed remarkable improvement in both speed and skill. Corbett, during the first part of the fight, was almost outpointed and the few blows he landed on Jeffries were apparently without sting. Jeffries was never in better condition. He looked lighter than usual and the way he moved about on his feet and the frequency with which he countered Corbett's leads astonished everybody. Corbett, in comparison with the big man opposed to him, looked very light but was really heavier than ever before. He seemed to have lost some of his old-time speed and skill during the early part of the fight, but this may have been due to Jeffries' marvelous improvement. Corbett's physical condition appeared to be all that he claimed for it. He stood many of Jeffries' terrific blows without wincing and came back swinging left and right and landing frequently, but his blows hardly stung Jeffries. Jeffries was not only stronger, faster and cleverer than ever before, but he used his head to better purpose, and although Corbett hit him hard enough to hurt an ordinary man, Jeffries bored right in without noticing the blows and delivered telling hits that materially helped in deciding the result of the fight.

At first Corbett was very cautious and apparently was outpointed by Jeffries, but later in the fight he warmed up and showed some of his old-time cleverness. From the first, however, it was generally regarded as a hopeless case for Corbett. He made a gallant fight, but he never stood a show to win.

After the fight was over Corbett quickly recovered, walked over to Jeffries and shook him warmly by the hand. He said:

Two General Orders Will Be Issued by General Young as Chief of Staff of the Army.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Two general orders will be issued by General Young as chief of staff of the army under the new law. The first states that in compliance with the instructions of the president, he, General Young, relinquishes command of the army and assumes the duties of chief of staff.

The second order announces the assignment of officers of the general staff as follows: Assistants to the chief of staff, Major General Henry C. Corbin, adjutant general; Brigadier General William H. Carter; Brigadier General Wallace F. Randolph, chief of artillery. The officers named will perform such duties as may be assigned them under the law by the chief of staff.

War college board: Brigadier General Tasker H. Bliss, president; Colonel Alexander Mackenzie, corps of engineers, general staff, and Major William D. Beach, Tenth cavalry, general staff, directors.

Colonel William P. Hall, assistant adjutant general, is designated acting adjutant general of the assembly.

Heretofore all army orders have been issued from the headquarters of the army adjutant general's office, by command of lieutenant general, but signed by the adjutant general. Hereafter orders will be issued direct from the war department, signed by the chief of staff and inscribed, "Official, W. P. Hall, acting adjutant general."

As assistant chief of staff General Corbin will perform much the same duties that have come under his direction hertofore.

Head-on Collision.

Wheeling, Aug. 15.—The accommodation passenger train from Pittsburg, on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, due here at 1:30 p. m., and a freight train met in a head-on collision near the Peninsular tunnel. The engine of the freight was almost completely demolished and the front of the passenger engine smashed in. Three freight cars were hurled over an embankment. Engineer Davis, of the freight, sustained a broken leg, while the two firemen had arms broken in the jump for safety. Several passengers were considerably shaken up and bruised, but were not otherwise injured. A serious wreck occurred on the Ohio River division of the Baltimore and Ohio at Glendale, when a freight train and an engine met in a rear-end collision, caused by a confusion of orders. Two cars and a caboose were demolished. No one was injured.

Body Identified.

New York, Aug. 15.—Simon Kuhn and William H. McGuire, members of the Royal Arcanum, of Allegheny City, Pa., called at the morgue and identified the body of the man found in the Hudson river Wednesday morning as that of Adolph J. Gerl, the missing treasurer of the Royal Arcanum lodge in Allegheny City. Gerl's body was found in the river with a knotted handkerchief tightly bound about the neck. There were two deep abrasions over the eyes and a wound in the back of the head, which was at first thought to be a bullet wound.

World's Record Broken.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Dick Welles broke the world's record for a mile on a circular track at Harlem, going the distance in 1:37 in a match race against Grand Opera.

Three Curious Epitaphs.

In a cemetery near Dublin the following words appear on a tombstone:

"Here lies John Hurley, whose father and mother died while on their way home from America. If they had lived they would have been buried here."

The following epitaph adorns the tomb of a gravedigger in the Taibach cemetery in the south of Wales:

"Hurrah, comrades, parson is dead! If he had lived he would have buried all of us."

Here is another curious epitaph which was recently discovered; it marks the grave of an indefatigable smoker and contains only the following four words:

SOME OF THE CURED

The Jno. J. Fulton Co. of San Francisco, First in the World to Announce the Cure of Bright's Disease and Diabetes, presenting a Definite Percentage of Recoveries (87%) and Giving Out Lists of the Cured.

Here are some of the San Francisco recoveries, and all of them declared by physicians to be incurable: N. W. Spaulding, President Spaulding Saw Co.; Adolph Weske, founder Cal. Cracker Co.; Carl D. Zelle, pioneer druggist; Chas. Engelke, editor San Francisco Journal; R. M. Wood, editor Spirit Review; Edward Short, of the Call; C. A. Newton, yardmaster S. P. Co. (Sacramento); Jno. A. Phelps, Hotel Repeller; Mrs. M. Empey, 130 Steiner St.; Mrs. S. E. Cline, 1737 Broadway; Mrs. P. Goyheneix, 928 Filmore St. (tapped 38 times); R. C. Pell, Manager Pacific Coast Biscuit Co.; F. J. Bachelder, Pacific Coast Agt. Seth Thomas Clock Co.; E. B. Cutler, Attorney, 230 Pine St.; Wm. Hale, Real Estate, 215 Sansome; Mrs. C. C. Matthewson, Proprietor Hotel Clifton; Thos. Haskens, Merchant (Petaluma); Col. Wm. Hawkins, U. S. Quartermaster's Department; Chas. F. Wacker, Merchant, 181 6th St.; Mrs. Thos. Christol, 426 27th St.; and hundreds of others. Some were at death's door when put on the compounds, but many such recovered. That many were in extremis may be learned from this. Some recovered who had been tapped dozens of times; others were already in the twitchings of uraemic poisoning; many had from four to six physicians confirm the fatal diagnosis; several left standard hospitals in extremis; several had relatives called in for last interviews, and a few recovered who were in a state of absolute coma.

In a word about 87% of all cases of Bright's Disease and Diabetes, heretofore positively incurable, are now curable under the new Fulton Compounds. The Renal Compound for Bright's and Kidney Disease is $1; for Diabetes, $1.50. Pamphlet free. We have just established a depot in your city where you will find the Compounds and pamphlets, viz:

THE OLD-TIME STAGE COACH

GENERALLY GREETED BY CROWD

In the old colonial days the chief event of the day at the wayside inn or country village tavern was the arrival of the coach. This lumbering but vastly important vehicle was the shuttle in the loom of colonial life, which by its ceaseless going to and fro wove the many different threads into a harmonious whole. It usually was pulled by four or six horses, and there were some difficult roads, or some extra vain coachman, who plied the lines over the backs of four pairs of finely matched steeds. In the country tavern a crowd always gathered as the time drew near for the coach to arrive. As time was the most plentiful and least costly article these old colonists had, they generally got to the tavern early. The time was easily spent in such gossip as is usually the rule in the rural assembly place. After a while some urchin or overwatchful lounger, who had kept his eye on the long brown ribbon of road running in from the forest on the hill yonder, would with great importance cry out:

Then a cloud of dust would be seen, a rumbling sound heard and the occasional blare of a horn. At length the dust clouds would give up the outlines of galloping steeds, a charioteer using his whip with pistol-like snaps, a trumpeter blowing like the warder of an ancient castle, a heavy, clumsy coach with passengers and baggage. On this great vehicle would roll till, with a skill of which he was justly proud, the driver would bring it to a stop just where mine host could with many words and bows welcome his prospective customers. The driver would throw down the lines and leisurely descend, too great a personage by far to give any attention to the care of the teams or the changing of them. His was as high a place in the scale as is that of the captain of a modern ocean greyhound.

The coach always brought the letters and the papers. These were few, but relatively of so much the greater importance. Immediately a group of eager idlers would surround one who had the latest paper in the tavern taproom, and that paper would furnish the occasion for many a wise and solemn, and sometimes boisterous, discussion over topics of grave public import. Meanwhile mine host was doing everything in his power to make his guests feel at home. He was always striving to build up the reputation of his hostelry. In those days quality counted much. If from the coach descended those whom the quick eye of the landlord discerned as being of the "quality," his face always beamed the brighter and his bow was the more profound. There were then in America distinctions which in this industrial domestic age go for nothing at all. To the ladies and gentlemen the finest the tavern could afford was always offered.

While all this was going on the axles had been greased, the horses watered, or perhaps a new set of animals had been provided, the mails had been changed, the transient guests had been fed and had finished their cups of toddy. When all was in readiness that grand mogul of all, the driver, came out calmly and with conscious dignity, the center of all observing, took his place on the box. Then away, amid cheers and dust, passed the coach, and the village settled down again to its wonted quiet and neighborhood gossip. The great event of the day was over. And gone now forever are those days. C. L. SMITH.

TOMAHAWK RIGHTS.

In different ages and countries the laws relating to the acquiring and holding of land vary to an astonishing degree. In the same country the customs change very much, according to the exigencies of the generation. The purchaser of a tract of land in this region today who cares to trace back to the beginning the title by which he is to hold the property will often run across some very curious facts. The original settlers got possession of their lands in a variety of ways, more or less able to stand close scrutiny.

But those first years were times of rough and unusual methods of living, and often the law which prevailed was the law of possession and the might requisite to hold on undisturbed.

Many of the most valuable lands today were originally taken by what was known as "tomahawk rights." An immigrant, finding a piece of good land on which he would like to settle, would find the best spring of water on his intended tract. He would blaze the trees around this spring and then on various notable trees over the whole tract he would cut his initials. This did not definitely mark out his intended farm, but it gave him possession, a right which was rarely violated except by murder or some equally heinous method, a rare occurrence. New settlers coming to the spring would see the blazing and after drinking would pass on. Once improved, the title was perfect, and stands today. C. L. SMITH.
